UNCLE SAM GETS

AFTER RACKETEERS

The word "racketeer" is a comparatively new one, but the thing itself is as old as any other form of robbery. The racketeer preys upon legitimate business by threats of damage to life or property if his demands for tribute are not met. He levies an illegal tax upon the privilege of doing business.

In the big cities the racketeer who sets fire to a store whose owner has refused to pay for "protection" is usually organized in gangs, and so far police and citizens organizations have been powerless to curb him. Few men will risk their lives for the sake of their dollars, and enough business men have been murdered by racketeers to make others fearful of resisting their demands.

The Federal Government is taking steps to curb some forms of racketeering, which can be reached by Federal laws and agencies. Every shipper of farm products to the larger markets is a potential victim of the racketeers who prey upon the commission houses and dealers. The Federal laws requiring every commission merchant handling perishable foods in interstate commerce to have a Federal license, and giving shippers a remedy in the Federal courts if they do not obtain the proceeds from the sale of their shipments, have already had a wholesome effect in putting many crooked commission houses out of business, or holding them to the straight and narrow path.

Now the Government proposes to follow this up by making it a Federal offense to interfere with interstate shipments in any way. The gangs which demand that their friends and they alone shall have the privilege of unloading and trucking produce at certain terminals, and who beat up and sometimes kill those not members of their gangs who try to handle produce at terminal markets, would come under the inhibitions of this law.

Every move which will reduce the toll taken by middlemen between producer and consumer is a good move. And when that toll is an illegitimate one, as in the case of the racketeer, it is essential to the welfare of the nation that it be eliminated.

TWO GREAT MEN

There will be few who will scoff at the award of the prize of $10,000 for the greatest "current achievement in the field of science" to the two eminent medical men who discovered the cure for pernicious anemia. Only three years ago physicians knew that every victim of that terrible disease was doomed to early death as certainly as if he had been sentenced to the electric chair. In the best hospitals only two or three out of every hundred cases of pernicious anemia admitted ever left the hospital alive. Now the whole picture is changed. Many physicians have reported 100 percent of cures; some of the hospitals have had a similar experience.

The man or men who makes a discovery like that, which lengthens life and relieves suffering, is surely entitled to honor above the mere inventor of a machine, no matter how useful the machine may be. He is doubly to be honored, for his work is unselfish and without pecuniary reward. Under the code of the physician, he may not take money for his discovery, except as it may come in such form as the prize just awarded to Dr. Minot and Dr. Whipple. The medical men may not patent his discovery, or take a fee or percentage from its sale, directly or indirectly. He must publish it to the world, for the benefit of his fellow-practitioners and the public whom he serves.

The inventor of a new machine is entitled to make all the money he can from its development and use. It may revolutionize the world, but the motive back of the invention was a selfish one. He is entitled to honors, but not to the degree to which the medical discoverer is entitled to them.

Good news is found in the fact that definite measures are being taken throughout the nation to bring industrial activity back to normal. Bond issues for public works to the extent of $400,000,000 have been approved, most of which will be spent on construction in the immediate future.

Birds and game add to the interest of life on the farm, and many joys of childhood trace back to the woodlot where these were found.

Every farm in Wisconsin is entitled to a good name.

State News

By Fred L. Holmes

Madison, Wis., Dec. 31—A new feature of proposed highway plans for the coming legislative session was revealed here when it was learned that Gov. elect Philip F. LaFollette is trying to work out a program to triple the speed of railroad crossing elimination.

With the handicap of slim funds available the state has been gradually separating the more dangerous crossings and this year about 30 of them have been solved by relocation of the road or by bridging the road over the tracks or by running them under the rail lines.

LaFollette aims to put through a program that will remove from 90 to 100 railroad crossings in the next year. As a preliminary to working out these plans he conferred with executives of the railroads operating in Wisconsin and they will report to him how much money the railroads can contribute toward such a plan. The highway commission is now making a survey of bad crossings.

It is estimated that the program would cost the state about $4,000,000 with the railroad contribution bringing this amount up to about $6,000,000 providing the roads feel that they can stand that expense in the next year.

LaFollette's position for an increase in gasoline taxes to take care of highway expansion indicates that if additional highway funds are to be made available they can be raised by no other means. It also indicates that unless he is willing to back a reduction in road building activities, considered highly improbable, increased gas taxes will be advocated to pay the state's share of crossing elimination.

LaFollette is following the policy of trying to match pressing state problems with the question of finding employment. He has one plan to use prison labor in overcoming forest fire hazards by slash disposal and cutting of fire lanes in the woods. Pushing crossing elimination during the next year would also be a factor in providing more work.

