Bank Cashier Shot; No Money Is Taken

Henry Roger Williams, Route 1, Box Prairie bartender. 36, Waukesha, Wednesday afternoon was shot and killed in a running gun-Clifford O'Brien, after holding up the face. North Prairie State bank at 1 p. m. Williams is about 30.

The bandit, who answered the same description as the one who held up the Dousman bank Mar. 13, wonded the assistant cashier, William Cannon, about 50, in the wrist. Nothing was taken.

According to details pieced together by deputies who rushed to the scene of the holdup, Cannon was returning to the bank from his lunch hour at 1 p. m. The bandit came in with him, He is believed to have held up Cannon, and Cannon refused to open the doors to the vault for him.

"I'll be damned if he gets any of my money!" Cannon is quoted as saying. The bandit is then supposed to have fired three shots, two of which grazed Cannon's midriff and the third pierced his wrist, causing profuse bleeding. shots. Cannon is at the Memorial Hospital.

Mother Disappears While on Search For Dead Infant

Leading Son, 3, She Wanders Into Oblivion as Her Husband Hunts.

SAN FRANCISCO. - Somewhere, probably in this city, a woman was wandering the other day in a daze of tragedy, and with her trudged her three-year-old son, unaware that his mother was leading him, and herself, toward an uncertain fate.

To prevent another and possibly greater disaster from descending upon the family, the woman's husband, discouraged and impoverished by a two-month search, journeyed to San Francisco and appealed to the police to help him. He is Thomas B. Crotty, 36, of Walla Walla, Wash., music teacher, violinist, one-time assistant concert master of the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

The woman whom he asked them to help find is Mrs. Helen Schwartz Crotty, 32, former art student in Paris, France; mother of Charles Crotty, who died in his eighth month, and of Thomas Crotty, 3, fellow wanderer with his mother.

Once Happy Home.

Until last November, the Crotty home in Walla Walla was as happy as you may. Mr. and Mrs. Crotty, who met in Paris while he was touring Europe, worked day by day to develop into reality their ambitious dreams for their children.

Crotty bought a rare and expensive violin for son Thomas and the child already had shown a talent for playing. Charles, too, was to be a musician, the parents agreed.

Then Charles died. Less than two weeks after the funeral, Mrs. Crotty took Thomas by the hand and walked out of her

For six weeks there was no word of the pair, and those six weeks were Crotty's first taste of what hell on earth can be like.

He closed his studio, packed a few possessions, ranged the coast cities, seeking some trace of his wife and

He went down to San Francisco, and at Christmas time his search was rewarded. A friend had seen Mrs. Crotty and the child-somewhere in the Fillmore district. That was all the friend knew.

Then Charles died. Crotty haunted the Fillmore area until one day he came face to face with his wife and his baby.

Unable to Explain Actions.

She hardly remembered, Crotty said, how she and the child had The past was a blur. She could think only of their dead child, something inside was urging her on, ever onward, where she could not

But happy again with her husband, she started back with him to Walla Walla. At Portland they stopped to visit friends. Mrs. Crotty suddenly arose from a chair, said that Thomas appeared ill and that she would take him for a walk.

"The air might do him good," she explained.

Crotty could not know that once again his wife was answering an irresistible urge—the urge to seek something she could never find. The vision of the dead child, Charles, must have been before her as she led Thomas out of the Portland

She never came back. Crotty has never heard from her. He does not know what may have befallen his wife and their only surviving son, but he believes they are in San Francisco.

So he has taken up the long, weary search again. Once again it has brought him to San Franciscoshabby, broke, living on hope of the future and on memories.

Talking 'Mute' Lands in Jail; Forgets His Card

to talk fluently. His story led to the arrest of three companions at a tourist camp. All three carried the same kind of cards.

YOUNG BULLS REQUIRE CARE

Good Feeding Produces Best Results.

By L. J. CASE

(Extension Animal Husbandman, N. C. State College.) Many farmers have recently added a herd of beef cattle to their agricultural enterprises. It is highly important that they take adequate care of the herd bull, especially if the animal is young. Young bulls should be well fed and cared for in order to grow them out properly. A good ration is equal parts of corn, crushed oats and wheat bran, and all the legume hay the animal will eat. If legume hay is not available, add about one-half pound of a protein supplement with the grain mixture. Where wheat bran is too high in price, double the amount of oats in the ration. The total amount of grain to be fed should vary with the condition of the bull, but in no case should it be necessary to feed more than one pound to each 100 pounds live weight of the animal. Small amounts of good sweet silage may be fed to the bull, but large quantities may prove detrimental.

The young bull should have access to salt and pure water at all times, and a mineral mixture of equal parts of steamed bone meal, ground limestone, and salt should be kept where he can help himself.

