A Candidate

I. Howard J. Williams, Principal of the Eighth Street School, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, announce my candidacy for the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

I was born on a farm in Iowa County, Wisconsin, June 6, 1904. I attended and graduated from a one-room (Iowa County) rural school, the Ridgeway (Iowa County) High School, and received my Bachelor of Education Degree from the Milwaukee State Teachers' College, and my Master's Degree from Marquette University. I taught two years in a one-room rural school in Sauk County, one year in a state graded school in Milwaukee County, four years as principal of a state graded school in Milwaukee County, and for the past eleven years have been a principal in the Milwaukee Public Schools.

MY PLATFORM IS AS FOLLOWS:
(1) The American System of Free Education was established over a hundred years ago by a great victory of organized workers, farmers, and the common folks. I am pledged to protect and foster this great American Tradition.

(2) The taxing power of the state and federal government must be the main support of education rather than forcing education to rely on the local property tax.

(3) I believe in consolidation of rural school districts on a county basis to afford an approach to equality of educational opportunity for rural and urban children. Consolidation should not be foisted off on any county but should be achieved in the democratic way through a referendum.

(4) I believe in democratic procedure at all levels of education with increased participation of students, parents, and teachers in problems of administration, selection of instructional materials, establishing curricula, etc.

(5) I believe in securing democratic education by means of retirement and pension laws, and proper salary schedules. The sixty-five year old retirement law for teachers in Wisconsin should be amended to include supervisors, principals, and superintendents.

(6) I believe in increased emphasis on the teaching of cooperation, conservation, labor history, economics, and the development of capacities for a full life.

(7) I believe provision should be made for more effective medical and dental attention for school children.

If you can subscribe to this platform, I shall appreciate your support in the election April 1, 1941.

Mr. Arthur T. Spence, President of the Milwaukee Board of School Directors, endorses my candidacy in the following statements:

"I have known Howard J. Williams both personally and professionally for a long time, and I know him to be a man of character and high principles. His progressive thinking and his intellectual integrity and sincerity of purpose mark him as a leader. His professional background, training, progress, and successive promotions preeminently qualify him for the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction."

Mr. Henry Loibl
Eagle, Wis.
Dear Henry:—

When I saw you last I told you we were leaving on a trip to Fla., and you asked me to drop you a line and I guess I said I would, but I am a little late. We left on Dec. 21 and arrived about one week later at Clear Water, we stopped there for 2 weeks, and then came on to St. Petersburg, have been here ever since, we are leaving for Miami the 26th for another month or so, and then we will start back for the north. We are both well although there is quite a lot of flu here several have died from it. The weather this year seems to be very changeable it is nice and warm one day and then just as soon as the wind shifts north it gets cold, that is cold for here, has been quite a bit of rain also. However we are enjoying it just the same. Fruit is plentiful and cheap but rents are very high. I intended to have you send us the Quill but I forgot to tell you, would appreciate it if you would send it to us at Miami Gen. Del. Hoping that you are getting along favorably with your bank affairs and that you are in good health. We remain as ever your friends.

This diagram shows you how to make a scroll pattern that you may use in different ways. Just rule a piece of paper in one-inch squares and then follow the diagram outlining the scroll so that its lines cross the squares exactly as they do here. Now, cut the scroll out and trace around it on the burlap repeating it at each corner; then fill in the flowers.

HALF the fun of hooking rugs is in making your own designs. All you have to do is to mark the pattern on burlap with a wax crayon and then go over it with a warm iron to set it. Simple flowers are easy to draw and in the olden days real leaves were used for patterns. Scroll designs combined with flowers are popular now for use with Eighteenth century furniture. The scrolls of the handsome rug shown here were hooked in gold color outlined in brown. The edge medium blue; the center darker blue and the

BULL HANDLING IS DANGEROUS

'Quiet' Animals Suddenly Become Vicious.

By DR. GEORGE E. TAYLOR
(Extension Dairyman at New Jersey College of Agriculture, Rutgers University)

Every day is a "lucky day" for the dairyman who is careless about handling dairy bulls—he's lucky to be alive!

