A CHANGE IN THE MEAT COURSE (See Recipes Below)

"Meat makes the meal," especial- | ly when there are husky, hard-working men to feed. But for those behind the scenes in the kitchen, thinking up a different and a flavorsome meat dish for each day out of the seven is no small task.

There are two ways to approach he problem. First, investigate problem. some of the less-for them is less. Most of them fairly abound in good flavor and need only to be properly cooked to be serious rivals to more expensive cuts.

If you are buying pork, ask the meat dealer to prepare you a handsome rolled sirloin roast. It's a thrifty cut not so well known as the pork loin roast but it has decided advantages. Two sections of the pork sirloin are boned and tied together into a solid roll of meat. The round, compact slices offer no obstructions to the knife, and are the answer to a carver's prayer. The picnic shoulder of pork is another cut of exceptional flavor. Have it boned, stuff it with spinach and roast it.

If it's too soon for another leg of lamb, buy a section of lamb breast and have it rolled with a layer of sausage. Slice off the meat as you would a jelly-roll; you'll have the neatest pinwheels imaginable. Lamb shoulder and lamb shoulder chops are two other not-so-wellknown possibilities.

The second way to coax some variety into your meat dishes is to try new ways of flavoring cuts that you serve often. If much of your meat supply comes from a frozen

New Silk Lingerie Fascinates With Its 'Dressmaker Touch'

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Garments of black silk sheers profusely trimmed with fine black lace are featured throughout all lingerie collections of note. In this modish ensemble of gown and boudoir coat, the latter, as you will observe, is styled with a side drape finished off with a border of sheerest black lace. The gown underneath is also lace-trimmed. To add to this twosome, designers suggest a third "black beauty" (not illustrated) lace-lavished costume slip to wear under your newest black party dress of net, silk chiffon or lace.

Centered in this group picture is a white silk satin nightgown with hand-sewn Alencon lace which yields to deep V-treatment with flattering shoulder bretelles of the same sumptuous lace. Its semi-princess lines resemble the manner of a party dress.

A new trend to modesty in silk night robes is the adorable gown shown in the inset. This empire nightgown of heaven blue silk crepe reveals a marked tendency to exploit light blues in lingerie fashions. This model has a pleated bosonan oval neckline with a wide bordering of handsome lace about the hemline. The same lace repeated on the short waist achieves a quaint empire silhouette.

Shades of the Gibson girl! Here it is in modernized version as shown in the camisole-and-pantie set to the right in the group. This combina-tion garment of pinkish mauve silk satin is trimmed with Alencon lace dyed to match. The camisole zips suffering is requisite.—Richter.

EVERYONE should have a hobby. It is almost safe to say that the most alluring, the most all-prevailing hobby among the fair sex is that of acquiring a wardrobe of lovely lacy soft and silken lingerie. Certain it is that women's enthusiasm for pretty "undies," negligees and other flattering boudoir apparel needs no urge. This is true of brides, debutantes, teen-age lassies, career women—in fact, everyone from girl to grandma, no matter how tailored and tweedy her exterior. When it comes to comfort, relaxation and self expression of that innate love for the beautiful, it is in the touch and the wear of beguiling silken lingerie that most women feel the desires of their heart realized.

One of the most interesting gestures in modern lingerie styling is the dressmaker touch given to gowns and negligees. Many of them approach evening gowns in their technique and style. In fact, evening gown tactics are known to have been adopted to such an extent that in some instances frilled and laceladen, ribboned "nighties". have actually gone dancing with onlookers or skewered into being none the wiser. If you have ever visited an American silk industry exhibit, you would have noted that the emphasis on beguiling silken lingerie displayed in exquisite boudoir environs is more than impressive.

It also answers to the call for black.

foods locker, this is your best bet. Have pork chops cut double thick and stuff them with a tart mixture of sauerkraut and apple. Your family will beam approval when you serve that combination! Or make your next ham loaf like an upside-down cake so that when you turn it out, there are rows of brightas-a-dollar apricots across the top. Try canned gooseberries as a relish with ham or beef, or canned Damson plums with veal.

