Two Seriously Hurt

Last Saturday morning about 11:00 o'clock LeRoy Graves and his mother, Mrs. Henry Graves, both of Sullivan, met with a very serious accident about a mile from Sullivan near the Catholic Church, the result of a head-on collision with another car. They were on their way to Oconomowoc to meet her daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Cobb of Akron, Ohio, at the time of the accident. Guy Graves was one of the first to arrive at the scene and after calling Deputy Sheriff Glenn Zimmerman to investigate the crash, rushed his mother and brother to St. Mary's Hospital, Watertown. Mrs. Graves, 74, was very seriously injured, receiving a broken knee cap, broken arm, broken nose and scalp wounds which required 33 stitches. Roy has a concussion of the skull and cuts and bruises. They are both reported as coming very well under the circumstances.

The driver of the other car, Jerome Clunie of Milwaukee, escaped injury but a woman passenger whose name was not learned was the most seriously hurt of the three as it was thought that she suffered a broken back and a broken leg. She was taken to a hospital in Oconomowoc. Mrs. Graves is a sister of Alva Jaquith and related to the Turner family.

Praise U.S. Citizenship

The values and merits of American citizenship should be made as simply apparent as the qualities of a piece of merchandise to have a general acceptance by the people, believe the Rosicrucians. Charles M. Jentsch of Route 1, Eagle, Wisconsin, District Commissioner of the Rosicrucian Order, AMORC, announces the distribution of hundreds of thousands of folders throughout the nation by the philosophic order, pictorializing and dramatizing the Bill of Rights of the Constitution of the United States. Mr. Jentsch says a picture more effectively conveys the many privileges which Americans enjoy under their Constitution than do lengthy explanatory articles. A picture of an advantage or right likewise can be interpreted by every individual in accordance with his comprehension, regardless of his education or social background. The folders which are distributed from San Jose, California, to every section of the United States, quote excerpts from the Ten Amendments to the Constitution which constitute the Bill of Rights and opposite each of these there appears a thumb-nail illustration of what they guarantee the citizen. Mr. Jentsch states that he has been advised that a series of these folders will be published throughout the year as part of a better citizenship campaign conducted by the Rosicrucian Order. Future folders will also graphically portray those common, but frequently not realized, benefits of residence in the United States of American. The folders are being offered without cost or obligation.

Farm Bureau Meeting

A very pleasant evening is assured. Let's see you there!

Ways of making homemade mattresses from surplus cotton will be demonstrated at the 1941 Wisconsin Farm and Home Week, Madison, February 3-7.

1941 begins with the average of prices of farm products about the same as at the outset of 1940, but with better prospects for some advance as consumer incomes increase.

The outlook is for higher farm prices of chickens this winter than last, since the supply is smaller and consumer demand is better.

The United States supply of wheat has been increased to over a billion bushels. Carryover on July 1 next may be 400-million bushels... the largest on government record.

A portable sawmill that goes to the logs may be the answer to the over-cutting generally found near permanent sawmills.

IF A CHAIR is all legs, angles and curves in the wrong places, a slip cover may do as much for it as a becoming frock will do for an awkward girl. The right color, a dash of style, fabric cut to bring out graceful lines and cover defects, and presto—a new personality for the ugly duckling!

That was the treatment given a set of old chairs like the one shown here. A two-piece frock was planned to repeat tones in the wall paper of the room in which the chairs were to be used. The bold stripes of the putty tan, green and wine red material gave just the right contrast with the flowered

AROUND THE HOUSE

Ivy grows best in water in the house and in a glass vase through which light may reach roots.

Grease the measuring cup before measuring syrup or molasses and it will not stick to the sides of the cup.

If rubber gloves are sprinkled on the inside with corn starch or powder they will slip on more easily.

To keep brown sugar moist and fresh, store in a covered container with a freshly cut piece of lemon.

