Wisconsin's Health

By Cornelius A. Harper, M. D.

That public health meeting held in Madison late in April had us all thinking how this field of work has grown broad and fruitful since the early days.

Wisconsin was the eighth state to create a state board of health. That was in 1876. It was not until many years later, though, that the state employed workers to bring public health procedures directly to the people.

Look over the early reports of this department and you will see that the local boards of health, which the state law required to be formed and maintained, have been the key to Wisconsin's success in health protection.

These local health boards are just as important today. The state is divided into some 1,800 local health districts, and these in turn form nine state health districts.

Each of these nine districts has a full-time medical health officer, a public health nurse, a sanitary engineer and an office secretary. This personnel gives local health officials prompt and personal advisory service in meeting health problems, many of which are in the form of emergencies.

In the same way the state laboratory of hygiene has been expanded by means of cooperative laboratories located at nine convenient population centers in addition to the central laboratory in Madison.

Scientists at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture have found that ground corn or corn and cob meal is a satisfactory preservative for grass silage. It needs to be used at the rate of 150 to 250 pounds for each ton of green material.

Linen Assumes Important Role As Fabric for Summer Wardrobes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IN ASSEMBLING the new summer wardrobe, don't overlook the importance of linen for all-occasion wear. There really is no material that more faithfully holds its own than handsome Irish linen. With women of discriminating taste, fine linen is a tradition, and now, because of scientific processing, the new linens are rendered practically non-wrinklable.

Aside from the practical view, which ranks linen high because of its complete washability, crease-resistance and adaptability to any type of wearing apparel, style experts are suggesting linen because of the beautiful colors in which it may now be purchased.

A trend this season is the combining of linen with another fabric. You'll see many linen dresses with wool coats, lined and collared to match the dress. Linen also may be combined with silk or rayon prints very effectively. Often a monotone linen coat is lined with the print of a matching frock. In these instances, the linen used is one of the heavier, sturdier weaves, either plain or with self-plaid woven into the fabric.

A fashion highlight this season is the newly styled longer jackets of solid colored linen, worn over bright gingham checks or printed cottons. The attractive ensemble centered in the photograph illustrates the idea. The jacket, of deep green linen, is cut as expertly and fits as suavely as any painstakingly tailored wool. It tops a black, white and green checked dress which follows carefully the lines of a classic shirtwaist frock.

The use of linen in two-toned combinations is a this-season theme that stresses the popular contrast-color vogue. Two shades of Irish linen, a rich tan and a deep green, combine to dramatize the South American influence shown in the simulated bolero of this good-looking dress. This is a fashion designed by Schiaparelli for gay young folk.

It's "three cheers for the red-white-and-blue" when the classic shirtwaist dress shown to the left in the group marches along in the fashion parade. The dress is of blue wrinkle-resistant Irish linen. The double blue-and-white collar and cuffs are edged with red rickrack, and the chic crocheted belt also combines the three colors.

A fashion that women will welcome is the redingote that is styled of linen in handsome dark monotonous. This is worn over print frocks very effectively and over line dresses of a contrasting shade. A practical as well as smart item in any wardrobe is the linen suit that is fashioned with the longer jacket. In navy or dark green or toast brown it invites many uses, for the jacket may be worn over casual frocks when not worn with its matching skirt.

The young set glories this season in the new line middie blouse fashions. As summer advances, dance floors will boast linen dinner dresses. On beaches, dressmaker bathing suits in linen will take to the water and many play suits and beach dresses of Irish linen will be worn by vacationers.

Dramatic Bags

Dramatic bags, with swank shoes of shiny perforated leather to match, are smart as can be. In the under-arm bag designed by Jenny which the young modern pictured is carrying, shiny black patent leather is cleverly used to form wings of ruffled and perforated patent. This bag is roomy but compact and is styled with all the "last word" improvements. You will find it the perfect complement for your new tailleur and particularly chic carried with the now-so-voguish black faille jacket suits. By the way, the topknot that surmounts the pretty head of the young lady here posing is a very new-fashion chapeau.