6 loin pork chops (cut 1-inch thick) 1 cup sauerkraut (drained) 1 cup tart, red cooking apple (diced)

- (unpared)
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1/2 cup sauerkraut juice.

Have a pocket made from the outside of each chop. Combine sauer kraut with finely diced unpeeled apple and stuff the chops with the mixture. Season them with salt and pepper brown on and both sides in hot fat in a heavy skillet. Add sauerkraut juice, cover, and finish the cooking in a moderate oven (350 degrees). Bake for 11/2 hours, and remove the cover during the last 15 minutes of baking to brown the chops.

Round Steak, Western Style. (Serves 6)

- 2 pounds round steak
- 2 tablespoons butter
- teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 2 medium onions (sliced)
- <sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> lemon (sliced) 1 No. 1 can condensed tomato soup
- (1<sup>1</sup>/<sub>3</sub> cups) 1 cup water

Have round steak cut 3/4 inch thick. Spread with butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Arrange slices of thinly cut onion and lemon over steak. Dilute tomato soup with water and pour over steak. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 2 hours uncovered.

Boneless Sirloin Pork Roast With Stuffed Apples.

Have the meat retailer remove the tenderloin and bones from two sirloin sections, reverse the ends, in the pan, leaving 2 tablespoons only. Season the roll with salt and pepper. Add sliced onion, tomatoes and Worcestershire sauce. Cover tightly and cook very slowly until done, about 11/2 hours. Slice into pinwheels, using a very sharp knife.

Cushion Style Pork Shoulder With Spinach Stuffing. (Serves 10)

- Boned picnic shoulder (about 5 pounds)
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅓ teaspoon pepper
- canned)
- 2 tablespoons onion (minced)
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 cups fine, soft bread crumbs
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper

Have the picnic shoulder boned and sewed on two sides at the market. This leaves one side open for inserting the stuffing. Season the surface of the pork shoulder with salt and pepper. Combine the spinach, onion, butter, lemon juice and bread crumbs. Season with salt and pepper and use to fill the cavity of the roast. Sew or skewer the edges together. Place the shoulder, fat side up, on a rack in an open roasting pan and roast in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until done. Allow about 40 minutes per pound for the roasting.

Furs for Women Vary in Durability

Probably no other article of women's apparel is surrounded by quite the aura of mystery as are fur coats. Only an expert can tell anything about the quality of furs. The best the average woman can do is to learn something of their wearing qualities and then select the type best suited to her needs.

Among the most durable furs are classed beaver, fisher, mink, otter, and badger. Other pelts that wear very well are Alaskan seal, kolinsky, krimmer, marten, muskrat, Persian lamb, raccoon and skunk. If you are selecting furs to stand hard daily wear, you will find these most satisfactory. Less substantial, but not classed as actually fragile, are caracul, ermine, fox, leopard, lynx, marmot, nutria and opossum. These require constant care and should be sent to the furriers frequently for checking. Fragile furs include sable, chinchilla, squirrel, mole, chipmunk and kidskin.

Sold in Matching Colors

The mix-and-match movement has invaded the field of ski clothes. This year, along with the regulation twopiece costumes, you will find jackets and trousers in contrasting and matching colors.

The separate jackets are as trimly tailored as are those of more conventional suits and close with slide fasteners all the way up the front. They are reversible, with poplin, treated to be wind resistant, on one side and bright wool plaid on the other.

MARY'S EDUCATION 33 By CHARLES HARTE (McClure Syndicate-WNU Service.)

DON'T want to be dis-turbed," Dr. Thomas Clem-" ent told the boy who an-swered his office door. Then he went into his inner office, spread out writing materials, and settled himself to a difficult task.

"Wish I could write a prescription and be done with it," he thought. "How on earth does a man write to a girl he wants to propose

Thomas Clement was thirty-five and had never, if the truth must be told, proposed to a girl. He had, for the last half dozen years, realized that he would some day probably be doing just what he was now-trying to propose to Mary Stanton. But he hadn't known how hard it would be.

