1941 Wisconsin State Fair Grand Finale This Sunday

Although thousands have already seen and been thrilled by the 91st Wisconsin State Fair, Milwaukee, it is the opinion of many that the greatest days, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, are still ahead.

Friday is Dairy Day, which naturally means that every effort is being made to offer an exposition that will be truly representative of the state's greatest industry. The opening program will start at 10:20 A. M. with the two-hour Dairyland Parade in front of the grandstand. All of the blue-blooded cattle and other livestock will be on display in the parade. There will be bands, industrial floats, new farm equipment, and finally, the crowning of the 1941 Wisconsin Dairy Queen. Outstanding farmers will be honored; young essay writers will be given bull-calf awards; and the "Stars of the Milky Way," the 20 best cows in the state, will be decked with ribbons during the course of the parade ceremony. At eight, farmers and their families will be guests of the State Fair at the Butter Ball, where they may dance to the music of Grif Williams and Steve Swedish.

On Friday and Saturday nights, the sensational outdoor show "Stars on Parade," with its cast of more than 200, including celebrities of stage, screen, and radio, will be presented in its last two performances. The Horse Show will continue to be a big feature in the Coliseum on the three last nights of the Fair, and the dog show, with more than 250 entries, will take over for Saturday and Sunday in the poultry building.

Saturday — Youth Day — will see more than 20,000 young Wisconsinites participating in a great number of activities that have been planned for nearly a year. Especially outstanding will be the drama "Youth Challenges Democracy," in which 5,000 young people will take part. The drama will be presented in the Coliseum at 1:20 p. m. Final rounds in the Statewide Horseshoe Championship Tournament will be held at the pits.

Sunday will witness the greatest dirt track classic of the year—the AAA 100-mile National Dirt Track Championship. Cars for this event will be of Indianapolis specifications, and in most cases will be the same machine with which the drivers won fame and fortune last Memorial Day. The closing feature of the Fair will be the first night-thrill show ever staged in Wisconsin. In addition to 23 new, spine-thrilling stunts by Jimmie Lynch and his Death Dodgers, the thrill show will offer Captain F. P. Frakes in an event that has never been rehearsed before. Captain Frakes will take an automobile and crash it through a 20 x 34 foot house that will be erected on the track. The house will be loaded with dynamite and set afire just before Captain Frakes' daring ride.

Fall Social Calendar Demands Smart Clothes for the Matron

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE time is not too far away now when you daughters of the household will engage in the exciting experience of getting off to school in the fall, with a wardrobe tuned to your exact needs and whims. Only please remember you are not the only heroines holding the spotlight in fashion realms. You have rivals, yes indeed!

We are not telling who but here is a tip. Keep an eye on modern mothers, matrons and women in general, who are so importantly carrying on in club work and in social activities that tend to "keep the home fires burning" while college faring daughters are away from home.

Fashion is catering to the costume needs of women with whom "life begins at forty." With unbounded zest and enthusiasm inspired by an ever-increasing appreciation of the tremendous influence smart clothes have, they are achieving new chic and poise. It's no secret or myth or fairy tale that women who "go places" and "do things" in this busy world of ours have gone utterly modern in matter of dressing glamorously. So look to your laurels Miss Teen-age, Miss Debutante and Miss College girl, you will have to step lively to keep up with queen-mother's fashion pace!

One of the fashion gestures that will serve mothers and matrons well who happen to be limited to a restricted budget, is to select a simple basic dress, smart in lines, made of good material and styled with the thought of complementing this one gown with flattering interchangeable accessories. These have a magic way of glorifying their appearance. Chic jewelry, feminizing and lovely lingerie neckwear touches, can do wonders in transforming the entire aspect of your costume. And don't forget flowers! Be sure to wear flowers for that refreshing accent of youthful charm that is always so endearing.

To the right in the illustration

"somebody's mother" presents a lovely "picture" as she graciously presides at the initial autumn meeting of her favorite club. She is clad in the simplest sort of a gown made of fine sheer black wool to which frilly white lingerie accent lends endless charm. In the lovely quaint Victorian bouquet of carnations, violets and stephanotis which she carries so caressingly in her lovely hands, one immediately senses the gallantry of friend husband or a devoted son who, perhaps being out of town, wired to the nearest florist for the prettiest bouquet fancy might picture. Just as an afterthought this dainty bouquet may be a tribute of admiration to their leader from various club members.

The lady seated goes in for ultra modern fashion as you can readily see in her swank gown of handsome black wool ribbed crepe. This together with her chic English sailor so piquantly veiled, goes to show how very smartly one can dress in all-black. Notice the low-cut V-neck-line, a stylizing detail that was popular this summer and will continue good form right through the fall. The patriotic corsage she is wearing is of blue cornflowers, fragrant red roses and white carnation petals.

