Crochet and Knit Items Lead Chic Back-to-School Wardrobes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

HURRY up, girls, and get out your crochet hooks (your knitting needles, if you are a knitter) and crochet and crochet (or knit) for all you are worth. If you are still away on a vacation, don't let that stop you but keep on crochet-ing! If you are home and tingling with enthusiasm to begin planning your back-to-school wardrobe, fashion puts it up to you to "improve each shining hour" by making up a collection of clever crochet or knit fancies. You'll be surprised when you begin to compare notes with your campus chums, what a host of saucy hand-crochet and knitted "pretties" they have brought along.

Of course you will be wanting to show that you are just as fashionwise as any of your dormitory sisters, that's why we are picturing a group of crochet and knit items, so that you can "get busy" and accumulate quite a collection to flaunt before the admiring eyes of your companions by the time "school be-

Especially in millinery, crochet steps blithely into the fashion picture this fall. Whether you like a flattering brim or a saucy pompadour "beanie" your new headpiece will be smarter if it is hand-crocheted. The girl that comes to the first class-meet in the new semester, hatted in a nifty sailor like the one shown above to the left in the group will create a sensation. It is made of boilfast mercerized cotton, is washable and believe it or not, costs merely a few cents for the material. Here's a style tip—crochet yourself a sailor like this one, in a strikingly new fall color to wear with your smart town and travel suit.

A hat that has "lots of style" is shown above to the right. Use the simple single crochet stitch and you can speed along like lightning on row after row. Bright Mexican colors in pearl cotton lend an authentic air to this gay toreador hat inspired by the type worn in the bull ring. You'll be wanting several gay back-on-the-head pompadour calots, to round out your collection of campus millinery, and miracle of miracles!-with the aid of your trusty crochet hook you can whip up one in a jiffy exactly like the cunning model centered above in the picture. The cost for material is too insignificant to count.

Where can any college girl find anything more striking, more dramatic in the way of a chic headpiece than the picturesque stocking cap worn by the white-jacketed girl standing to the right in the foreground! Here is a type that will lay siege to any fair collegiate's heart. Make it in animated multi-color crochet cottons and wear it with the nonchalance of a gay senorita as you trek along in the campus style pa-

Of course a knitted sweater in red, white and blue will become a necessary luxury in college and be sure to add AS shown here to the left, the sweater is white and made of a very special knitting woolen, soft and caressing to the touch. Go to your nearest fancy-work shop or department store and ask for the newest in yarns. If you finish your sweater of red and blue crochet edges as pictured you will win the hearts of soldier boy friends galore.

Be on the lookout for the new wool dresses that have hand-crochet revers, pockets, vestees, sleeves, and even appliques of crocheted flowers. These crochet-plus-fabric dresses have become fashion's pet hobby for fall and winter.

(Associated Newspapers-WNU Service.)

United States government sent a flock of troops over the border to protect honor, life, property and to catch Villa.

Garfield Nichols, who was then considered one of the foremost newspaper correspondents in the East, despite his lack of consideration for expense accounts, his humorous viewpoint on things that newspaper editors regarded as vitally important (including the Mexican war), and his frankly admitted weakness for intoxicating beverages of any description—despite all these things Garfield was dispatched posthaste for Mexico as representative of the Boston Express to serve in the capacity of war correspondent.

Old Man Upton, the Express' managing editor, knew what he was about. He knew that Garfield, because of his various weaknesses, couldn't be depended upon to stay sober for more than four or five hours at a time, but he knew also, that Garfield had the gift of setting words down on paper in such a way as to attract and hold the attention of New England's newsthirsty public. Personally Upton wasn't so sold on the "war" himself, but he knew that Garfield Nichols would send back dispatches that would fairly seethe and boil with war news of a convincing nature. And so Garfield departed for the Mexican border with a pocket full of expense money, passports, letters of identity and a head full of old man Upton's detailed instructions.

He lived in the saloon, alternating his time between dodging bullets and writing.

Two weeks later the Express' managing editor received an urgent request from its war correspondent for additional funds amounting to $100. Accompanying the wire was another, several paragraphs in length, in which Garfield had set down the latest developments in the Upton checked the story with the leased wire dispatches, found that they tallied in minor details only, and was a trifle puzzled. Garfield's story was glamorous and this was what the public wanted. Hence, the story was published, under Garfield's by-line, and the $100 expense money forwarded.

From that point forward stories from Garfield concerning the war began to arrive at the rate of one every two days. They were exceptionally fine yarns, and would have substantiated old man Upton's rashness in engaging the famous Garfield in every respect, had it not been for one thing. Each story in the order of its receipt was found to be a little further removed from other stories that were flashed over the country by the various news services which had also dispatched correspondents to Mexico. But to offset this, Garfield's yarns were, in point of literature, new and interesting reading, far ahead of any other dispatches that came in daily on the Express' leased wire service.

Fortunately, the American public is gullible; they were eager and willing to believe that the developments in Mexico as published by the Express were correct. They liked the sound of Garfield's stuff, hence circulation figures soared during the first few weeks of Garfield's sojourn.

It wasn't until almost a month had elapsed that old man Upton really began to get worried. During the past four weeks Garfield had asked for and received three hundred extra dollars for expenses. And during the past seven days his stories had not tallied in a single instance with leased wire dis-

In order to satisfy a growing suspicion, old man Upton got together every wire that had come from Garfield, dug out a map of Mexico, brought to hand certain established facts concerning the war, and set to work. At the end of an hour he had discovered that his war correspondent had been at one time within 100 miles of the war zone, and this was as near as he ever got. Putting two and six together Managing Editor Upton arrived at the conclu- mated at 700 metric tons, which on sion that Correspondent Nichols had an annual basis would be around been on one big bust since the day 200,000 metric tons. Yet, in spite he entered Mexico. TT HAPPENED during the so- paper a story concerning the war called "Mexican" war - that of a nature that he knew would apperiod of time during which the peal to Upton and the American public, but which had little if any regard for actual developments in the war.