When two glasses become wedged together place cold water in the upper one and set lower in warm water. They will then separate with little effort.

BREEDING HENS NEED VITAMINS

Diet Will Influence Health of Baby Chicks.

By PROF. C. S. PLATT
(Associate Poultryman, Rutgers University)

Check carefully on the diet of breeding hens. Vitamins A, D and G, or riboflavin, for instance, are necessary not only to the health and normality of chicks when hatched but also to their growth during their first few weeks of life.

The yellow corn and dried alfalfa commonly fed to birds contain enough vitamin A, and cod liver oil or sardine oil provide sufficient vitamin D. However, vitamin G, which is contained to some extent in dried alfalfa, is lacking in the other three products and is also lacking generally in poultry rations. But this factor may be added through the use of dried yeast or liver meal, although these products are relatively expensive. Or it may be supplied by dried skim milk or dried buttermilk if used in sufficient quantities.

For practical purposes, 100 birds should receive one pound of dried buttermilk or dried skim milk daily, either incorporated in the dry mash at the rate of 10 per cent, or fed separately in the moist mash directly in the quantity recommended. When a high quality of dried whey is used, the amount can be reduced to three-quarters of a pound per 100 birds daily. As in all vitamin products, the only guide for the purchaser is the reputation of the manufacturer for furnishing grades up to guarantee.

When the essential vitamin G quality is incorporated in a dry mash, care must be taken to insure that 100 birds daily eat at least 10 pounds of mash, otherwise their diet will not be complete. Because of this fact, breeding stock should be limited in the quantity of grain fed each day in order to encourage the proper consumption of dry mash.

Regrassing Old Fields Reduces Insect Danger

Range land well grassed and fairly free of weeds is not a favorable breeding place for most of the insects that are crop pests. Good woodland is also fairly safe. But the weedy old fields in moist regions and weedy land abandoned as too dry or too infertile for grain growing have proved almost "ideal breeding places for a large variety of agricultural pests, one of the most important of which is grasshoppers," according to Dr. P. N. Annand of the United States department of agriculture.

Abandonment of land in the Northwest—cropped during the twenties and stricken in the dry years of the thirties—has been a highly important factor in the grasshopper plagues of recent years, says Dr. Annand.

In the first years after abandonment and before a good grass cover can be restored, these fields are at their worst as a hazard to nearby crops. Any process that speeds up the regressing of land that never should have been ploughed is a step in the direction of insect control.

Mineral Deficiency

When cows and calves gnaw at fence posts and rails, it is usually a sign of mineral deficiency in the ration.

A sufficient quantity of calcium is usually contained in legume hays such as cowpea, soybean, clover and alfalfa if these crops are grown on soil not deficient in lime. Where the grain ration contains 30 per cent of wheat bran, cottonseed meal and soybean meal, there is usually a sufficient amount of phosphorus.

However, it will do no harm to allow the cows and calves free access to a mineral mixture composed of one part salt and four parts of steamed bone meal.

Agricultural News

The supply of vegetable seed for 1941 planting is expected to be somewhat short.

The milk of sheep, goat and buffalo is used for cheese-making in many European and Oriental countries.

Two-thirds of the people in South America are in agricultural occupations. One-fourth of the people in the United States are similarly engaged.

Trade between the U. S. and Latin America amounts to about $1,000,000,000 annually, or about one-fifth of U. S. world trade.

U. S. farms and ranches annually produce eight times the amount of beef exported to all countries by Argentina in an entire year.

Argentine hides now have their largest market in this country, the United States taking about 60 per cent of the total produced by the South American republic.

Daring Young Scot Slaps Out Flames In Blazing Bomber

'Bravest Deed' of War Wins Britain's Rarest Medal, Victoria Cross.

LONDON.—A Scottish youth of high school age, not long since a shoe clerk, lying in bed in a British hospital, wrote to his mother to tell her about an experience he had had in a bombing raid over German territory.

