Talbert - Frank Nuptials

Saturday afternoon, June 28, at 2:00 clock in the Lutheran Church, Miss Doris Talbert, daughter of Elmer Talbert of Skoponong was married to George Frank, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Frank of Milton Junction. The church was beautifully decorated and the service was very impressive with the couple repeating their vows with the Reverend C. E. Henderson, pastor.

The bride, who was given in martage by her father, wore a floor ength gown of white mousseline de soie and fingertip veil. Her attendants, Miss Marjorie Frank and Mrs. Earle Eagle, Moyse, were attired in gowns of blue and pink, fashioned similarly to that of the bride's and of the same material. Mingled in the bridal shower bouquet were white roses and baby's breath, while Miss Talbert's attendants carried hand bouquets of pink roses and baby's breath. Preceeding the bride down the aisle were Lorraine Frank, Elkhorn, and Doris Lein, Janesville, as flower girls.

Before the ceremony Miss Thelma Wickingson sang "O Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly." accompanied by Miss Stella Tenold, sister of Mrs. C. E. Henderson.

The groom was attended by Roy Horne of Edgerton and Earle Moyse of Whitewater, and the ushers were Arnold Frank and Orville Knuteson. Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlors. The bride and groom left for a trip to California in company with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Horne of Edgerton, also newly-weds, having just been married the evening before in Edgerton.

CREDIT ASSOC. GROWS

Farmers of Jefferson county helped to swell the loan volume of the Waukesha Production Credit Association up to July 1 this year to the largest single month's figure since February, 1940 according to M. E. Claffey, secretary-treasurer.

A large share of the $125,000.00 loaned during the first 6 months of this year, he said, went to finance seasonal operations of Jefferson county farmers. The 1941 figure is $11,000 over the 1940 figure of the same peri-

CURRENT FICTION

A Brave Man By VIC YARDMAN

(Associated Newspapers-WNU Service.)

OIS wanted to scream. But she didn't. Girls brought up on western ranches amid rough, crude surroundings aren't supposed to scream when mad bulls charge at them. Besides, Kent might have thought she was frightened.

She looked at Kent now, standing there beside her, tall and straight. She looked at him and saw that his lips were white. She knew that he was scared-remembered in that instant that all dudes were supposed to be scared of wild bulls. She half expected him to run. But he didn't. And then suddenly he stepped in front of her, as if somehow he thought of shielding her from those piercing horns.

It was a pitiful attempt, would have seemed laughable had the situation been less serious. Lois looked around a little wildly, and then she remembered Jack. Jack had gone for the horses. And suddenly he appeared, galloping into the clearing at its other end, bending low over the neck of his gray.

Lois caught her breath. It was a frightfully thrilling scene; Jack, a glamorous figure, riding to her rescue. The bull had its head down, hence wasn't expecting the attack. But even if it had known, it wouldn't have mattered. For Jack had won laurels bulldogging wild steers.

It was all over in record time. The bull lay prostrate almost at her feet. And after a minute Jack got up, grinning at her boyishly. And then the bull staggered to its feet and lumbered away, glad to disregard its mission of a moment before. Lois gushed profusely and Jack swaggered a bit and invited more gushing. Then suddenly they remembered Kent, and looked at him. Surprisingly there was admiration in his blue eyes.

"Good work, Dunn," he said, and extended his hand. "Darned lucky for us both you were around."

Jack turned back to Lois. He didn't seem to notice Kent's outstretched hand. And Lois knew a fiash of anger because of his rudebut the flash ness: was nothing more. It passed, and then she was telling Jack all over again what a hero he was.

The trail was pretty narrow along the way home, hardly wide enough for three to ride abreast. Kent found himself alone most of the time.

The incident back there in the clearing had sort of cleared things up for Lois.

Yes, Jack was her kind of man. Once she had hoped he wouldn't be. She had thought then she wanted a man like Kent Whittaker. A goodlooking, cultured, educated man. A man born of the cities. A man who liked to read good books, appreciated good music, a man who knew and understood something besides whether or not a cow had colic and what to do about it.