Glittering satin is scheduled for a big play this fall. A satin dress is a good "buy" for it not only gives marvelous wear, but it has that air of dressiness that tunes in with social environs. The lady in the top oval has on a satin frock which is intriguingly shirred about bodice and sleeves. She wears a tiara of salmon pink gladiolas. Evidently the lady in the oval below to the right has a yen for pastel colorings. Her eyelet-embroidered dress in soft blue crepe is really lovely. She adds to the glamour by dramatizing her well-groomed hair with a cluster of rosebuds and hyacinths.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Jeweled Bow Knots

There is going to be a big play made on unique buttons and jewel fastenings of every description this fall and winter. Note the tailored jacket of chalk white crepe shown here. Its sleeves, yoke and front panel are cut in one, a characteristic feature of the newer fashions. The five crystal and enamel bow-knot fastenings herald intriguing gadgets to be used like buttons.

Rich Browns for New Autumn Wear

There is considerable emphasis on handsome browns for fall. The dresses in initial showings are mostly of rayon crepes and jerseys. These are simply styled so far as "lines" are concerned but have interesting surface treatment in stitching, self-fabric appliques and quilted decoration.

The dressier afternoon models often combine fabric with lace dyed to match or with velvet or satin.

In keeping with the trend to browns, touches of embroidery appear in bronze sequins and metal threads, also favor is expressed for pink fur. Milliners are making up smart little mink hats with matching neckpieces.

Fringes Take On New Importance in Style

Fringed dinner gowns appear in scores of individual treatments. Afternoon dresses too take on accents of fringe. The originality and versatility expressed in trimming with fringe is most interesting.

There is every sort of arrangement from narrow fringe placed row and row in tiers covering the entire skirt to long swinging panels of fringe extending in one continuous line from waist to hem. Fringe also is worked in interlaced manner to give the new drop-shoulder line and to form pockets and girdle effects with long streaming ends to add grace.

Blind Brothers Do All Chores to Keep Farm Going

Aware of Coming Loss of Sight, They Prepare To Carry On.

KAUKANA, WIS.—Every morning Mrs. Nellie Willems' two "boys," Henry and Aloysius, drag themselves out of bed before daylight, fumble in the dark for their clothes, feel their way downstairs and go outdoors to the barn.

There they open the doors so that 27 Guernsey cows can file into neat stalls, filled with hay. Milking, a farm ritual, follows. The brothers' skillful hands soon produce pails of foaming, cream-laden milk. After the other duties of the barnyard are performed, Henry and Aloysius hurry back to the house for the breakfast prepared by their sisters.

These two brothers and their early morning routine are no different from hundreds of other Wisconsin farmers—except that Henry and Aloysius are blind.

Mother Is Invalid.
Henry's life has been shrouded in darkness for 50 years, and Aloysius, who is 35, has been blind for 10 years. Yet despite the handicap, their mother, herself an invalid for the past 14 years, insists that the 197-acre farm would not have stayed in the family if her "boys" had not faithfully remained at home to work for her.

Their disability keeps them from doing field work, but they perform virtually all of the innumerable odd jobs so vital to successful farming. Henry and Aloysius know every inch of their barnyard, where each tool is kept, how each bunch of hay is laid in the mow.

They do their chores confidently and capably, easing the job of the hired man who works in the field. The brothers even venture into the fields on errands, guiding themselves by the wind and contours in the ground rather than by canes or fence rows. They also repair the farm machinery and keep the equipment in adjustment.

Prepared for Blindness.

Henry tells how he discovered that he was going blind, and how he planned to overcome the handicap. He became aware of his plight when he noticed that the top of the barn was blurred against the sky and distant objects dimmed beyond recognition. While he could still see, Henry began preparing for his life of darkness. He memorized the location of everything on the farm, and noted details of operations that he would have to remember for a lifetime. When his sight vanished, Henry had done his job well because he was able to continue his daily tasks without difficulty.

As it became apparent that Aloysius' sight was failing, Henry tutored him in the art of memory. And when blindness came, he, too, was ready and kept right on working.

Three sisters, Elvira, Hilaria and Maivenia, comprise the Willems family circle. During the busy season the sisters don overalls and help with the field work. But these excursions to the fields are becoming less frequent. The sisters' sight also is failing, and they expect to join their brothers soon in the world of darkness.