"My pilot," he related, "has had the distinguished flying cross, so I expect I shall get something, too, but I'm glad that I am alive, without worrying about what I am getting!"

His deed, however, is held by observers to have been the most amazing in the war to date, and the young man has visited Buckingham palace to receive from his king the highest decoration which the British empire can bestow upon its valorous warriors—the Victoria Cross.

A year ago Sergt. John Hannah, 18 years old, wireless operator in the royal air force, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hannah of Glasgow, was selling boots and shoes in the great industrial city on the Clyde. Today he is the youngest V. C. of the war and the first Scot to receive the honor.

Incredible Coolness.

His decoration followed an act of almost incredible coolness and courage performed during a bombing raid on enemy barge concentrations at Antwerp on September 15.

Almost blinded when an incendiary shell burst inside his plane, and with ammunition exploding all around him, Sergeant Hannah, single handed, fought the blaze which threatened to destroy the aircraft in which he was wireless operator-gunner.

After a furious 10 minutes in a blazing aerial inferno, he succeeded in extinguishing the flames, and thus enabled the plane to be brought safely home.

The official description of Sergeant Hannah's heroism tells how the fire in the plane, fanned by air rushing through the holes caused by the shell, made the bomb compartment an inferno.

All the aluminum sheet metal on the floor of Hannah's cockpit was melted away, leaving only the cross-beamers between Hannah and the earth thousands of feet below.

Forcing his way through the fire, Hannah obtained two extinguishers and fought the blaze with them. When they were empty he continued to beat the flames with his log book until the fire was out.

Although badly burned about the face and eyes, he then crawled along the plane, found that the navigator and rear gunner had been forced to "bale out," and immediately took over the navigator's important maps and log, which he handed to his pilot.

Inconceivable Courage.

In a tribute to Sergeant Hannah, the air officer commanding the Hampden bomber group where he is stationed said: "It is almost inconceivable that any one could have had the courage or the presence of mind to tackle such a fire."

"There is no doubt that Sergeant Hannah must have realized that, by delaying his escape, he had deprived himself of his last chance of getting away from the aircraft.

"His action is certainly one of the clearest examples of the most conspicuous bravery and extreme devotion to duty under the most harassing conditions that I have come across."

The pilot of the aircraft which Sergeant Hannah saved, Pilot Officer Clare Arthur Hovendon Connor of Toronto, Canada, has been awarded the D. F. C.

Times Are Too Rapid

For Robber on Bicycle
ST. LOUIS.—A hint to holdup men: Don't attempt a getaway on a bicycle in this streamlined age.

Cecil C. Hood tried, according to police, and came to grief in short order. They say he admitted entering Amos Johnson's grocery and taking $21 at gunpoint, then mounting a bike he had stolen previously and wheeling away.

His broadcast description was heard by three detectives in a scout car who saw him pedaling furiously along the street.

Tip Put Into Fare Box

For Kindly Bus Driver
DALLAS.—Augustus T. Poovey, city bus operator, had explained as much about Dallas as he could to an elderly out-of-town couple riding his bus. Upon departing, the man said, "I certainly thank you for showing us around—here's a tip," and dropped a handful of small coin into the fare box. The fare box is emptied by the company. Drivers never share its content.

Miner Works 78 Years;

Then Decides to Retire
LANSFORD, PA.—William Gibson, 85 years old, who went to work in the mines when he was seven and has worked in the anthracite fields ever since, has decided to retire. He is the oldest employee of the old mining company in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania.

Under Two Presidents

Only two men have been vice presidents of the United States under two different Presidents—George Clinton, who served under Jefferson and Madison, and John C. Calhoun, who served under John Quincy Adams and Jackson, says Collier's. Neither completed the two full terms, however, as Clinton died in office and Calhoun resigned, the only man to leave this position voluntarily in the history of this country.