That's why she had invited Kent out to the ranch—to compare him with Jack. Jack had loved her all his life. A man who did things with his hands and wasn't afraid of a single thing. A man's man.

She had to decide between them. For Kent loved her, too. He had told her so, that evening six months ago at the Hilton Club back in Boston. She had been spending a vacation there with an aunt.

She thought she loved him then, too. She was glad now she had waited. For after comparing him with Jack she knew the cultured voice and fine manners and abundance of knowledge didn't mean a thing when it came to saving her life.

She didn't like the way Jack had acted since Kent's arrival. He was a little too scornful of the easterner's efforts to adapt himself to the unusual life he had come to. He never complimented; held himself somewhat aloof, occasionally made some insulting remark that brought the blood rushing into Kent's cheeks. But Kent never lost his temper. He always smiled and didn't seem to let Jack's remarks bother him.

Lois wondered now if that were because Kent was afraid. Afraid of Jack. It must be. Well, she was glad now she knew. They were nearing the ranch, and the trail was wider. Kent had come up beside them, and Jack was looking at him with that scornful little smile on his lips. Lois glanced at Kent and saw that his mouth was white again. She was faintly dismastered his fear by this time. It | period.

was a pity, she thought, he couldn't have been invested with some of Jack's qualities. Kent suddenly leaned over and caught the rein of Jack's gray and brought the animal to a stop.

"Dunn," he said softly, "I hoped that what I'm about to do could be avoided. I see now that it can't. I've been sizing you up during the past two weeks and just now I've come to the conclusion that you're about the biggest idiot I've ever run across. In fact, you're quite a conceited ass. You're mean and selfish and a miserable whelp. You're selfcentered, low-down and ornery. Summing the thing up and resorting to western vernacular I unhesitatingly classify you in the same category as I would a skunk. Now what do you think of that?"

"I think," said Jack Dunn, eyes ablaze, "that I'll take you apart and put you together again wrong end to." And thus speaking Jack made a pass at Kent and missed completely. Somewhat surprised, he was attempting to regain his balance when something struck him mightily on the chin. He toppled from his saddle head over heels and smote the ground a resounding crack. When he looked up there was Kent standing above him, still smiling, no longer white of lip.

Jack got to his feet and made a couple of awkward attempts to reach Kent's face, but Kent's face never seemed to be in the same place twice. After a while Jack found difficulty in rising following a par-ticularly devastating assault on the point of his jaw, and presently abandoned the attempt.

Kent looked at him for a moment or two, decided that the thing was done, and returned to his horse. Lois had by this time comprehended the significance of what was transpiring, had made swift changes in her thoughts.

She was, therefore, a little alarmed when Kent rode away without even glancing in her direction. She rode after him, and he looked at her, phlegmatically, smiling pleasantly. There was, in fact, nothing in his expression that she wanted to see, nothing but a sort of grim satisfaction that a man is apt to have who has been victorious in bat-

Suddenly, without knowing why, she reined in her horse. And Kent rode on, not once looking back, not hurrying, not seeming to care whether she followed or not. A great emptiness stole into her heart, a hurt feeling. She understood. She knew she was losing the only thing she had ever cared for. Yet she did not condemn this man, blamed no one. The thing was the result of her own selfishness. In the brief space of a moment, she realized, the tables had been turned. Kent had decided that she wasn't his kind of woman-and proved it.

Blind Wife Bakes Cake For Sightless Husband

Imagine stirring up an angel food cake in the middle of the night without turning on the light.

Imaging baking a cake and knowing, without even a glance at the clock, just when it is that delightful golden brown that means perfection.

Imagine icing it there in the dark-

And imagine serving it, neatly cut, and placed on small plates, together with cups of fragrant coffee, to a group of a dozen friends sitting there in the blackness.

Whether the time is midnight or midafternoon, the darkness is there for pretty Evelyn Lee of Los Angeles, but she has never thought of it as darkness, because she has been blind since birth.