Five hours later Garfield Nichols received a telegram of dismissal in his room at Majorca, Mexico, and promptly went out to drown his sorrows in the village's only saloon. At dawn the next day Garfield was seated beneath a table in the same saloon singing all four verses of "America." His sorrows had been very completely drowned; he was in an especially jovial mood.

At the exact moment that the last word of the last stanza died on Garfield's lips, a cannon boomed on the outskirts of the town, shattering every window in the saloon.

Garfield crawled from his hideout and stood erect. Another cannon boomed, and the building shook. Garfield looked around. The place was deserted. He looked into the street, and found it empty, too. But as he watched he saw little puffs of smoke emerge from the windows of buildings close by, and heard the sharp reports of rifle fire.

Partly sobered, entirely disconcerted, Garfield scurried into the saloon's back room and found there a dozen fierce looking Mexicans, lined up at barricaded windows and

After some difficulty the correspondent learned that a sudden turn of events had carried the fighting out of the hills and into the desert country. The deciding battle of the fracas was being fought then and there in the little town of Majorca. Garfield groaned and sat down.

For more than a month he had attempted, and with no little success to escape the war, and now it had come to him. As far as he knew he was the only white man in the place, to be sure the only newspaper correspondent.

The battle lasted three days. And, strangely enough, Garfield remained sober during that time. He remained sober in the midst of hundreds of bottles of every kind of liquor he had ever tasted, at hand for the taking. He lived in the saloon, alternating his time between dodging bullets and writing the story of the most famous battle

As fate would have it he survived without a scratch. Hardly had the last shot been fired when he was riding hell bent to the nearest town and an intact telegraph wire. The manuscript that he carried was long and beautifully done. Every fact was accurate; every word gospel truth. It was, thought Garfield, about the best war story ever written for a newspaper, simply because its author had been on hand during the fighting, had written down detailed descriptions of every charge and sally and retreat as it actually happened. Moreover it was a scoop!

Back in Boston old man Upton read over the long and carefully worded wire that had come to him, charges collect, from his correspondent in Majorca, Mexico, and sadly shook his head.

"Hal," he called, addressing a copy boy. "Hal, what's on the wire service about the Mexican scrap?" Hal wrinkled his nose to indicate that news from Mexico was nil. 'Nothin', Boss. Same old stuff. And if you ask me, the can't be much of a war. What we oughter do is run some more of Nichols' That's what folks like to stuff. read. Good live news!"

But old man Upton only shook his head and picked up a copy of the wire he had just sent Garfield. It read: "Just received your last 'Fiction' story. And I mean last. You're fired. Suggest you sell your imaginary 'news' to a magazine.''

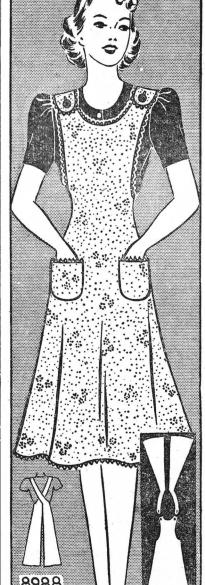

Wood as Livestock Feed In Many Foreign Lands

Judging from reports received over a number of months in the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations, wood as a source of livestock feed is gradually passing from an experimental stage into that of practical utilization in some European countries.

It is interesting to note that in this development—the result of many years of research and experimental work-wood is the basic material not only for a new type of carbohydrate feed, but also for protein feed. The former is the so-called feed cellulose produced from wood; the latter is feed yeast obtained from wood sugar and nitrogenous materials by biological proc-

Feed cellulose as a pure carbohydrate fodder is being produced on a fairly extensive scale in Sweden, Norway and Finland. It is estimated that upward of 100,000 metric tons of feed cellulose will actually be fed in Norway during the current year and that the quantity produced and fed in Sweden will be even larger. In Finland the output of feed cellulose per day is estifield had doubtlessly set down on ers that cannot be fully satisfied.

Wool Lace Coat

Here we have the ideal medium for the early autumn coat . . . It will be well worth while to look up black wool lace, that is so fabriclike it can be styled and manipulated like most any material. Armand Scardapane designs the striking coat pictured here, of handsome black wool lace.

The new fall coats definitely reflect the cape influence. This model heralds a coming vogue in the cape and wool fabriclike lace.

Silhouette Changes Considered Drastic

When you attend various fashion shows designed to open the fall program of dress, go with an open mind and be prepared to see startling changes. You may have been going serenely along with the thought that you have a perfectly good suit or coat that you can wear again this season, but when you see the new "lines" you will find suddenly, you have changed your mind.

There is a decidedly new order of things in the fashion world in the way of easy lines that stress a supple blouse movement above the midriff. Sleeves have undergone a transformation stressing dolman effects and even when sleeves are set into their deep armholes they give the impression of dolman sleeves. However the appearance of broad shoulders is maintained through a gentle rounding off that depends on especially contrived shoulder pads, to hold a firm flattering line.

Skirt interest is running high. Fullness is adroitly introduced to convey the idea of slenderness and the new tiered effects are making conversation throughout fashion realms. Watch peplums and tunics for they play a star role in this season's styling technique, with pleated skirts also very much in evidence.

Bright Green Veils

Huge white or black hats be-veiled in a green mist are ever so chic for summer. If you want to give your flowery toque or sailor hat extra fillip, enswathe it with a veil that is as green as the fresh green of early spring verdure.