Fashion-Wise Women Take Up Crocheting With Real Zest

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN you pick up your newspaper these days, or flip through the pages of your favorite magazine, more often than not you'll see pictures of stage, radio and motion picture stars, college girls, club women and debutantes, all busy at a new hobby—crocheting!

A crocheting fad is sweeping the country. Crochet hooks are being wielded by busy fingers from Maine to California, from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico. The vogue has taken such hold that nowadays when a deb reaches into her handbag, it's probably for a crochet hook rather than a lipstick.

Mind you, it's not just the home girls interested in housewifely arts who are crocheting. This time it's the college girls whose campus-bound trunks, returning from mid-winter homecomings, fairly bulged with unfinished sweaters and blouses and accessory items into which, no doubt, they will be putting the final stitches in the lecture room, pacing busy hands to busy minds. In the city thoroughfares it's the debutantes who are crocheting in taxicabs speeding to and fro in their round of social engagements. Stage and radio stars are at it too, while they wait their cues, all of which means that crocheting has definitely reached the glamour stage.

Lapel Gadgets

Jewel gadgets continue to flourish in midseason jacket lapels. With the discarding of burdensome winter fur coats comes evidence of the importance attached to suits for midseason and early spring wear. With suits in the limelight, then it is that the gadgets so popularly worn on jacket lapels will come into their own with renewed emphasis. While women are willing and eager to discard their fur topcoats during the interval that spans winter and spring, they still cling to the touches of flattering fur that so dramatized their smart turbans. In the picture an enormous gold-and-topaz pin is worn on the lapel of a mossy green wool long-coat. There will be considerable topaz and amber jewelry in evidence during the midseason months and early spring in line with the trend toward yellows and beiges and sunburnt tones that are sponsored for spring.

Crocheted jewelry is another unique item, especially the lei flower necklace with bracelet to match. The idea of stiffly-starched small crochet wings worn in the hair has spread like wildfire. Young girls are especially like these wings because it takes only a jiffy to make them and they are different and much more interesting than the traditional ribbon bows they have been wearing. A miniature crochet shawl to complete a sweater and plaid-skirt outfit is another favorite accessory.

At exciting style prevues for spring the emphasis on crochet fashions is unmistakable. Ideas are such that clever women at home will be quick to add crocheted items to their own wardrobes. For example, insets of crochet in triangles, squares or circles, also yoke tops, add style touches to the new pastel wool frocks. Pockets and belts of crochet and jackets with crocheted sleeves bespeak the high-style significance of this new vogue for handwork.

Milliners are on the alert, too. They are making snug crochet turbans with dramatic twists and drapes of crochet to give front height. The white crochet hat at the top of the left in the illustration has gone patriotic in that an American eagle spreads its wings in a gay crochet motif. To the right (above) a casual wide-brimmed hat has its crown embellished with an applique of floral crochet done in green cotton thread. The smart crocheted pillbox hat shown below has a close-fitting snood for anchorage and "style."

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Emblems Important Trimming Feature

The new costumes and sweaters are emblazoned with emblems. Some are embroidered, others formed of jewels, beads and sequins. The casual sports blouse flourishes a nautical emblem on its sleeve or perhaps on the pocket. Sailor blouses with insignia on the sleeve are "last word" fashion news for spring.

Your best dress should have an imposing emblem embroidered in jewels and metal beads.

Your hat looks patriotic with a jeweled or embroidered eagle spreading its wings on crown or brim. Your scarf should carry a cunningly contrived emblem, and your "hankies" too. The story goes on and on throughout the spring style program in endless and fascinating ways.

Designers Match Hats With Tailored Tweeds

Designers think so highly of matching the tailored suit with a tailored hat of identical material that they are stressing the idea in advance spring fashions. When you buy your suit ask for a two-some that includes the matching hat. If you are having your suit turned out by your favorite tailor, buy an extra piece of the tweed or novelty suiting to furnish your milliner who will fashion smartest kind of headgear from soft brimmed hats to jaunty sailors and pillbox types. Perhaps a turban might interest you most. Tell your milliner and she will turn out a most intricately knotted affair or draped and will go even to the point of creating a handbag to match.