Rapid changes in transportation point to eventual government ownership of railroads with rail lines to remain a necessity even though their operation becomes unprofitable, in the opinion of A. R. McDonald, member of the state railroad commission. Wisconsin's railroad commission is one of the many bodies in the nation wrestling with the transportation problem. Private automobiles and busses and trucks have already driven many short lines out of existence. Many more are destined to go because automobile competition has robbed the short lines of passengers and freight.

Surveyors who ran their lines in Wisconsin three quarters of a century ago drew a geography as fanciful as any conceived by the many biographers of Paul Bunyan and the state is in almost continuous litigation to straighten out the geographical mess.

Frank W. Kuehl, assistant attorney general, has the latest case before the federal department of interior on a dispute whether the Northwestern road or the state owns valuable lakeshore property in Forest county. Research by Attorney Kuehl developed that Fay lake, Florence county, was a hill climber 75 years ago. The original survey shows this lake as extending over ridges of land running into the lake level. It also shows Pine creek never came close to Fay lake, at least not during this geological age.

The present industrial depression has so far affected Wisconsin much less severely than that of 1921 although it has already continued eight months longer than the previous disturbance, the industrial commission announces. In 1921 aggregate weekly payrolls in the state plunged 56 per cent before the upturn came at the end of 11 months. In the present depression payrolls have dropped but 36.9 per cent at the end of 19 months.

An increase of 12,000 acres in the rye sown for the 1931 crop is indicated by the report of the Crop Reporting Service. According to these estimates, the acreage of rye sown for the 1931 harvest is 208,000 as compared with 196,000 sown for the 1930 harvest.

Gov. elect Philip F. LaFollette has already started work on his message to the coming legislature with his recommendations to be worked out in bill form by the time the messages read. Final executive budget hearings have been held and the finance bill to be recommended for passage on Feb. 1 is now being drawn. This covers the more important job in the line of proposed legislation but a series of conferences are now being held preparatory to drawing bills carrying the progressive views on other platform pledges.

The one position in the capitol allotted to a member of the negro race has the fewest turnovers in state service, the job of executive messenger in the governor's office. William Miller was the first negro to hold the position of messenger in the governor's office. When he died Sam Banks succeeded him. The death of Banks brought Sam Pierce to the job and the three have covered a service of more than 30 years. Pierce, a former Pullman porter and one of the best known men of his race in the state, is expected to be retained by Gov. LaFollette. Pierce served under Gov. J. Blaine, Gov. Fred R. Zimmerman and Gov. Walter J. Kohler.

Harris Ellsworth, Editor of the Roseburg (Oregon) News Review, says:

"The principal trouble with business, (retail business, I mean) as I see it is just this: Merchants need to make just a little harder effort to get business. Let me illustrate with an example which is a definition of three well known words:

"An Optimist is a man who, when he is told the wolf is at the door, refuses to believe a word of it and therefore upon opening his door thus unprepared is promptly gobbled up by the wolf.

"A Pessimist, upon learning that the wolf is at the door, believes it is no use to struggle further so he opens the door and gives himself up to the wolf.

"An Opportunist, however, learns with interest that a wolf is at his door. After studying the situation thoroughly, he lures the wolf into the house and emerges after a brief interval clad in a new wolf skin coat.

"The record of business failures is filled with the names of business Optimists and business pessimists. You find few opportunists there.

"Any business man who owns a business that is really entitled to success (many should never have been started in the first place) can succeed if he will study his field, his market, his merchandise and his customers and then use a sensible amount of newspaper advertising and use it seriously.

"Newspaper advertising is a proven force if properly used. Many retailers have become dissatisfied with newspaper advertising because they, themselves, lack the energy and the applied intelligence to use the newspaper space to make money for them. Use of newspaper space does not require the services of an expert to be successful, but its use does require the application of intelligence."

FALL COLDS

By J. H. BODWELL

A stitch in time saves nine is an old adage. It is particularly applicable to the poultry keeper.

Poultry diseases are more prevalent in these days of large flocks under confinement than heretofore when only small flocks were kept that wandered at will over large acres.

Diseases at this time of year have put more poultrymen out of the game than any other single thing. It is up to every poultryman to keep ahead of disease by using every possible means at his disposal. Such common diseases as fall colds, bronchitis, roup, canker and chicken pox can almost be avoided if proper precautions are taken at this season of the year. As it is, at housing time or shortly after that these diseases get their start and after they are started production slows up or stops altogether and the poultry keeper loses his profits for the year.