Mary was the daughter of his old friend, Dr. Stanton, who had left Thomas trustee of Mary's very meager fortune. It had been on Thomas' advice that Mary had eaten into this fortune to pay for a college education. He had told her that, with a good education, she would be able to take care of herself without worrying about much of an income from her small inheritance. All the time he had known that he intended to marry Mary when she got through college, and that she would never be dependent either on her inheritance or on her own labors.

Thomas had not seen Mary all that last winter. She had spent her Christmas holidays with friends, and had not returned to her aunt's, where she made her home in a town a dozen miles away, until after her graduation. But Thomas had seen her on graduation day and that was what made this letter of proposal so difficult. Mary had turned out to be the most beautiful, most desirable, most lovely girl in the world. Far too good for him, decided Thomas. It was really hardly fair for him to think she might ever care to marry him.

So he settled himself down to his task with doubts and misgivings. "Dear Mary," he wrote, and then stopped, pondering on the next important word.

There was a knock on the door. "Who is it?" he called. Then he heard Mary's voice. "Bobby says you don't want to be disturbed. But can I see you? It's awfully important."

She sat down at the other side of his table. "Well, as you didn't come to see me I came to see you." She smiled bewitchingly at him. "You haven't been over since I got home and I got home a week ago tomorrow.'

"Well-" started Thomas.

"Oh, don't apologize. And don't stop your writing. I've got some awfully important news, but I'll just wait here until you're through." Thomas insisted that she tell him. here at eight or before morning of fice hours begin then. And, by the way, I meant to tell you that, in view of our present relations, I shall call you Miss Stanton and you had better call me Dr. Clement. Please wait in the outer office, and I'll call you when I need you."

That night, at nine o'clock, Mary, very weary, was working over Dr. Clement's bills in his private office. He had told her to work there till he came back. Finally, when he did come in, she turned to him with as much of her natural enthusiasm as her fatigue had left her. But Dr. Clement merely smiled formally and took his chair. "If you have finished with those," he said, "you may go. And remember, eight o'clock tomorrow."

Mary rose and took her hat from the hanger in the entry. "I sup-pose," she said, putting her head in at the door, "it's all right for me to go home alone? It's an awfully dark block."

"I suppose so," said the doctor. "And by the way, Miss Stanton, please wear a slightly more professional costume tomorrow. Some thing plain white, please. Roses and ruffles are all very well for a woman to wear in her own homequite charming, in fact. But quite inappropriate in a doctor's office." Mary bit her lip, but tears of mortification came to her eyes. She took the fading rose from her belt and tried to hide her trembling lips in it.

"Haven't I been any good at allany help?" she said in a low voice. "We will hope for a little steadier nerve tomorrow," said the doctor. 'It was annoying to have you so upset over that very slight office operation this morning."

"It was very close and warm," she murmured.

"It will be warmer as the sum-mer goes on," he said firmly.

He reached over and took the rose she had left on the table, but he kept his chair as she walked slowly to the door. Then she turned back, tears in her pretty, tired eyes rolling over to her pale cheeks.

"Perhaps," she said, "if I've been such a failure-and tried so hardperhaps I won't make a good doctor, after all."

Thomas was on his feet and had her in his arms in a moment. "Mary," he said, "perhaps I've been too unkind. But I don't want you to be a doctor-I want you to be a doctor's wife."

Literary Criminal

It was the spirit of such endeavor, perhaps, which a year ago led a 22-year-old Buffalo, N. Y., drafts-man to conceive the Homeric proj-ect of stealing the Shakespeare first folio, one of the most bizarre modern crimes.

It was a venture comparable in principle to the classic theft of the Mona Lisa, and equally impossible of successful completion.

The Shakespeare folio, the first compilation of the bard's plays printed in 1623, was in the library of Williams college at Williamstown, Mass., and was one of the few copies extant.