'FIRE! FIRE!'

By STANLEY CORDELL (Associated Newspapers.) WNU Service.

AT THE same moment when Bob Terrill picked up the telephone receiver, his sense of smell was repulsed by the odor of burning copy paper mingling with the hot lead on a matrix sheet. Black smoke trailed lazily through the door that opened on the stairway leading to the basement where was located the linotype machines, casting box, press and other minor equipment connected with a small newspaper establishment.

"Fire! Fire!" Bob slammed up the receiver and raced for the stairway. At the door he met Kent Locke, who constituted the Telegram's editorial staff.

"Keep your shirt on, Bob. There's no fire and you know it!" "Of course I know it, you idiot! But if we can stir up a little excitement we might create a story. Besides, it'd give those poor devils down below a chance to get a breath of fresh air."

"Yeah! And have Percy on our necks for corrupting the routine of his shop. Bob, we gotta think of something else to solve the problem besides yelling 'fire!' every time a whiff of smoke trails up the stairs." Kent led the way back to his desk, Bob following. En route they passed Miss Lucille Swift, stenographer. At the moment, Miss Swift's attractive visage was partly obscured in the folds of a dainty handkerchief, which she held still more daintily to a cute nose, while layers of ill-smelling smoke eddied about her.

Editor Locke flopped dejectedly into his chair, set fire to a cigarette and stared morosely at his partner of the newspaper world. "Bob, old sock, we're stuck and we ought to admit it with good grace. When we moved into these quarters two weeks ago we were so all-fired concerned with saving money because of the reduction of rent, it never occurred to us to give a thought to minor details. As a result we discovered the basement lacks in ventilation facilities, which, in turn, results in an unhealthy atmosphere below and above stairs whenever Percy has the casting box in operation.

Kent sat down on the curb and motioned Bob beside him. Uninvited Miss Swift sat down on the other side.

"Which means that once or twice a week we're smoked out of the joint. And the minute we set up a yowl to the landlord, he flashes the lease we signed in our faces and yowls right back at us about the low rent we're paying."

"Which by now," Bob Terrill snapped, "is all a very old story and doesn't get us anything at all. Look at the smoke trailing up the stairs. Think what it'll be in real cold weather when we can't keep the doors open! Kent, there must be an answer—"

Bob broke off abruptly. Outside there was a sudden clanging of bells, a whining of sirens.

"What the—?" Men in rubber coats and hats, carrying axes and dragging behind them a heavy hose, were rushing in through the front door. They didn't see the occupants of the place at first, because of the density of the smoke. And before Kent and Bob could reach the doorway, the hose nozzle had begun to spout water.

"Hey! Hey, you blokes, lay off!" Bob came groping through the smoke layers, grabbing the fireman's arm. The stream of water was discontinued. The fireman looked at Bob in some alarm.

"Hey, you better get out of here, buddy! How many more are inside? Anyone overcome? Bill, put on your gas mask and look around before I start the water."

"Wait a minute! Wait a minute!" Bob was tugging at the man's rubber-sleeved arm. "There isn't any fire. It's just smoke coming from the casting box downstairs. Don't turn on that water again. You'll wreck the joint!"

"Huh! No fire? Say, what is this? Listen, buddy, who was it yowled over the phone ten minutes ago and then dropped the receiver like he was in an awful hurry to get out of the place? Whatta yuh mean, no fire? Looks to me like the damned place is ready to explode!"

Other firemen had crowded in, one, a short fat man, appearing to possess some sort of authority. Miss Swift had escaped to the street, dainty handkerchief and all. Kent, who seemed to have grasped the significance of what it was all about, plucked the short, fat man's arm and led him outside. The man with the hose stood uncertainly beside Miss Swift's desk, looking like a man whose dying wish was to squirt water all over the Telegram's new furniture. Others of the brigade disappeared below.