Absence of light does not mean fear, tiptoeing, and dependence to this very busy housewife, for the darkness is soft and black and friendly. Through it she feels familiar furniture and cooking utensils, and she hears all of the normal happy sounds of daylight and living.

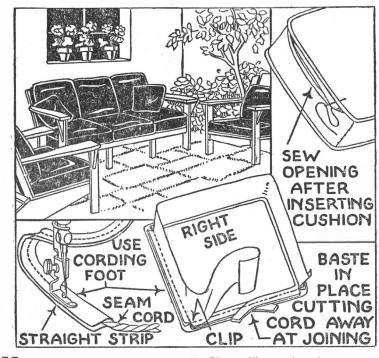

Serving her carefully prepared refreshments at a party is not done gropingly with spilling of crumbs and drops, but gayly and with all of the assurance of any experienced hostess. The guests, both blind and sighted, are natural and at ease. There is no breathless wait, as Mrs. Lee wheels her serving cart expertly through the doorway from her attractive kitchen.

Mrs. Lee's fame as a cook has spread until now she is writing a cookbook in Braille, to be published within the next few months by the Braille institute.

Expensive Jaywalking

If in the near future you see a Chicago policeman carrying a knapsack, don't be alarmed. He is not carrying his lunch with him and neither is he carrying a gun in it. What he probably will have in the knapsack is a supply of picture folders displaying the dangers of jaywalking. If the Chicago City council goes through with its intentions of printing 200,000 such folders, police will hand one to each vio-lator. # Dear Mom:

Well, here it is another weekend and I'm not a General yet. But give me time.

The nearest village is 5 miles away. All you find there is a general store, a garage and a canning factory—nowhere to go for any good clean fun, unless you drop in at a smoke-filled juke joint on the way.

Well, Mom, there's a big favor you can do me. The U.S.O. is trying to raise $10,765,000 to run clubs for us, outside of camp. Places with lounge rooms, dance floors, games, writing rooms. Places you can get a bite to eat without paying a king's ransom.

I know you don't have an idle million lying around, but if you could get the family interested and some of the neighbors, and if that happened all over the country, the U.S.O. could raise $10,765,-000 overnight.

I'd appreciate it a lot, Mom, and so would every other mother's son in the U. S. Army and Navy.

Fashion With Family Likeness Much Smarter This Summer

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHAT started out a season or so ago and appeared destined to become a mere passing fad has developed into a highly important established fashion this summer. It is now recognized by leading fashion authorities throughout the country. The movement to which we refer is that of creating clothes alike for mother and daughter, also "sister" fashions, and brother and sister outfits, even Mr. and Mrs. costumes are included in the scheme

A dress-alike foursome was shown in a recent style revue where an attractive young mother and her two pretty little daughters wore square-necked dresses of delft blue linen printed in navy and white, each with an apron in turkey red, the three outfits made exactly alike. In this mother-and-child fashion group along comes tiny Junior clad in red overalls with a sailor shirt in the same print as the frocks.

It is especially in the playclothes realm that costumes apparently emanating from the same family tree play up imagination to the nth degree of cunning design. What with the wealth of smart cottons What and myriads of other intriguing washable weaves at command it is small wonder that designers are finding endless inspiration in devising family group fashions.

It is just such delightsome ventures in creative costume design as the "like - mother - like - daughter" dress pictured in the foreground of our illustration that are causing a series of ohs and ahs. To visualize the full charm of this lovable twosome one must think in terms of poinsettia red crinkled crepe outlined with rickrack, for the frocks are fashioned of just that. With such adorable styles as these easily available this summer in smart specialty shops, shopping for play clothes becomes a pleasurable pas-

A bit dressier with more of a garden party effect are the cunning sister outfits illustrated. In this instance little and big sister team in slub broadcloth (a most likable cotton fabric) of which both bonnets and dresses are made. The older little girl's frock is pale pink with printed dimity blouse. Little sister's is pale blue with blue printed Notice how cleverly the sleeveless dress waist of the dress is made detachable, via tab extensions that button on over the underblouse. This is a practical idea that mothers may want to copy when making little daughter's dresses, seeing that it is such a help in laundering to have skirt, blouse and overblouse separate.