They are worth upwards of $50,-000, and the ownership of each is known to thousands of rare-book connoisseurs

Had Experience.

William Kwiatkowski already had considerable experience in illicit literary transactions, so the assistant district attorney's office says. In 1936 he sent to a magazine as his own work a story that had been published by another magazine 14 years before, and had been discovered. He was put on probation upon his agreement to return the $300 he had been paid.

This time he laid more careful and elaborate plans.

To do the actual stealing, he enlisted a friend, Donald Lynch, and assigned his own younger brother, Edward Kwiatkowski, 19, to assist. Last February 7, Edward drove Lynch to Williamstown, and the latter, equipped with the simple disguise of a pair of scholarly shellrimmed glasses, and carrying a brief case, walked into the Williams library.

To the librarian, Miss Lucy Osborne, he presented a letter forged in the name of the president of Middlebury, Vt., college, identifying the bearer as a Middlebury professor, and asked to see the folio. Miss Osborne escorted Lynch to a private room and put the valuable volume on a table before him.

Exchanged for Dummy.

The minute she left the room, Lynch slipped the book into his brief case and substituted a dummy he had brought. He waited a few moments and then rushed out, affecting restrained excitement.

The folio was so marvelous, he exclaimed, that he must call his wife to come see it. Then he van-

Dense Growth Protects Soil On Curves.

An improved labor-saving method of protecting stream banks with a mat of growing willow shoots has been worked out by the soil conservation service. It is particularly effective where small streams are cutting into their banks at the outside of curves or where streams that normally flow gently rise to destructive heights in rainy seasons. The willows throw up a dense growth that furnishes first-class protection.

The first step is to grade steep banks to about a 45-degree angle. Then cut willow poles and prune them roughly. The goles should be long enough to extend from below low water in the stream to the top of the sloped bank and should be laid about two feet apart the day they are cut to prevent drying. Cover the poles with a 6 to 12-inch layer of brush-using the willow prunings and other brush if needed.

Anchor the brush mat with old woven wire laced together with smooth wire. Set stout posts in the bank and tie the mat down with wires from the posts to heavy stones sunk in the stream below the mat. Provide occasional vertical anchors of logs laid up and down the slope and held by stout stakes.

Poles cut in fall and winter when the willow are dormant will live and in spring will root in the bank and send up growing shoots that form a living mat.

Willows have long been popular as bank protectors, but the new method economizes labor, gets a dense growth with minimum effort, and the work can be done in winter when farm work is slack.

Use Abundance of Nails

When Erecting Buildings In the erection of farm buildings, poor nailing of joints is often the cause of later damage to these buildings by windstorms. Skimping of the number of nails often means increased upkeep costs. A poor job of nailing in the construction or repair of farm buildings and the use of too few or too small nails result in weaknesses at the joints. Many farm buildings are blown down or sag because not enough or too small nails were used in their construction and while small nails do not crack the lumber so much as larger ones, they are not so effective in holding the building rigid.

Good nailing practice consists mainly in using the proper kind, size, and number of nails for each particular part of a wooden structure. In order to get the full at once. He closed his jaws sharply to be braced against the shock that was coming. He looked stern and old as Mary leaned across the table and took both his muscular hands in hers.

"Promise," she said, smiling again, "that you'll take me seriously?"

"I promise," he said, feeling very uncomfortable and rather helpless, imprisoned by her charm and personality. He had tucked the letter paper, with her name on it under his blotter when she first came into the room.

"Guess what I'm going to tell you!" she said.

"Going to be married?" he queried, trying to seem not too concerned-just showing a guardianike interest.

"No! Going to be a doctor-like you.'

"For heaven's sake," he gasped, looking at her slight, girlish figure, and thinking of clinic and dispen-sary days. "What ever put that idea into your head?"

"You did, of course," she said. "You told me to spend my money for an education. Well, nowadays when you've got through college you aren't really educated. So I'm going to use it all up and borrow some in order to get the kind of education I want."

"I always thought that when you finished college you would get married," said Thomas.