Ventilation is of great help in controlling or preventing these diseases. Where proper ventilation is maintained, drafts and wet floors are practically eliminated. Drafts and wet floors give any disease a chance to get started and develop rapidly.

Next to ventilation, constipation is of vital importance. The medical profession acknowledges the fact that humans if constipated catch colds and other diseases quicker than if the bowels are in good condition. The same reasoning should be applied to poultry. Plenty of green feed will keep the hen in condition which helps eliminate many of the diseases.

Alfalfa cured in the sun, fed alone or when mixed with molasses, is probably one of the green feeds many poultrymen have neglected, but those that are using it find that the birds are getting more mineral matter and vitamins and the birds are in better condition to make more money for their owners.

Be sure to see that your hen houses are properly ventilated and that the birds are getting plenty of green feed during this time of year.

For your next evening party we suggest the simple taffeta frock shown in the sketch. You can make this without difficulty yourself from chiffon taffeta which is one of the easiest materials for the amateur to handle and which is increasing rapidly in popularity. As you see, the bodice is finished with quaint off-the-shoulder decolletage, straps of the taffeta passing over the shoulders. The only decoration on the bodice and skirt consists of rows of petal-like scallops made from the taffeta overlapped on bands of the taffeta.

If you do not want to use this petal trimming for a new dress you will find it useful to trim some other sort of dress or to make effective ruffle trimming for dainty cushions, lamp shades or other attractive bits of home decoration. So don't fail to make a pattern from the accompanying sketch. The small seed-shape figure is given in half actual size. On a piece of cardboard draw a straight line twice as long as the line from point to point of the sketch and measure on either side of this line twice the distance shown in the figure.

To make the trimming cut one of these melon shapes for each petal. Crease the petals lengthwise through the center and then gather along the curved side, through both sides of the petal. Draw up the gathering slightly and arrange the petal on a band of material. Make a second petal in the same way and arrange on the band, lapping slightly over the first petal.

Touzalin—I hear that Dr. Cheatem isn't going to take any more vacations.

Foosello—No, after he got back from his vacation this summer almost all his patients were well.

There is no substitute for newspaper advertising.

Try a want ad—it pays!

Angus—What would you do with $1,000 if I was to give it to you?
Sandy—The first thing I would do would be to count it.

"Six" Goes To School

"But now I am six, I'm as clever as clever, So I think I'll be six now for ever and ever."

SO says the charming Christopher Robin of A. A. Milne's verse, on attaining the mature age of six years. And who wouldn't feel clever, after five long years of home supervision, if one suddenly stepped off to the brand new world of pupils and teachers—with a lunch-box all one's own, and maybe a book?

But the mother who watches this clever personage walk with dignity down the street, doesn't feel half so confident. What of the mid-morning milk and graham crackers? What of the hot dinner at noon—the main meal of the day which she has been serving for these five years, so that supper may be light and therefore conducive to happy dreams?

Foods for Thought

The first weeks of school are a period of adjustment, and the wise mother usually begins this adjustment a few weeks before school opens. It is well for the child entering school to have an especially nourishing breakfast that will be adequate to furnish energy until noon—a fruit, a warm cereal with plenty of rich milk, light but sustaining egg or bacon dishes, with buttered toast and a warm drink, such as a chocolate malted drink or cocoa. The lunch-box may be made to take the place of the warm meal at home if it contains some of the strained vegetables—they are prepared in cans, by the way, if the busy mother hasn't time to prepare them—in a warm thermos container, some simple but nourishing sandwiches, such as whole-wheat bread with peanut butter, or graham bread with lettuce and cream cheese, tempting fruit, and enough cookies so that there will be some left for the afternoon recess.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

IMMUNITY

It's a mighty comfortable feeling during these winter months, especially in the northern states,—the consciousness that one is immune from "taking cold." Infections of the respiratory tract are so distressing, not to say dangerous, that one dreads them naturally, and would do most anything to prevent their occurrence. From quite an extensive experience, I believe immunizing vaccines have solved the problem as nearly as can be at this time.

Bacterial vaccines made by reliable people are harmless. They should be administered as a preventive, while the patient is in his usual health. Six or eight doses should be used, on alternate days—one each day, of course—making about twelve to fourteen days cover the "course." Your physician will advise you for the best.