Newest wrist watches are square, made of pink gold, set with diamonds and rubies and fastened with a maroon wrist cord.

White-Ground Prints New In Summer Fashion Picture

It is the white-ground prints that have the coveted "new" look. The black-on-white combination is especially smart. Wear with these black-and-whites one of the very voguish large Milan hats, carry a patent bag matched with pumps, splash a dash of red or yellow in gloves and your boutonniere—the sum total will be "style."

Blue on white is also new and the prints that pattern red or yellow on white are exceedingly chic.

Handknit Apparel Enjoys Increase in Popularity

There is a large demand for handknit apparel. Even the machine knits have been brought to such a point of perfection that they have the handknit look. Dresses are so expertly fashioned that they do not miss any of the styling details that give distinction to fabric treatments.

Sweaters and cardigans abound in unique trimmings, such as wool yarn fringe, dangling tassels, embroideries and knitted skirts are now made with pleats or gores.

Low-Cut Necklines Call For Bra to Match Dress

Necklines are on their way down and down, almost to the waistline. With this type of dress, comes a bra to match. You can fasten the open point high or low, as you wish. The latest blouses have open-throat collared necklines that may be adjusted at will.

Brim Large, Small

It's a far cry from the tiny little flower topknots milliners are pleased to call hats to the wide, wider, widest brims that are forecasted for wear with summer frocks. A properly equipped wardrobe of headgear should include both. The cunning flower hats have captured women's fancy to the extent that they will continue in the picture for a long time to come, but from now on they must share honors with the stunning big pompadour brims, Mexican gaucho felts and the face-framing "covered wagon" types.

Well, It Happens That Way Some Times

CINCINNATI, OHIO.—Add anticlimax: George Hopkins is a 71-year-old steeplejack who has painted towering stacks and steeples for 50 years without suffering the slightest injury. But as he was returning home from painting WLW's 860-foot tower at nearby Mason, he stumbled over a brick and fractured three ribs.

Johnnie, 73, Still Is Panning Gold

And Paints Lurid Tales of West for Tourists.

DEADWOOD, S. D.—Gone are the days of Deadwood Dick, Wild Bill Hickock, and Calamity Jane, but Potato Creek Johnnie carries on the traditions of the Old West in South Dakota's Black Hills.

Except when he is painting lurid pictures of the past for amused tourists, Perrett continues his search for gold along Potato Creek in the Spearfish canyon country. And Potato Creek Johnnie is 73.

For 30 years or more Johnnie has been prospecting along Potato Creek—and panning gold, too.

Johnnie panned out one of the finest nuggets ever found in the Black Hills, and it now is on exhibit at the Adams museum in Deadwood.

The old methods are good enough for Johnnie and in his search for gold he uses an old pan which he swishes around in the fast-running waters of the creek.

On a good day the old prospector has found gold worth $50, but he finds that placer mining isn't what it used to be.

"There's too many folk in the Hills, and they have riled up the streams and staked out so many claims that they can't get the gold out," he said.

"You got to know how to prospect, just the same as you have to know any other business."

Like his other relics of the past Johnnie clings to his old buckskin shirts. He lets his gray hair grow to shoulder lengths, and the tourists think he is a "character."

They can come to him for a first-hand history of the West now that he has moved into town from his cabin beside Potato creek.

Phone Operator Senses

Tragedy and Saves Two BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.—A telephone operator who realized "something was wrong" when only the sound of a falling body came over an open telephone line is credited with saving the lives of two Bakersfield residents.

Betty Kruger, operator, received a call, but after placing it realized the person placing the call did not respond. Miss Kruger notified her superintendent, Mrs. Trixie Walton, who recognized the number called as the office of a doctor.

Mrs. Walton listened to the phone of the party calling. "I heard faint room noises," she said, "and then the sound of a gasp, followed by the thud of a falling body."

A resident across the street from the house was notified and the neighbor smashed a window in the house. A man and a woman had been overcome by gas escaping from a leaky water heater.