The beef type bull should not be put into service until he is at least one year old. The first year he may be used on not over 10 or 12 cows, one service to the cow. The bull should have access to a well-fenced lot or pasture where he can take exercise. An open shed or shelter of some kind should be available. Some bred cows running in the same lot with the bull will induce exercise. In no case should the young bull be allowed to run with unbred fe-

Rotation Grazing of Sheep Prevents Stomach Worms

Rotation grazing of sheep is the ideal preventive measure for stomach worms, believe animal pathologists of the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

Since preventive measures are based on breaking the life cycle of the worm, the young and uninfested animals should not be allowed to contact the manure from infested animals. Most serious effects are seen among lambs, and since growth must be made while the animals are young, the safest pastures should be made available to the lambs.

First symptoms are dullness, lack of thrift and often diarrhea. Later ne skin and mucous membranes of the eye and mouth become pale as a result of the anemia caused by the blood-sucking habits of the parasite. Swellings may appear along the lower jaw, dewlap or brisket.

Stomach worms are tiny bloodsucking worms 1/2 to 11/4 inches long and smaller than an ordinary pin. The adult worm attaches itself to the lining of the fourth stomach and feeds for awhile, then commonly shifts to a new point of attachment, leaving a bleeding wound resembling a pin-prick. The adult female lays many eggs which pass out with the droppings and contaminate the ground. The eggs hatch in from a few hours to several days, depending upon conditions of temperature and moisture. The larvae undergo further development until they reach a stage capable of infesting the host. In this stage they are very resistant to drying and low temperature.

When the grass is wet the larvae crawl up blades of grass to be swallowed by grazing sheep. Reaching the stomach, they mature in two to three weeks and in another week or two the females are producing eggs in large numbers.

Farm Notes

American cash income from farm marketings and government payments in December amounted to $837,000,000 as compared with $801,-000,000 in December of 1939.

Recent reports from Vichy say that most of the cattle in unoccupied France will soon have to be slaughtered because of a critical shortage of corn, barley, oats and other feed.

The United States produces about 30 per cent of the world's beef supply. Argentina, Brazil, and Uruguay combined produce about 25 per cent.

Some agricultural experts believe that with farm labor costs going up just as farmers are sending their sons into the draft army, there will be an increasing need for farm machinery.

Prices of ready-to-wear clothing increased 5 to 10 per cent in 1940 and are expected to rise as much more in 1941. Woolen garments and leather goods are especially likely to rise in price because of the demand for wool, hides, and leather for defense purposes.

IDEAS or Home-maker By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE pink and green chintz covered boxes on these closet shelves are lined with plain green cambric and they are hinged so that the front may be opened without taking off the lid. Any box of good stiff cardboard may be hinged and covered in this way. Library paste may be used or wall paper paste mixed with as little water as possible to make it spread smoothly with a paint brush. Adhesive tape or other strong gummed fabric tape will be needed to hinge the boxes.

Cut the box lid straight across with a sharp knife three inches in from the front edge. Cut out the front of the box and hinge the pieces in place. Now, cut and paste the covering pieces, as directed in the sketch. Apply the paste on both the back of the fabric and the box and smooth the material in place with a dry, clean cloth. Cover sides first with fabric straight around and about 1/2 inch over edges; then cover top

REGARDING HERBS

M ANY home gardeners may be interested in growing herbs this year because of the war, and because they make everyday dishes more appetizing and flavor-

Herbs may be grown in a plot about four by six feet to supply the average needs of a family. They should have full sunlight and be planted in good loamy soil.

Almost all popular herbs—balm, basil, borage, fennel, marjoram rosemary, thyme, sage, anise, dill, and caraway-may either be used when young, and fresh, or prepared for use dried.

Anise, basil, borage, dill and savory are annuals; caraway, and fennel are biennials, and balm, marjoram, sage, rosemary, thyme and chives are perennials, although balm and marjoram are best treated as annuals. All the herbs mentioned here will probably produce enough growth for use the first year, however, if seeds are planted early, and climate is normally temperate.

dress that invites lingerie accents. With a gown or coat dress of this sort, you can change it entirely with new accessories. Note the white frills in the sleeves.

Black wool and silk faille adapt well to the lines of the dressmaker suit centered in the group. The jacket features the new dropped shoulder yoke, with bracelet length sleeves and unpressed pleated peplum. Unpressed front pleats introduce new skirt interest. The blouse is of white mousseline de soie.

Another type of silk costume suit that is a leading fashion is the redingote ensemble. The great advantage is that the redingote can be worn either with its companion dress of faille or crepe or with print frocks. Many of the new redingotes are strictly tailored in straight slim lines. Others depart from the straight and narrow path by introducing front pleats and sometimes back yokes to give freedom across the shoulders.