The humor of the thing suddenly struck Bob and he began to grin.

"Listen, chief, it was all a mistake. I didn't mean to yell over the phone. I was calling Miss Mary Lane to get the church notes. Well, at the exact moment I picked up the receiver I saw smoke trailing up the stairway and yelled 'fire!' a couple of times. Didn't realize I still had the phone in my hands. Say, those operators are on the job all right, trailing a call as quick as that. Make a good news story. Anyway, I discovered there wasn't any fire at all. Percy, the foreman of the print shop downstairs, was merely casting some mats. You see the place isn't very well ventilated. Have a cigarette, chief?"

The man with the hose looked dubious. Followed by the short, fat man, Kent had returned to the office. He led the way to the cellar stairs and dived below, the fat man following.

Bob hesitated, glanced once more at the man with the hose, decided that the Telegram furniture was safe from a sprinkling for the time being, and started for the stairs. Halfway down he collided with someone coming up. Visibility was poor, and so Bob turned and returned upstairs again. Behind him came Kent, the short, fat man, Percy and his two helpers. All were gasping.

The entire gathering adjourned to the street, the man with the hose fondling the heavy nozzle.

The short fat man was watching Kent and looking serious. Kent looked rather oratorical as he stood there, supplementing a rapid fire conversation with gestures.

Presently the short, fat man nodded solemnly, made a few notes in a book, summoned his brigade and climbed aboard the big red truck that was parked at the curb.

Kent sat down on the curb and motioned Bob beside him. Uninvited Miss Swift sat down on the other side. She no longer held a dainty handkerchief to her nose, a fact which improved her appearance tremendously.

"Bob, old son, the problem is solved. That was the fire chief I was talking to. I took him downstairs and pointed out the reason for the false alarm. At first he was ugly, but when I explained that our landlord had refused, despite our constant demands, to remodel the place, he became indignant. Bob, within a week's time, the whole building is going to be remodeled by order of the fire commission, which means we'll have an up-to-date plant."

Bob grinned, and got to his feet. "Mister, excuse me a minute. I got to write a swell story about telephone operators that trace calls in record time. The church notes will have to wait."

Kent looked up and grinned back. "Hop to it, old son. I got a date to buy our stenographer a flock of dainty silk handkerchiefs that she can apply to her nose for other purposes than obliterating her sense of smell."

Wealth Not Necessary

For Valuable Donations

Many people have a puritanical feeling that they are not giving unless they are sacrificing, which is akin to the old idea that unless medicine tastes bad it can have no virtue. Men and women whose hearts are bigger than their pocketbooks know better. By exercising their ingenuity, they find unusual methods of bringing happiness to others, and incidentally, pleasure to themselves.

Consider time, for example. A little time, given away, may be riches to someone. Last year my friend Mrs. B. presented a neighbor, an overburdened mother, with a gift of 48 Tuesday afternoons. Once a week she took the place of this mother, who could not afford help and had little opportunity for recreation. She darned stockings, told stories, played games with the youngsters, while the mother had a gloriously free afternoon.

A retired storekeeper bemoaned the fact that he could give no money for the local playground. His practical wife suggested that he spend his mornings there teaching small boys to make kites and sailboats. He contributes as much to the success of that playground as the cash donors.

Skill is another welcome gift. Almost everyone of us has some special talent which we can multiply by giving. A middle-aged woman, expert with her needle, lives in a boardinghouse catering to young men. Last Christmas she presented each man with a note stating that during the year she would mend his clothes, darn socks and sew on buttons. Her motherly gesture—a use of the talent she had—turned that boardinghouse into a home.

A department head in a technical laboratory discovered that some younger associates were handicapped by their lack of higher mathematics. He volunteered to give an evening course if half a dozen were interested. Thirty turned out—eagerly!