Woman's Bluff Brings About Capture of Thief

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.—"What are you doing here?" inquired Mrs. Jack Dunn of a man she found sitting in her window-smashed automobile rummaging through her handbag.

"You move over," she went on. "I'm going to check things to see if they are all here."

The man, warned by Mrs. Dunn that she would scream if he tried to run, obeyed.

"Come on with me," she commanded. "I'm going to get my husband." Again the man obeyed, silently walking beside her along the street.

Two cruising detectives arrested the man.

Prisoner Feigns Deafness But Hears the Good Word

NEWTON, MASS.—When Judge James A. Delay recalled that the district court's most persistent visitor was making his 100th appearance on drunkenness charges, the prisoner cupped a hand to one ear and said:

"I can't hear you, judge."

The remark was repeated twice with the same result. A weary court clerk turned to the judge and murmured:

"I suggest the case be filed."

"Thank you," said the smiling prisoner.

Amateur 'Cowboy' Ropes Himself Into Jail House

STOCKTON, CALIF.—Playing cowboy on Main street was 36-year-old Manuel De Ponte's idea of fun, until he attempted to throw the "bull." The "bull"—in gangdom slang—was Policeman Harold Stike, who arrested De Ponte on a petty theft charge, for the 25-foot length of rope which De Ponte had stolen from a local hardware store.

TIPS to Gardeners

GARDENS OF QUALITY

THERE have been changes in recent years in garden practices that are worth reporting. Gardeners formerly allowed vegetables to grow as large as possible. This procedure gave a higher yield in pounds, but very often it lowered the quality of vegetables.

Some vegetables, of course, like tomato, must be mature to be palatable; but carrots, cucumbers, beets, summer squash, turnips, radishes, and others are more tender and tasty when not much more than half grown.

Gardeners are finding that it is wise to plant oftener than once or twice a year, to maintain a regular supply of proper-sized vegetables. Gardens prove more enjoyable, and more profitable when successive plantings of favorite crops are made every two or three weeks, providing garden-fresh vegetables for the table over a long season.

It is also true that few gardeners today save flower seeds. Fine flowers growing in the home garden often are cross-pollinated by others of the same species, making flowers grown from their seed inferior, and untrue.

Not So Dusty, but Oh, What an Excavation!

Little Willie had been set to entertain a portly visitor, who, having no inquisitive children of his own, had answered all his questions with unusual patience.

"And what," was Willie's 198th question, "are houses made of?"

"Houses," replied the stout man, "are made of bricks."

"And what are engines made of?"

"Engines are made of iron."

"And what is bread made of?"

"Flour."

Then, as the anticipated light step and soft rustle of Willie's sister sounded outside, he added, "Now, Willie, I can answer only one more question."

Willie decided that it should be a good one.

After a pause, Willie asked: "Well, what are we made of?"

"Dust and earth, my son."

"My," said Willie, "they must have made a whacking big hole when they took you out!"

Captured Officers

Under the terms of the Geneva convention of 1929, officers captured in war have their salaries paid by the power detaining them as prisoners. Each officer receives the pay made to officers of his rank in the country in which he is held captive, but it is provided that such pay shall not be greater than he received for that rank in his own country.

In other words, he cannot get an increase in pay by virtue of being a prisoner of war.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of their value. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. To approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging headache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

FORBIDDEN TERRITORY

By VIC YARDMAN
(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

JEREMY'S father, Damon Slade, who owned the big Bar S cattle ranch, the range of which bordered on the international line, had warned Jeremy repeatedly never to ride into Jurano unless accompanied by one or more Bar S riders. All of which served only to whet Jeremy's imagination and to promise himself that at the first opportunity he would pay Jurano a visit without the protection of Bar S riders, or any other riders.

Jeremy was only 19, and had been watched over pretty closely by a doting father. It hadn't occurred to Damon that his son, like other men's sons, must necessarily investigate the world a bit on his own hook.

Jurano was, Jeremy discovered, everything that his father and the Bar S riders had warned him against.