"How funny! I'm not at all interested in that sort of career-not at all. Now, I want your advice about where to go and everything." When Mary came back next morning to get his advice, he had made his plans. He told her that, if she ever expected to make good at medical college, she must harden herself. He would take her in his office as a helper, and she could gradually become used to the sort of work she would have to do. He would pay her a small salary and she could live at the boarding house down the street, where she would be nearby.

When Mary got to his office next. morning at nine, dressed in a dainty green linen frock, he was not in. She took a rose from the bowl on his waiting-room table and tucked it into her belt, then she sat down to read a magazine in his private office.

A few minutes later the doctor came into the room. "A little late, aren't you?" he asked coolly. "I lorgot to say I expect that you be word career.

newspaper notice she had a different attitude toward herself. She felt the responsibility of her talent and the necessity for her to sacrifice home and loved ones that she might pursue her career.

"It's a gift,' she told Joe Watson, her boy friend, "a gift that was given me by the Creator. I am destined to have a career."

"Where do I come in?" he asked, suddenly frightened.

"But don't you see, dear, this is something I'm not responsible for. Don't you understand?"

"No!" said Joe savagely. "I'm darned if I do. There's no call greater than the call to marry a decent man when you've pledged yourself." "You wouldn't hold me to that?"

she asked in surprise.

"Oh, no, not at all. A little matter like that is nothing when it comes to a career," he answered, but his sarcasm was completely lost on Cecilia who threw her arms around his neck.

Reaching New York one cold winter evening she went straight to the Y.W.C.A. and after much pulling of wires she got a hearing with Signor Musanti, a teacher of moderate reputation but of great honesty. With confidence she started to sing a dramatic aria that had brought the house down at Clearview. For a second Musanti listened, then raised his hand.

'Stop!'' he commanded, jumping up and pacing the floor angrily. You sound like a nanny goat. Go home-go home quick and wash dishes-anything but sing."

"There, there," he said in quick sympathy, patting her heaving shoulders. "It happens all the time. I know. A girl sings at some church festival at home. The local papers flatter her, she swallows it, friends praise. She leaves home for a CAREER! Every week I get them. Now, buy a ticket and go home." Cecilia felt herself being gently put out the front door, but there was healing in his kindness. With a gulp she swallowed her pride, took his advice and went back home, but on the train a plan of action came to her. Just out of New York she sent a telegram to Joe Watson: "I'm coming back tomorrow on No. So homesick for you. Sixteen. Cecy."

And to this day Joe worships her for her devotion and she worships him for saving her pride. Only a snobbish few doubted her actions and notice how she shudders at the ished. The theft was discovered in a few minutes. Massachusetts state police quietly arranged observation of every bookstore.

Whatever strange plans he may have had for disposing of the folio probably never will be learned, because five months later, while Kwiatowski was still biding his time, Lynch became overburdened by his guilty knowledge and went to the police in Albany.

They turned him over to the Massachusetts police, who took him to Buffalo, where the whole group presently were rounded up by federal agents.

A short time ago William Kwiatowski, the "master mind," was sentenced to two years in prison. His brother-in-law, the financier, and Lynch, the actual thief, got a year and a half; and the younger Kwiatowski a two-year sentence, suspended.

A matrimonial agency put him in touch with Mrs. Hurst last July, he said, but he had told her that be was only 80, for fear she would not be interested if she knew he was 90. strength of the common wire nail under a side-ways pull, it must be driven at least two-thirds of its length into the piece receiving the point if light-weight wood is being nailed. When it is not possible to get this much penetration, more nails should be used because the strength increases directly with the number of nails.

For wall sheathing and roof boards of the ordinary kind, two eight-penny nails at each nailing point are usually enough. In assembling rafters it is well to consider that a severe storm may lift the roof as a whole. Therefore at least three or four nails of the proper length should be used to fasten each rafter to the top of the side walls. The proper number of nails in such places sometimes seem to be more than necessary but they may mean the difference between a wrecked roof or one in place after a storm.