Very smart, too, are black or navy silk coats, elaborately braided down the fronts. Also, a striking new mote are glittering jeweled buttons, fastening the jacket of simple black or mavy silks. Many flower buttons in realistic colorings are used on the new silk tailleurs.

Print-Bow Trim Shades of Deep Purple Seen in Spring Fashions

Purple and violet and kindred shades are color features being highlighted this spring. Many suits and cape costumes are tailored of purple or violet-toned tweeds this spring. Topped with a fetching little straw chapeau, trimmed in vio-let, with violet boutonmere to match, this ensemble sings fashion's Spring Song.

The new lavenders and purples go charmingly with navy. Lots of white frills on a navy suit, navy or violet felt hat with violet flower trim and you're ready for the sum! Lavender weils or light green ones are accessory "musts" with purple ensembles.

Bright Red Colors

Red is registering one of the biggest color triumphs of the season. Young girls "dote" on the new red coats and jackets, some of which faster with military brass buttons. Prims with red backgrounds are creating a sensation. Some are parterned with navy or black or beige and green motifs. You really must have a red print frock.

It's the fashion to match hat and handbag this season. Try carrying out the idea in red straw or fabric, and don't forget to add a red well. You will like red accents with your navy suit or redingote ensemble, and red accessories will add an exolic touch to your new beige outfit.

Chinese Hats

A custom among Chinese maidens is to wear clusters of flowers at each side of the head. It is this pretty headdress which has given inspiration for a new fashion that some predict will develop into an important wogue during the coming roomths. A noted American millinery designer has devised a band that curves to fit the head. This is covered with ribbon, and at each side flowers or ribbon bows are attached. You wear this litted Dandeau like little girls used to wear round combs. This is a real help to those who prefer to go hatless.

VISIONS

By KARL GRAYSON (Associated Newspapers.) WNU Service.

THE mind," stated Ahmed Sala in his droning mono-tone, "is capable of all things. The stars proclaim our destiny.'

David Carens, 15, not only believed that the turban-capped Ahmed possessed mystic powers, but he allowed himself to be inveigled into attending a course of special training, with no less a personage for his instructor than Mr. Sala himself. Unbeknownst to his family, David turned over each week his allowance of $3 while Ahmed Sala read the stars and proclaimed great things for the boy's future.

Within a month's time David was convinced that he himself possessed an unusual mind. He went into what he chose to call trances, on which occasions he saw visions which enabled him to predict happenings of the future. Unfortunately, one or two of his predictions turned into actualities, which fact strengthened the boy's belief in his own powers.

Later he began to spend a part of each evening studying the stars. With the aid of his mother's social calendar, he predicted that certain things would happen on certain days, and rather surprised and vaguely alarmed his parents when the things actually did take place.

Driven to it at last by his father's persistent questioning, David admitted that he was psychic.

The elder Carens acted as if a hot potato had suddenly become stuck in his throat, but he kept a straight face. Later he conferred with David's mother, which conference resulted in a unanimous agreement that the subject of discussion must be cured of his ailment.

Unbeknownst to his family, David turned over each week his allowance of $3.

It seemed, however, as if the Carens' resolution might have been made a shade too late. At least for a time they had cause for some vague alarm and not a little concern.

It was while Cousin Anita Banks was visiting at the Carens' home that David made his most astounding prediction. The boy came into the dining room one bright morning and found Cousin Anita holding a one-sided conversation with the camary in its cage. David, who had approached from the opposite side of the cage, suddenly rubbed his eyes, stared, clapped a hand to his head and seemed to swoon. Somewhat alarmed, Cousin Anita summoned the elder Carenses. All three of them stood helplessly by while David rocked back and forth on the balls of his feet, emitting low and plaintive moans.

Presently, aided by a now too gentle shake at the hands of Mr. Carens, David came out of his swoon and stared dazedly into the faces of his relatives. Abruptly he closed his eyes and put forth a hand.

"Oh, it's horrible! Horrible!" 'The Carenses looked at Cousin Anita and Cousin Anita looked at them.

"What's horrible?" Mrs. Carens asked anxiously. "Is it your stomach? "Horrible! Horrible!" David passed a hand before his eyes and then held the same hand extended before him for silence. "! see it again. A hole. A hole in Cousin Anita's forehead! It meansdeath!" David's voice trailed away in a gasping whisper. Mrs. Carens intered a little frightened scream, and almost collapsed. Mr. Carens swore. Cousin Anita clutched at a table for support. David, peeping through his spread firgers, interpreted correctly the expression on his father's face, and backed out of the room somewhat lurriedly.