The most commonplace giving may take on real significance. Old Mrs. Smalley has one humble talent—breadmaking. Every Saturday this poor woman selects the crustiest, most buttery looking loaf out of her oven and leaves it at some home where there is sickness.

Construction of a NYA farm shop in Palmyra and eight other rural Wisconsin communities has been authorized according to an announcement made January 25, by John Faville Jr., Milwaukee, acting State administrator of the National Youth Administration.

Preliminary arrangements for the Palmyra farm shop began January 13 when Glynn I. Larson, Kenosha, area director of NYA, and W. R. Norris, representing the local school board as co-sponsor, completed plans and submitted them to Washington for formal approval.

The farm shop is part of a joint NYA vocational school program to provide unemployed youth with actual construction and actual farm experience. Construction and labor costs are to be furnished by the National Youth Administration. The State board of Vocational and Adult Education is to equip and supervise the project, and the local community finances about 20% of the total cost, according to Faville.

Preliminary arrangements for the actual construction, which is to begin immediately, were started locally last week, by Robert M. May, Lake Mills, Jefferson County Supervisor of NYA.

Applications by youth for work on the project are to be made to the Agriculture Department Instructor of the local high school, Ransom W. Shestock.

Other state farm shop constructions were also approved for Milton, Loyal, Dorchester, Westby, Mineral Point, Muscoda, Cuba City, and Shullsburg. Farm shop locations still awaiting formal approval include Phillips, Weyauwega, Wautoma, Sauk City, Columbus, Deerfield, Ashland Junction, Luck, Cumberland, Bruce, Cabot, Colfax, Baldwin, Prescott, Whithall, and Kendall.

Location of the shops is limited to rural towns of less than 2500 population, where high schools have departments of Vocational Agriculture. A total of twenty-six shops were originally planned for Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Marsh were most pleasantly surprised on Saturday evening when about forty of their friends and neighbors gathered in their home to help them celebrate their thirtieth wedding anniversary.

Con Olson had charge of the activities. Cards were played with high honors won by Mrs. Carrie Stickles and Harry Marsh.

After this a delicious lunch was served. A fine wedding cake, artistically decorated, was presented to the bride.

When the lunch was over, the tables were removed and the friends assembled in the front room where a program was given. Music was furnished by Dorothy Olson on an electric guitar and Mrs. Mary Tutton on a piano accordion.

Con Olson, a life-time friend of the Marsh family, in a humorous way reviewed his association with the Marsh brothers through the years and in a spirit of true friendship paid a fine tribute to Harry Marsh and wife in what their friendship and home had meant to the community and the place they occupied in the affection and respect of their many friends.

Rev. A. L. Tucker, a friend of the family for over twenty-five years, was then called upon to make a few remarks and then presented Mr. and Mrs. Marsh with a beautiful chenille bed spread and a pair of embroidered pillow cases. The happy couple responded with words of deep appreciation of the kindness of their friends.

groom were called upon for remarks. The out-of-town guests were Edward Young of Chicago, and Louis Sporlein of Milwaukee.

Thus a pleasant evening was spent which will long be remembered not only by the happy wedded couple but by all who were privileged to enjoy this most pleasing event.

A wish was expressed that we might all be back to help them celebrate their golden wedding.

From a Wisconsin farm boy, who at the age of twelve, built and played a most unusual instrument without any musical training whatsoever, has emerged a fine musician, the Missionary of Music and Song, Mr. O. ben Sime.

Having travelled 20 years, he has presented over 5000 concerts in forty-two states, in Lutheran churches, in schools, and on the radio. In private he has appeared for personalities such as Madam Schumann Heineck, Kirsten Flagstad, and William Dietler, winner of Academy award in 1937 as director of "The Life of Emile Zola."

This, together with outstanding offers from radio, movie, and vaudeville companies has not swerved him from his purpose of praising God on several unusual instruments thru music and song.