For this fashion of mother-anddaughter together with sister playsuits that is so steadily growing in popularity, we would suggest using such smart and likable cottons as tiny or big plaids in seersucker, yarn-dyed striped pique in multicolors, chambrays in stripes or plain, denims, glazed chintz, waffle weave piques, dimities and plisse sheers in tropical flower prints, also quilted calico makes up effectively in little matching jackets to wear over summery frocks.

One of the most talked-of fashions of the present season is twin slack suits with bright blazer-stripe jackets. Mother and wee daughter in these twosomes attract pleasant attention wherever they go. Be sure to add sister bathing suits to little daughters' wardrobe of vacation clothes, made of crinkled printed cottons or wool jersey. As to Mr. and Mrs. they are choosing sportwear tweeds in matching checks for motoring and outing excursions. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Pigtail Calot

Provocative of a smile is this amusing and at the same time eminently practical hand crochet pigtail calot. It is crocheted of heavy cotton rug yarn that is boilfast and beautifully washable. You can get it in lovely pastels or bright South American colors. Costs but a few cents for the material, and can be turned out all finished and ready to wear in a short time. Not much more than an hour to make it if you are a speedy worker. When your girl friends see yours they will all be clamoring for one like it. Get busy! This fad for the hand crochet pigtail calot is spreading throughout the teen-age group.

Gay Colored Stockings Feature Summer Wear

Enter bright colored stockings, worn with gay prints, into the summer fashion picture. The latest move is to match the color of your stockings to the leading flower in your print. The vogue has just started but its future looks promising, in that it is being tried out in summer resorts with highly satisfactory results.

Latest prints have white grounds with yellow florals or with red or cerise or some one color and the idea is to match flower, gloves and hose. Startling innovation? Yes, but it is being done in smart fashion

Silhouette Transformed

By New Deep Armholes Look for a new silhouette, it has arrived. The new deep armhole effects also sleeves cut-in-one with the yoke or bodice itself is bringing about a transformation in the silhouette. The likable part of this new technique achieves a classic simplicity of line that every woman seeks. More and more fashion is reminding us of the importance of this new trend. Watch for interesting style developments scheduled for the coming months.

Border Prints

Border prints are very smart and designers are handling them in intriguing manner. The borders are used for yokes, for midriff girdle insets and the print frocks with row upon row of the border arranged in tiers are very new. Pleated skirts play with the border effectively, too. Jacket edges finished off with border print look new and attractive | sold throughout the year.

WATER COOLER BEST FOR MILK

Hot Weather Necessitates an Effective System.

> By H. R. SEARLES (Extension Dairyman at University Farm, St. Paul.)

Whether milk and cream are used on the farm or sold to the creamery, cooling becomes the problem of the hour on the dairy farm dur-ing the summer. A good cooling system is a necessity if the dairyman is to prosper.

Air is not a good cooling agent, even in the coldest winter. Experiments have shown that milk cools many times faster emersed in water than standing in air. Cooling large quantities of milk may call for ice or artificial refrigeration, but the dairyman who sells cream can usually do a good job with a cooling tank and well water. Using the water that goes to the main stock tank first for cooling is entirely satisfactory if proper equipment is

The water may be pumped through a two-barrel tank, with most of the pumping carried out at the same time the warm cream is put in. The tank will be a better cooler if it is sheltered from the sun and wind and if it has a tight cover to hold out warm air and dust. If the tank is of metal, some insulation on the outside will also help hold out heat.

The milk and cream supply for the family will also be more desirable if care is taken in keeping the product cool. Putting the home milk in two-quart glass jars and sinking these in the cooling tank is satisfactory. Even if there is refrigeration on the farm, it is a good idea to cool the milk first in water and not put the burden on the re-

Irish Potatoes

The lowly "spud" takes many forms besides being mashed, boiled and fried. In Maine alone, an average of 3,000,000 bushels go into starch. Most of this is used for sizing the fine count warp threads in the cotton textile industry. In 1934, a peak of 5,319,000 bushels were used for starch.