Despite this promise of a somber future, the Willems are a cheerful family, each member co-operating and doing his share to keep the farm operating. Speaking from her wheel chair, white-haired Mrs. Willems avers that she is proud of the way her "boys and girls" carry on.

Admits Counterfeiting 'To Keep From Stealing'

ST. LOUIS.—Justice does not always sympathize with even a wise chooser of the "lesser of two evils." That's what Matthew Casey, Negro transient, discovered when he told U. S. District Judge Charles E. Davis he made counterfeit dimes to "keep from stealing."

"I'm a victim of circumstances, Your Honor," Casey explained. "I had to make counterfeit money to keep from stealing."

"Besides," he added, "I only used 'em to get good coins out of slot machines."

Judge Davis fined him $1 and gave him five years in prison.

Police Lights Catch Bicyclists Like Moths

DENVER.—In their effort to locate boys who do not have proper night equipment on their bicycles police are resorting to the "moth-flame" trick.

"We found the quickest way to capture violators was to draw up somewhere at night, touch the siren a couple of times and turn on the red lights. Those we were seeking came pedaling almost into our arms," one officer explained.

Goes to Donate Blood, Is Given Transfusion

MIAMI.—"This is the blood bank, isn't it?" asked an anemic-looking man.

"That's right," said the doctor.

"Lie on the table over there."

Later the little man arose.

"Why, I feel better!" he exclaimed.

"Loss of blood hasn't weakened me at all."

"Loss of blood?" gasped the doctor.

"You looked so weak we gave you a pint."

Household Hints

To eliminate the mutton flavor from lamb, cook it with raisins.

To preserve leftover pickles or pimientos, put in a glass tumbler and cover with salad oil.

Keep all cleaning rags that have been treated with oil in a covered container before putting away in closets. If this is done, fires may be avoided.

It is a good idea to have the kitchen table on rollers so you can move it wherever you want or need it.

If there is a constant smell of burning when cooking is going on examine gas burners. They are probably filled with sediment from "boilovers."

One teaspoon of cornstarch added to each cup of sugar used in making fudge will make it smooth and creamy with little beating.

Ambition Realized

By RICHARD HILL WILKINSON
(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

GUESTS at the Mountain House were thrilled when Rufus Little and his party arrived for the climbing season. Rufus was rated among the most accomplished climbers of the day. And everyone knew that the veteran's heart was set on conquering Mount Glacier.

No living man had ever reached Glacier's lofty summit. Others of the world's greatest pinnacles had succumbed to his skill and perseverance. And now Mount Glacier! Hundreds of others had failed. It had been said that no living man would ever reach its summit. And yet to accomplish that very end had become an obsession with Rufus Little. It meant the crowning achievement of his career.

There were three in Rufus' party—Alvin Daniels, who had scaled the most precipitous trail up the Matterhorn in record time; Perley Flagg, whose name was a byword of achievement among mountain climbers of the Alps; and Rufus himself. Alvin and Perley were not as sober or concerned about the success of the attempt as was their leader. To them it was a glorious adventure; to Rufus the accomplishment of a burning ambition.

The trio set out early one morning in late spring. It took the party a week to reach Glacier's base; a week of climbing that would have taxed the skill of unladen men, led alone these three who were forced to struggle over lesser ridges, each bearing on his back a minimum of 40 pounds of food and equipment.

Rufus had chosen his companions with foresight. When the base camp was established, both Daniels and Flagg were as eager for the ascent as when they started.

Following a day's rest, the party awoke before daylight and prepared to make their first ascent—the south wall. At the first flush of dawn they set out. Roped together, with Rufus in the lead, they made quick time over the comparatively easy southern defense. Once atop the wall they rested, ate, and began climbing again by two in the afternoon. High above them towered the cone-shaped summit.

Their present encumbrance was a knob known as the Camel's Hump. At first the slope was easy; the snow well packed for climbing purposes. But by late afternoon, with the hump's top still a good hour away, the trail became more precipitous. The slope shot upward at a dangerous angle.

No man had before reached the height to which the three had ascended.

Rufus kept in the lead, digging out footholds with his axe with studied care. He surmounted one ledge after another, gave his companions the advantage of a tight rope whenever possible, and finally, just as daylight began to fade, reached the top of the final ledge, and halted.

They made camp on the wind-blown summit of the Camel's Hump and went immediately to bed.

At dawn they were up and ready to begin again. Caching a quantity of their food supply, they began at once the ascent of the dangerous Pulpit Rock. The Rock presented the first real difficulties of the climb. It was accomplished by hitching the body up through a series of chimneys—narrow crevices with an almost perpendicular climb. Rufus, as usual in the lead, reached the last chimney's top at one-thirty in the afternoon. Below him his companions were obscured from view by an angle of rock.