It is often the "quiet" bull that suddenly turns on his caretaker. And dairy bulls which are closely confined are likely to get playful when they are handled, and just as soon as a playful bull discovers his own strength, he becomes vicious. But there are numerous ways to insure reasonable safety.

The bull stall should be constructed of durable material that will withstand heavy blows. Cement or extra heavy metal tubing is satisfactory. The fence surrounding the outside exercise paddock should also be built of extra heavy material. Discarded boiler flues that are set in cement posts are often used. As long as bulls are properly confined they have less chance of injuring human beings. From the standpoint of safety, it is a definite mistake to allow a bull to run with the dairy herd. The use of safety breeding pens further reduces the necessary handling to a minimum.

A strong bull staff which is attached to a heavy metal ring in the bull's nose should always be used when handling becomes necessary. A bull should be trained to a staff before one year of age. It is also wise to remove the horns at about one year of age or when the bull shows the first signs of becoming ugly. Removing the horns will often tame down a young bull for an indefinite period.

From a management standpoint, it is advisable to provide a pasture exercise paddock of several acres. On larger farms where several bulls are needed, they can be turned together in pasture. Thus they will get ample exercise and will not store up a lot of energy that must find an outlet sooner or later.

It is, however, a good practice to handle bulls occasionally in order to keep them accustomed to it. This should be done without taking any undue risk. Bulls that are never tied or handled in any way actually get afraid of a caretaker in time and may be most unruly. Always remember that any animal is usually able to sense when the caretaker is shy and timid. Train a bull so he will always understand that you mean business and that you are not afraid. A bold front plus safety precautions will avoid unnecessary injury.

Poor Year for Wheat Causes Premium Deficit

Crop insurance last year offset heavy losses by wheat growers, particularly in four of the largest producing states where near-record abandonments occurred, according to Leroy K. Smith, manager of the Federal Crop Insurance corporation.

Unusually large abandonments in Nebraska, Texas, Kansas, and Oklahoma, Mr. Smith said, accounted for the greatest part of about 22,000,000 bushels in indemnities paid farmers throughout the country under the 1940 crop insurance program. The growers paid premiums for their protection with almost 15,000,000 bushels of wheat, but the corporation paid out about 7,000,000 bushels more than it took in.

Mr. Smith emphasized that excessive acreage abandonments such as occurred this year will not take place every year, and that when the wheat belt experiences a year of average yields, premium collections can be expected to exceed indemnity payments.

Agricultural News

The New York-New England area produces 16.6 per cent of the national apple crop and has 16.9 per cent of the population.

The fish planting program of the forest service placed 288,000,000 fish in the streams and lakes of 34 states and Alaska during 1939, according to the U. S. department of agriculture.

Field seeds shipped in interstate commerce must be labeled correctly as to variety. Reports from the South of the seizure of mislabeled seed oats indicate active efforts to enforce the law.

Cornell university reports progress in the search for a muskmelon resistant to fusarium wilt. One variety developed succeeds on soil where ordinary varieties are killed by the wilt.

The 1940 U. S. acreage of soybeans reached the record figure of 5,011,000 acres but a decline in yield to 16.3 on the average per acre kept the total production of 81,541,000 bushels at 7 per cent below the 1939 crop.

La Libre Belgique

La Libre Belgique (Free Belgium) was one of the most famous of the "underground" newspapers during the first World War. Despite the persistent efforts of the German army of occupation, the newspaper was published and circulated at irregular intervals for more than three years. It was read eagerly by the Belgians, circulation rising at one point to 25,000 copies, although there were heavy penalties for mere possession of a copy.

In April, 1916, the plant was discovered by the Germans in a vacant factory in Brussels where it had operated for more than a year. Mass arrests followed, but the paper continued to appear with a new editor and a new plant.

Designers Use Chinese Styles In Spring Jackets, Capes, Hats

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SPRING 1941 promises a program of exciting new fashions. In answer to the challenge flung to American designers to carry on the style traditions of the world, there has been projected into the field of costume design a to-do and to-dare spirit that makes for refreshingly new ideas in clothes this season. Because of the encouragement given to originality and play of imagination there is that "something different" about current styling which fashion-minded women welcome and covet.