Much of the high grade edible tarch was imported before the recent war and new factories are being built in this country to improve the quality of the American product. There is no doubt but that the present chaotic conditions of the world have helped the United States to become more self-sufficient. In the calico printing industry, our domestic starch is now being used in place of a foreign import. plant in the United States is making nitro-starch, an explosive which is made extensively in Europe.

In Maine, experiments are under way to use the potato in making plastic compounds. So far the idea is still in the laboratory stage but chemists believe that the potato may have a future in this field. Such an outlet would use profitably the culls and second grade potatoes which are usually wasted.

Another use of the potato, so far not tried here, is the making of fuel alcohol as a substitute for gasoline and kerosene. It was developed first in Germany.

No crop produces as much food per acre as the prolific potato plant where yields of 200 to 300 bushels are common. The leading potato growing sections are Aroostock county, Maine; Long Island, New York; the Eastern Shore of Virginia, Red River Valley of Minnesota and southern Idaho. Maine produces about one-seventh of the 45,000,000 bushel crop annually.

Poultry Ration

Any of the common grains may be used with good results in the poultry ration so long as the mixture contains at least three different grains. This makes it possible to substitute cheaper grains when some of them are too high in price. The thing to remember is that oats are an important part of the ration for chickens of all ages, and that where yellow corn is not used, it is necessary to supply additional vitamin A in alfalfa or cod liver oil.

O beautiful for pilgrim feet. Whose stern, impassioned stress A thoroughfare for freedom beat Across the wilderness! America! America! God mend thine every flaw, Confirm thy soul in self control, Thy liberty in law! O beautiful for heroes proved In liberating strife, Who more than self their country loved. And mercy more than life! America! America! May God thy gold refine, Till all success be nobleness, And every gain divine!

O beautiful for patriot dream That sees beyond the years Thine alabaster cities gleam Undimmed by human tears!

America! America! God shed His grace on thee,

And crown thy good with brotherhood From sea to shining sea!

Three Days of Racing

Three days of thrills culminating in AMA motorcycle races, will be offered speed fans at Wisconsin State Fair Park, July 4, 5, and 6.

The program will start with the most unusual and sensational midget automobile racing program ever presented in America. Instead of using the regular midget car track, the event will be a 100-mile championship on the park's one-mile dirt track, gen-Skoponong announce the birth of an erally conceded to be the fastest of its type in the country. The race will Among those who already have signed up to fight it out for the $2,500 Mr. and Mrs. David Weidenheft, purse are such midget racing sensations as Johnny Householder, national champion; Tony Willman, Paul Russo, morning July 2, 1941 at the Minnie Myron Fohr, Ted Duncan and George Robson.

> For the three nights Jimmie Lynch's Death Dodgers will keep spines tink ling in front of the grandstand. Lynch has worked out numerous new and more daring stunts in the hazardous business of crashing automobiles. The Lynch thrill show will be followed by the exciting new Thearle-Duffield fireworks each night.

> Some of the greatest riders in the country are already signed up for the 73 miles of motorcycle racing to be Billy Matthews, Hamilton, Ontario grand champion of Canada and 200mile road champion; Tommy Hogen in the Second Continental Congress the Declaration of Independence was enacted and a new nation was born And we celebrate again on July those glorious patriots who dared to throw off the yoke of oppression and tyranny and place in its stead the generation has the heritage of freedom and democracy to maintain in the welter of smashing conflicts, the de struction of nations, and men turned beasts.

And we should be more consicous of 4th of July and its true meaning than ever before. For we cannot take our freedom for granted. And it is a far cry from the minute men of Lexington and Concord to the latest flying fort resses. And yet it is not a far cry from the freedom we enjoy 'neath peaceful skies to the shackles of pe onage under a totalitarian monster. And this is true because we can see and almost feel the shackles and bonds of once free and proud peoples and nations.