Alone, with a hundred-mile-an-hour wind threatening at any moment to unseat him from his precarious perch, the veteran confronted and overcame one of the most hazardous of all ascents.

At the chimney's top a flat slab of rock, smooth as glass, sloped upward at a near perpendicular angle for a distance of 15 feet. A barely visible crack, not large enough for a man to insert in it his fingertips, extended the length of the slab. It looked impossible, but Rufus knew it had to be done.

Inserting the point of his climbing axe in the crack and making it secure by twisting the handle outward, he hoisted up his body, clung to the sheer face of the slab for a breathless instant while he loosened the point and repeated the maneuver, and again pulled himself up.

In this manner, miraculously, he reached the ledge above. When his two companions arrived at the chimney's top, they ascended the slab easily with the help of Rufus' tight rope.

That night the party camped on a ledge scarcely wide enough for all three of them to lie down side by side. Directly beneath them was a drop of some thousands of feet. Above, the summit was scarcely 700 feet away, a good half-mile of climbing. The temperature was far below freezing. The air had become light and was difficult to breathe. Every step during the past three or four hours of climbing had been torture, lung-racking. A rest was required every few feet.

Rufus' eyes began to burn with a strange light. No man had before reached the height to which the three had ascended.

As usual they were up before dawn, and at the faintest hint of daylight had begun the climb. Progress was snail-like, every foot gained meant a tremendous struggle. A slip now would mean destruction to all three, so precarious were footholds. By noon they had accomplished but a scant 200 feet. An hour later a heavy mist enshrouded them. Rufus knew the signs, and great as was his eagerness, he was not a fool. He led his companions back to the upper camp, and for two days they remained inside the shroud of a tent that was their camp, while a fierce storm raged without.

On the third day it cleared, and again they attempted to gain the summit. But again a storm overtook them and they were forced to retreat.

That night they held a conference. It was, they agreed, an impossibility for all three to gain the summit. Someone must be left behind. Another camp would have to be established further up, and it would be out of the question to transport enough food and equipment for three.

Daniels and Flagg were younger. They realized that if the thing could be done it would fall to them. And yet they hesitated, knowing the obsession that fairly haunted the mind of Rufus Little.

Rufus was silent for a long time. But at last he looked into the eyes of his two youthful companions and nodded. The two youths carried a memory of that look for many a year afterward.

Early the next morning Daniels and Flagg started out. All day long Rufus awaited in the camp below with his thoughts. At dusk the two youths returned. It was impossible, they said, to gain the summit. An insurmountable overhanging ledge jutted out and prevented progress from all angles.

Rufus listened to the pair and said nothing. The next morning he announced he was going to attempt the ascent alone. Daniels and Flagg tried to dissuade him, but the old veteran was obstinate. He departed with his companions' pleas ringing in his ears.

At night their companion had not returned and Daniels and Flagg fell into a doze. By noon of the next day they began to lose hope. By mid-afternoon they knew that no living thing would have been able to withstand the ravages of exposure for so long a period.

They held on for another day, however, and then descended to the next camp. Here they waited three days more and then sorrowfully began fighting their way downward.

That was the last time Rufus Little had ever been seen. The following spring two aviators announced their intention of flying over Glacier's summit, no small feat in itself. And in May of the same year the act was accomplished.

Among other things, the aviators reported seeing something that looked like a torn piece of jacket plastered against a tiny mount on the summit... Daniels and Flagg, both of whom heard the announcement, exchanged startled glances. And then, joyfully, they knew. Old Rufus Little had realized his ambition. Mount Glacier had been conquered!

How Moths Get By
An opening only four-thousandths of an inch wide is large enough to admit a newly hatched clothes moth larva, according to Wallace Colman of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine. Mr. Colman has been testing to find the smallest crevice through which larvae of the common webbing clothes moth can pass. His tests show that a larva just out of an egg can crawl through opening no wider than the thickness of a sheet of good quality bond paper. Most newsprint paper is slightly thinner. This explains why woollens packed in boxes or chests tight enough to keep out flying clothes moths still may suffer moth damage. Mr. Colman says when a flying moth finds the opening to a box of woollens too small to get through herself, she lays her eggs in the crack. The tiny larvae that hatch in a few days have no trouble crawling into the box and getting at their food supply of woollens. To keep clothes safe in a chest or trunk seal all cracks with gummed tape.

Carelessness Endangers New Stand, Profits.

By FRED TRENK
(Extension Forester, University of Wisconsin.)

Not all of the wreckage of war is to be found on the other side of the water. Rising log and lumber prices have caused many farmers to "cash-in" with their marketable trees.