One of the most vital movements is the change taking place in the silhouette, especially in regard to suits. The new formula calls for longer jackets, straighter skirts and modified shoulders, and in these points is sounded the death knell for the carried-over suit you had hoped would be good this season.

As to shoulders, they certainly are under lively discussion. So important has the shoulder theme become that one is almost justified in coining a slogan declaring that a dress, suit or coat this season is only as chic as its shoulderline. Instead of exaggerated padding as heretofore the tendency in the newer versions is toward gently sloping and subtly rounded lines of grace.

There are breathtaking innovations, too, that are adding zest to the mode, not the least of which is the Chinese influence that is seen in colors, in millinery (coolie hats are latest), and in jackets and capes. Success for the new Chinese movement was mentioned at "Fashion Futures," that brilliant event at which authoritative style forecasts were dramatically presented in a spring revue. Beauty and simplicity of lines and simplicity in Chinese technique were pointed out in several fetching evening wraps and daytime suits. Two of the latter are pictured in the illustration herewith.

The jacket to the left credits green as a leading color for spring. The Chinese influence is apparent in its neat, trim lines and the gentle, natural shoulder slope. An all-round pleated black skirt completes this twosome. That the fashion group sponsors green is again evidenced in the jacket to the right, which also is Chinese-inspired. Note the styling in the black skirt.

And now for a most breathtaking thrill—capes! Watch capes go on parade this season along the highways and byways of fashion. There will be more capes than you can count, and doubtless you will be wearing a cape yourself for designers are turning them out in endless types, and in every length from short to long.

Much attention will be given to cape linings. A demure monotone cape is lined the South American way in purples, Peruvian pinks, blues, reds and yellows nicely assembled. The cape costume centered in the group pictured with its matching turban is typically a new vogue. It's smart in any color but particularly so in oatmeal tweed with dashes of brown or gay tangerine. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Easy to Make

Take a tip from smart dressmakers and use polka dot drama when you make accessories for your spring costumes. Sewing is really fun with modern sewing machine equipment and almost every locality has a sewing center where you can learn to make these smart accessories in an afternoon. For this turban and bag you will need three-quarters of a yard of 36-inch polka dot cotton pique, or print silk, if you prefer. An additional half-yard of 39-inch rayon taffeta for the bag lining and a half yard of buckram for bag reinforcement. By attaching the hemstitcher gadget to your machine you can finish off all edges to look professional.

Flowerly Prints

Very attractive for young girls are the new two-piece dresses that top a skirt of gay flowerly print. Go as far as you like in way of a vivid print—the more gypsy-like the better. Either the full peasant type skirt or the all-around pleated are up-to-date in style.

Prints Accompany Plain Materials

There is sort of a gypsy charm and fascination about the new dresses, be they cotton, silk, linen or rayon. The skirt has just enough fullness, introduced in subtle ways, to give it the casual look. For the blouse top, the material is in monotone. Quite smart is the black or navy jersey top.

For evening, lovely gowns are made of printed silk done in resplendent colors. A fitted bodice may surmount a skirt of billowy white mousseline on which is applied at strategic points flower clusters cut from the same print that fashions the waist.

Coats Take On Dressmaker Touch

Dressy coats show much dressmaker detail. Wool weaves used are light weight and yield beautifully to fabric and surface treatments. Allover braiding on the blouse top, done in self-color, enhances many a pastel coat. The new oatmeal shades, beige and brown, violet (very smart this season) pastel blue and muted pink are fashioned in this way. Tucking is another fabric treatment, likewise quilting which sometimes is done in an allover pattern in sprawling leaf and tendril design.

Handsome Plaids Come Into Picture

Coats, dresses, capes, jacket suits are being made of handsome plaids. Made up in the new coolie jackets, plaids top a monotone colored skirt. Capes of plaid bring drama into the spring style parade. These capes are long, and the style touch is achieved in epaulet effects formed of fringe.

A GOOD STORY

By MEREDITH SCHOLL (Associated Newspapers.) WNU Service.