Featuring the Theremin, an instrument played entirely without touch, but by waving hands over it, beautiful music pours forth to thrill you. There are no strings, no keys, but is controlled entirely by the electronic pulsations from his body.

The Pork-cello is a one-stringed instrument originated by Mr. Sime and perfected by the late Knute Retzdall, famed violin maker and wood carver. With this instrument he has appeared as feature artist on the National hook-up, the Farm and Home hour.

The sixty-minute concert will feature the hymns and chorales delightful to all lovers of good music with unique instruments and vocal solos.

Mr. Sime has attained the distinction of being America's foremost Thereminist. His programs have always featured many instruments of an unusual nature, and he presents a program full of variety and color. Featuring the Theremin, an instrument played entirely without touch, he produces beautiful, soul stirring melodies.

His concert in the Skoponong Lutheran Church in Palmyra on February 5th at 8:15 P.M. is open to everyone. No admission will be charged but a free will offering will be taken to defray the expense of bringing the artist here.

I have not winc'd or cried aloud.
Under the bludgeoning of chance
My head is bloody but unbowed.

Beyond this space of wrath and tears
Looms but the Horror of the shade
And yet the menace of the years
Finds and shall find me unafraid.

It matters now how straight the Gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate:
I am the captain of my soul.

— WILLIAM ERNEST HENLEY.

NO SING THE NEWS BY JUDGE DEVITT

And we have two sides of the war picture presented before the committee in Washington discussing the President's Lend-Lease plan to Britain. We have the picture rantingly presented by Secretaries Knox and Stimson of an aerial invasion of the United States by the Axis powers unless we render all aid to England at once. And on the other hand we have the dispassionate report of Colonel Lindbergh who bluntly states and backs up his argument with facts and figures, that an aerial invasion of this country by Europe from Europe is next to impossible. And air defense heads agree with Lindbergh as to this assertion.

And it seems as though we have that side of the picture presented by a man who is an expert as to air defense a man who has devoted his life to air activities. And his statements were devoid of sentimentalism. And on the other side of the picture we have Secretary Stimson who was an artillery captain during the world war and since has been a lawyer and industrialist. And his argument reeks with sentimentalities.

And irregardless of how we feel regarding Colonel Lindbergh's attitude toward the European war we must admit that his arguments against the possibility of an invasion of this country are sound. And even though the majority of the people of this country are maybe in favor of smashing Hitler they have heard the other side of the war story from the lips of Lindbergh.

And if some of the more radical of the all aid to Britain advocates call Colonel Lindbergh a traitor to his trust they are allowing sentimentalities to over-ride the facts. And whether England is given all the aid she desires or not let us confine ourselves to the picture as it is and not raising a fearful future which is not borne out by the present facts.

Mocha Halo Cakes Food For Angels!

YOU'LL rate your own personal halo when you serve Mocha Halo Cakes—their heavenly flavor comes from strong, fresh coffee used in the makin', and when served with hot coffee—the natural accompaniment—it's perfect fare for holiday or just general entertaining. Easier to make than they look—here's how:

Mocha Halo Cakes
1/2 cup shortening 1 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
1 cup sugar 1/2 cup cocoa
1 egg 1/2 teaspoon soda
2 egg yolks 2 teaspoons phosphate baking powder
1/2 cup double strength freshly made coffee 1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup buttermilk

Fluffy White Frosting
2 egg whites 1 tablespoon light corn syrup
1 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 cup cold water
1 teaspoon vanilla flavoring

Place all of the ingredients except the vanilla in the top part of a double boiler. Beat with a rotary egg-beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over boiling water; beat steadily with the rotary beater until the frosting will form peaks when the beater is lifted, 7 to 10 minutes. Remove from heat; add the vanilla. Frost top and sides of cup cakes. Makes enough frosting for top and sides of 18 medium cup cakes.