Regardless of who does the cutting, there are two things any timber owner must bear in mind if he has any hope of ever making a second cut—first, he has to keep all livestock out so that young tree seedlings and sprouts have a chance to grow; and second, the slash, or limbs, tops and waste parts of trees resulting from logging or wind damage must not be allowed to burn in one large, destructive fire.

Woodland owners who fully understand timber values and who can estimate closely the volume of merchantable timber on their land are in a position to realize a larger return through a lump sale of standing timber. However, unless they are fully protected by contract, small trees, so essential to a future stand, are frequently sacrificed in the logging job.

There are means of selling timber by which the selling price might be increased, and the future productivity of the land be protected. This is by having all trees of merchantable size measured for their contents, and to have such trees "blazed" or marked so that a purchaser would know definitely what trees are to be cut and what are to be left. Such a selection might be on the basis of an arbitrary minimum diameter of trees to be cut, or it may provide for the removal of trees based on their present condition, rate of growth and on their effect on other trees growing under or near them.

Select Breeding Hens Before Culling Layers

This is an excellent time to start a poultry breeding improvement program. Dr. W. C. Thompson, professor of poultry husbandry at the New Jersey college of agriculture, Rutgers university, says that such a program should be quite easily established on many farms.

"After the pullets approach maturity, select the superior individuals. Use every bit of information which may be available in this process. Place numbered aluminum leg bands on the best 25 per cent. House the remaining 75 per cent of the oncoming flock in quarters where they can be forced for maximum safe egg yield.

"House the best quarter of the flock separately and keep records on them. Trapnesting for one year, starting October 1, is highly desirable.

"As trapnesting records accumulate, apply minimum standards. It is suggested that bands should be removed from individuals which failed to lay 50 or more eggs between October 1 and January 31, or which failed to average 25 eggs a month for March, April and May; or which failed to show a persistent production of at least 50 eggs between June 1 and September 30."

Dirty Cooling System Causes Hot Motors

Does the motor of your tractor overheat? If it does, G. W. McCuen, farm engineer, Ohio State university, suggests checking to see if the fan belt is too loose, if there is an accumulation of dirt on the outside of the cooling fins of the radiator, if the tubes in the radiator are clogged, or if the water jacket of the cylinders is badly limed.

If the tubes of the radiator are partially clogged with slime, McCuen advises this may be cleaned out by filling the cooling system with a caustic solution such as half a can of lye in four to five gallons of water, or one pound of sal soda to four or five gallons of water.

A safe way is to heat the solution and stir it. Then put the solution in the radiator cooling system and thoroughly heat it up by running the motor. This generally takes about 15 minutes, after which the solution may be drained and the cooling system thoroughly flushed out before refilling with water.

Lightning Rods

Lightning rods have an efficiency of 97 per cent if properly constructed and installed.

Inspection of rodded buildings which have been struck by lightning generally uncover one or more of several defects, the Board states. These include lack of grounding to permanent moisture, insufficient number of points, particularly at chimneys, cupolas, gables and other elevations; points and connections not electrically secure.

NEW EFFECTIVE HAY FEVER RELIEF

Hay fever, which annually causes more sneezes, more inflamed noses and more red, streaming eyes than any other scourge, may have its final big fling this September, all because a Pennsylvania electrical engineer was served a dish of corn meal mush which was entirely too salty.

The engineer, sneezing, and with all other hay fever manifestations, stopped at a hotel where he was served a dish of mush which he considered sending back as it was much too salty. Finally he ate it, however; the hay fever attack lessened, ultimately ceased. Next day he had three meals, all over-salted, and experienced his most comfortable time in years in the "hay fever season."

His analytical mind quickly grasped the possibility that the saline substance in his food was responsible for his relief.

About this time, Dr. E. E. Selleck, a graduate of Columbia University, met the engineer, made notes, and when he returned to his home, began experiments. Today Dr. Selleck declares he has found a certain means of relief for hay fever and is supported in his contention by other medical experts, and a nationally known chemical manufacturing concern, the Hollings-Smith Company, at Orangeburg, New York, has taken over making the remedy, which is called Nakamo Bell.

Describing the experiments, Dr. Selleck said, "After I was sure I had found a means of quickly relieving hay fever through the chloride group, I tested it in the most practical way I knew. I held a three day clinic, to which many hay fever sufferers responded, from ages ranging from 10 to 60 years. Each person was given two tablets with a little water. Some relief came to all within ten minutes. Reports on these cases during the ensuing weeks showed practically a complete cessation of symptoms."—Adv.