GLESCA PAINE is a famous writer. Her name is featured in all the leading magazines of the country. Glesca cannot attribute her achievements to any mysterious or inherited gift. Her fame is the result of hard work and study, of constant, tireless plugging, and the will to write over heart-rending discouragement. In short, Glesca is no natural-born genius, no worker of miracles; her rewards are just and well-earned.

Some few months ago the people of Glesca's home town held a reception in her honor. Among those present was one Alice Merle, a newcomer to Hamstead, a woman of some social prominence—and also a writer. Unfortunately, however, she has acquired no fame, has had little success with her literary efforts. And she is inclined to be somewhat bitter about her fate.

Despite the recognized fame of the guest of honor, Alice's regard for Glesca was somewhat skeptical. She was, in fact, heard to remark that Glesca had doubtless won her reputation through some sort of drag and was now trading upon the selling power of her name. She even went so far as to suggest that Glesca's stuff wasn't so good, when you compared it with real literature, and she probably wouldn't know a good story if she saw one.

"You actually thought the story was good?" asked Alice.

Of course, Alice in no way betrayed this skepticism when Glesca was within earshot. In fact she was, on the contrary, quite gushy and complimentary.

However, as the evening progressed and honor after honor was heaped on the smiling Glesca, one watching Alice's face would have noticed that skepticism and bitterness were becoming more and more in evidence.

It was toward the end of the evening that Alice succeeded in getting Glesca alone in a secluded part of the hall.

Said Alice, "My dear, I think your work is wonderful! Really! I believe I've read about everything you've had published. And now, my dear, would it be asking too much if I requested a favor?"

Glesca, though certain of the nature of the request, could do naught but smile and nod her head and hope that Alice was about to request a favor somewhat different from the usual run of favors requested of famous authors. But she was doomed to disappointment.

"My dear, I knew you wouldn't refuse. So sweet of you. The favor is really nothing much. It concerns a story I have just completed. It occurs to me that it has some merit, yet I really would appreciate your professional advice before submitting it. Would you mind?"

Ordinarily Glesca would have refused. But the situation was a little different from ordinary. In the first place, Alice was a fellow-townswoman, her hostess, in a manner of speaking. And in the second place, Glesca saw in Alice's eyes a look that was slightly baffling. The look somehow resembled a challenge.

And so Glesca agreed to read Alice's manuscript, though she regretted her decision a moment after it was made.

The script came to Glesca's hand on the day following, neatly typed, with Alice's name on the by-line. Glesca glanced over the first page with casual indifference. But as she delved into page two she suddenly sat upright in her chair and read on with renewed interest. At the conclusion of the story Glesca found herself amazed and somewhat puzzled. The story was—actually—a well-done piece of work. It merited publication. It was, in fact, not the assortment of jargon that she had expected.

Glesca carefully folded the script, tucked it in her handbag, caught up a hat and headed for the house of Alice.

Alice received her guest graciously. They sat down together in the sitting room and looked at each other closely.

"My dear," said Glesca, "I have a confession to make. When I agreed to read your script I expected to find trash. I almost hoped I would. Believe me, I was tremendously surprised. It wasn't the sort of thing I expected to find at all."

"You actually thought the story was good?" asked Alice.

"I thought it was fine! Splendid! There is no reason at all why you can't place it with one of the better magazines. In fact, if you are willing, I'll handle the placing of it for you."

Alice looked thoughtful. She gazed through the window. She studied the floor. And at length her eyes came to dwell upon the kind, smiling and friendly countenance of Glesca.

Said Alice: "My dear, you have been honest and fair with me. I, too, have a confession to make. I feel guilty and ashamed. The story that I gave you to read was not written by me. I don't know who the author is. I clipped it haphazardly from a magazine and typed it off before coming to the reception. You see, heretofore I have misunderstood famous authors. I had made the remark that your stuff wasn't so good compared with that of real literary geniuses, and that you probably wouldn't know a good story if you saw one—and I wanted to prove that I was right."