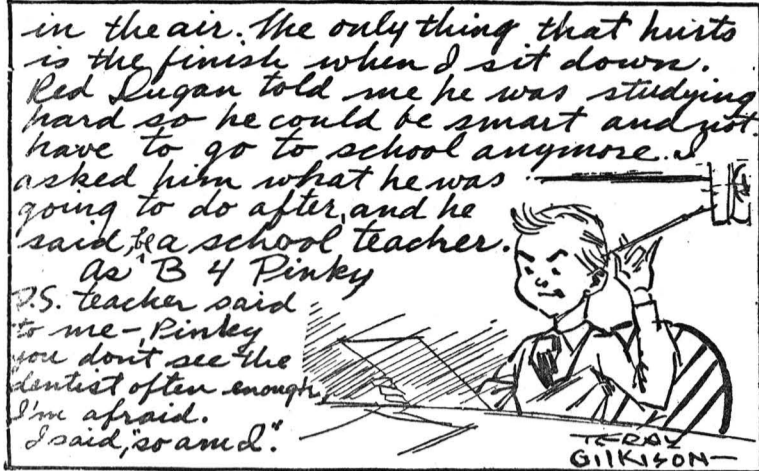

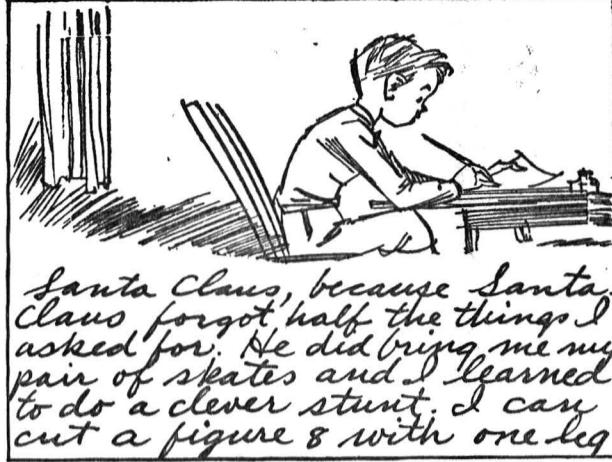

Just how long immunization lasts is not known. Personally, I have taken two "courses" of vaccine during a winter, and have escaped colds, gripe and influenza very nicely, though in almost daily contact with patients infected. I am, therefore, a firm and lasting friend of the vaccine treatment.

Indeed I have found vaccine very efficient in the treatment of respiratory infections. A cold will vanish more quickly if treated by this method—a dose daily, pushed till effect. The patient should stay indoors, better still, in bed, until perfectly recovered, thus preventing relapses which often pave the way for more serious difficulties. The most rational treatment for influenza, I believe to be in the intelligent use of bacterial vaccines.

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, says the old philosopher; I do not know where it may be more fittingly applied, than in the very common affliction known as "colds." Pneumonia is always dangerous to life; doubly so, when it follows influenza. And, it is the one taken unawares that finds regret to be his chief heritage.

DRY AIR DAMAGES SKIN AND HAIR

Increased Need for Pomades During Winter Due to Super-Dry Indoor Air.

Milady would find many of her beauty and health problems more easy of solution were she to give consideration to the necessity for a suitable proportion of moisture in the home air during the long winter heating season, points out the Holland Institute of Thermology of Holland, Michigan.

During the summer months we spend most of our time in air that is adequately humidified by Mother Nature, but during the winter heating season we coop ourselves indoors where, according to the Institute, the air contains only about one-third of the moisture it should have.

The dry indoor air extracts an abnormal amount of moisture from the skin, with the result that it becomes too dry, harsh, and easily chapped. The abnormally dry indoor air also extracts the natural moisture from the scalp, with the result that the hair loses its natural luster and becomes dry and brittle.

These effects, so detrimental to personal beauty and charm, can in large degree be obviated, says the Institute, by automatically injecting into the home atmosphere sufficient water vapor to raise the relative humidity to a desirable percentage. In homes heated with the old style systems, the air contains less than half the amount of moisture required for health, comfort at moderate temperatures of 70 or 72 degrees, and conserving naturally beautiful skin and hair.

With modern warm-air heating systems of the vapor-air type, however, sufficient water-vapor is constantly injected into the home-air to maintain a comparatively uniform relative humidity of 40 to 50 per cent, according to heat temperature. One effect is a soft, balmy atmosphere comparable to that of a fine spring day, which will conserve the beauty of fine complexions and lustrous hair.

Of further importance is the fact that adequately humidified indoor-air is recorded by leading health author-ties and physiologists as a vital factor in preventing colds and other respiratory diseases which usually become epidemic with the advance of the winter heating season. Where indoor air contains a suitable proportion of moisture, dry-air conditions conducive to irritation of the health-conserving mucous membranes in the respiratory tract are eliminated.

"You say your engagement was broken as the result of a misunderstanding?"

"Yes," replied the girl with weepy eyes. "I told him I never wanted him to speak to me again and he thought I meant it."