That night shortly after supper the telephone rang and Mr. Carens answered it. After a perfunctory conversation he replaced the receiver and hurriedly climbed into his coat. His face, as he went out, was grave and full of concern. Moreover, David felt an odd sensation at the look his father cast in his direction before departing. A half hour later Mr. Carens returned. His face was even more grave, and now contained a look of horror. He came directly to the table where David was sitting, laboring over some honework.

"David, that telephone call was from the police. They have found Cousin Arnta lying in a vacant field behind Peabody's parn.' He paused and his eyes grew wide. "David, she's dead, and there's a hole in her forehead, exactly as you predicted!" "Dead?" David gulped, swallowed, felt his blood run cold. "Dead?" he whispered hoarsely.

"And a hole in her forehead?"

Mr. Carens nodded sadly. "I told the police about your prediction. Tomorrow you'll have to go down to headquarters and tell them what you know."

David leaped to his feet, eyes bulging. "But I don't know anything, Dad! I can't help them any! I-I-don't want the police to question me."

Mr. Carens shook his head. "You'll have to go all the same, David. Tell them about your vision. Who knows, you may have anoth-

Perspiration began to appear on David's forehead. Cousin Anita dead! Good heavens, did the police think he had anything to do with it? Why in time did Dad have to say anything about his vision anyhow? David closed up his books and started for his room. The situation demanded private concentration.

Deep in thought David had almost gained the top landing at the head of the stairs before he saw the thing that awaited him there, standing directly in his path. She wore a long flowing gown of some gray material, and her whole being seemed to be enshrouded in a sort of mist.

David's heart seemed to stand still. He felt suddenly inert, paralyzed with fear. Vaguely the thought occurred to him that now he was actually seeing a vision that was a vision. For as he stood there the woman slowly raised an arm and pointed to a gaping hole in her forehead. She was, David saw, no one else than Cousin Anita!

David emitted one frightened bleat and toppled over backwards. His mother picked him up at the foot of the stairs and with her welcome assistance the youth managed to reach the sanctity of the lighted living room. The boy was too frightened to notice the suppressed mirth in his father's glance. "See another vision, son?"

David's teeth were chattering, but he managed to blurt out what he'd seen on the stair landing. Mr. Carens expressed polite surprise and went back to his reading, a fact which disturbed David considerably.

"But, Dad, it was real! It's up there now! Oughtn't you go see?" "Me? Why, son, I must confess I've no such powers. No, I'm afraid visions aren't in my line."

David cast a look of desperation toward his mother. But his mother was en route to the kitchen. Some matter of imminent importance, it seemed, had called her there.

David sat down close to his father, a forlorn, a helpless figure. Twice he started to speak but thought better of it, remembering dismally that visions such as the one he had witnessed on the stairs were supposedly, as far as his folks were concerned, quite common to his superior intelligence.

Later that evening, after several hours during which David sat in fear-stricken silence. Mr. Carens and his son got together on a confidential deal. David agreed to discontinue entirely his activities as a spiritualist and to devote his entire time to homework and sane conduct. Mr. Carens relieved the youth's feelings by admitting the death of Cousin Anita was a put-up job, and supported his argument by summoning the lady herself, who appeared with a forehead free from holes.

And thereafter David Carens admitted only to himself, and then in rare and extremely imaginative moments, that he was at all psychic.

Malnutrition, Microbes Blamed for Mental Ills

Malnutrition and microbes were given the major blame for mental defectiveness in reports made at the second annual meeting of the American Association of Mental Deficiency, Pacific States section.

For a highlight, the good word was spoken that:

"There are ample reasons to believe that new cases of cretinism (a form of idiocy prevalent among children in certain localities) should be well on the road to eradication within the span of a generation or two.'

In making that prediction, Dr. Emilian O. Houda of Tacoma, Wash. (the state which has the highest per capita rate of goiter incidence in the United States) stated:

"That is, if the teachings which recognize the true causes are accepted." These causes, according to the doctor, are "a long train of events which start in normal thyroid glands," with "goiters primary facfors incriminated as the intimate cause" of cretinic mental deficien-

"The congenital form of cretinism is due, ultimately, to the specific activators of thyroid disease," the speaker stated.

Both, when acquired from the goitrous glands of expectant mothers or after birth, the factor of long neglected thyroid disease or of Burgical removal of a grossly degengrated gland is present, he declared.

"The goiter is of microbic origin and, therefore, the primary factor of cretinism lies in the science of incrobiology, he explained.

Fortunately, he said, the prophylactic is universally applicable and is predicated on introducing thyroid products to supply a deficiency caused by impairment of the glandular functions. For dwarfism, pituitary extract is a specific, and, for simple goiter, immunizing injections are effective, he reported.