Glesca smiled, a gracious smile. "Thank you for telling me. I'm so glad you decided it was the best thing for you to do. For, you see, I knew all the time that your story was a re-write, and, I'm ashamed to admit, I led you on, hoping you'd let me try and place it for you. I'm so glad it turned out this way. Now, I'm sure we can be the best of friends."

Alice was frankly aghast! "You knew it all the time! How wonderful! Now I'm positive that I was wrong in remarking that you couldn't tell a good story from a bad one. My dear, I'm thrilled!"

"In a way," said Glesca, "I'm thrilled, too. For you see, the story you clipped haphazardly from the magazine happened to be one of my stories!"

Film Sound Trickery Gives Way to Reality

Studio sound departments no longer can be classified under the heading of magic. The time was when trickery had to be resorted to in almost every effect. Today, sounds, like everything else in a picture, depend on realism. If a landslide is wanted, sound engineers go out and create one for their microphones. If it's the buzz of a mosquito, that's what it really is. Sometimes, when sounds are required to be unusual for certain effects, magic comes in. But, nothing is too great to be tackled, nothing too small to take time.

In the early days the microphone could not be moved and, if actors moved, there was a microphone at various places and the actor was cautioned not to move from one mike before he had finished a speech or to start talking until he got directly under or in front of another. Mikes were hidden in bouquets, in lamps, under tables, just about everywhere.

Ten years have done a lot to sound recording and the story of the progress is too technical to interest the layman. Today, the microphone does move, on the end of a swinging boom.

Sound progress has made many things possible. Not so long ago it was necessary to have special cartridges for gun shots; they made much smoke but little sound because sound valves might be shattered by the explosion. Today, a cannon shoots off under a mike with no ill effects.

But difficulties also have arisen, most of which have been licked for years. Long ago it was learned that deadening a window sill with blotting paper prevents rain falling on it from "popping." Silk has a tendency to crackle, so it's usually lined with linen. Newspapers must be dampened or they'll rustle too loudly. Typewriters must have soft rollers for keys to strike. It is now a strict rule that every extra have rubber heels. Actors have been known to ruin scenes merely because of jingling coins in their pockets. And, in orchestral recordings, in productions like "Strike Up the Band," conductors have caused strange disturbances by swishing their slender batons too vigorously in crescendo passages. All simple problems, but they keep cropping up. Sometimes they take hours to locate.

These observations were recently made by Douglas Shearer, director of recording for M.G.M.

Uses His Head

Down the long road raced the valiant horseman spurring his steed to ever greater effort. He was bringing the news from Ghent to Aix. He was the Spartan youth racing from Thermopylae to Athens. He was the heroic young officer carrying a message to Garcia. He was, wrapped up in one individual, all the great romantic bearers of tidings—not forgetting Paul Revere.

More specifically, however, he was Robert Rafel, Western Union messenger No. 297, running pell mell down the corridor on the first floor of the Chicago Daily News building.

And, as he burst through the Madison street door, Robert crashed head first through a large sheet of plate glass that workmen were preparing to place in a second-story window.

When he emerged from the resulting daze, the youth found he had suffered only a slight cut on one arm. H. Eisenscimmel, chief of the glazing crew, congratulated Robert on his escape and pointed out that the glass, 6 feet 6 inches by 9 feet 10 inches, was worth about $100.

Sandy's Blowing Appeared To Be a Bit Overdone!

He was of a thrifty turn of mind, having originally come from Scotland. One day he was told by a friend that instead of putting a quarter into the meter, much the same effect could be obtained by blowing smartly into the slot. That night he tried the experiment with most gratifying results.

This went on for some time, and finally an inspector from the gas company called to examine the meter. He was obviously puzzled by his investigation.

"What's the matter?" asked the economizing householder, innocently.

"Man," exclaimed the inspector, "I just can't make it out. According to my reading the company owes you one dollar and thirty cents."

Turkeys Fake Relics

The demand for seals and small gems from Pompeii and Herculaneum far exceeds the supply. Many of those sold are, in fact, cut in Italian workshops, after which turkeys are forced to swallow them. They remain in the gizzard, a natural millstone, which grinds them down and imparts a natural aged appearance.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its busy and worry irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!