Jeremy hitched his sorrel mare to the rail in front of the most pretentious looking saloon and headed for the door. His spurs clinked musically as he came up the steps. He swaggered a bit as he crossed the narrow veranda. He cocked his pearl gray Stetson at a rakish angle as he pushed open the twin doors and stepped inside the barroom.

The barroom was practically deserted. A number of waiters were arranging tables preparatory to the evening's business. An orchestra was tuning up on a raised platform. A barkeep was swabbing the mahogany.

Jeremy hooked his heel in the brass rail, leaned an elbow on the bar and ordered whisky. By turning his back he prevented the barkeep from seeing the wry expression on his face as he took his first drink.

Jeremy hitched his sorrel mare to the rail.

Things were beginning to reel a little by the time the contents of the glass was consumed, and Jeremy strode swaggeringly over to a table. For want of something better to do he poured himself another drink and slowly sipped it.

It seemed like hours later that Jeremy found himself sitting at the same table with a half-dozen congenial companions, all of whom were uproariously drunk and in good spirits. A small, bellicose-looking man was standing on a chair making a speech. Jeremy strained his ears to catch the words. "—Americans are all pigs; pigs and dogs."

Jeremy stood up, reeling. He wasn't so drunk, he told himself, but what he could resent such an insult. Grasping the table's edge for support, he struck out and knew dimly that his blow had caught the bellicose speechmaker in the stomach. Down he tumbled, folding up like an envelope.

Jeremy heard roars of applause and laughter. Then someone seized him from behind, thrust him backward. Jeremy couldn't remember exactly what happened after that, but when he came to his senses again the barroom was practically deserted. The orchestra was preparing to go home for the night. He looked around and found that he was seated at the same table, and that there was a man with a waxed mustache seated beside him.

Jeremy shook his head. "What's happened? I been here all night?"

"Ah, m'sieu ees feeling better. Perhaps m'sieu had better rest before eet ees time for the duel."

"Duel? What duel?"

"M'sieu does not remember. The duel you have promised to fight with Andre LaValle tomorrow at sunrise. M'sieu LaValle is the man you struck while he made zee speech. He ees also zee greatest pistol shot in all the cuntrye about Jurano. I am m'sieu's second."

"Do you mean to say I promised to fight a duel tomorrow at sunrise?"

"Exactly, m'sieu."

"But, look here! I was drunk. I can't remember."

"Ah, but M'sieu LaValle was also drunk. He ees insulted."

of anxiety in the man's voice. Things weren't at all clear, but he decided to bluff along as far as he could. "Good shot? Well, maybe I'm a bit rusty now. At the last international shoot, I only came in second."

"Second!" The mustached man's eyes popped open. There was no doubt now about the anxiety of his tones. He stood up. "If m'sieu will but wait, I will make zee arrangements for tomorrow." Then he was gone.

Jeremy slumped forward, resting his head on his hands. He felt weak and sick and lonely. . . . When Jeremy again opened his eyes, the room was dimly illuminated with daylight. He sat up, thankful at last his head was clear. He got to his feet and started for the door. About to descend into the street he saw a group of men approaching. At sight of him they set up a whoop and came running toward the steps.

"Hello, young fellow. Well, we're betting on you. How you feeling?" They were Americans, and they had come to watch him fight his duel! Jeremy suddenly felt weak again, remembering his boast about the international shoot.

Without waiting for his reply, two of the Americans picked him up and with shouts of joy set him astride the sorrel. Within a minute's time he found himself the center of a group of riders, galloping toward the outskirts of the town. A mile or so beyond the outskirts they came upon a group of men beneath a cottonwood tree. Jeremy saw the mustached man of the night previous, and a small bellicose individual, whom he judged to be LaValle.

At sight of the Americans the mustached man approached, singled out the leader of the Americans, and called him to one side. They were in conference for fully three minutes, at the end of which time the big American returned to where Jeremy was still sitting astride the sorrel.

"Well, young fellow, I guess you're out of luck. The great LaValle is willing to meet you half way. Says he'll apologize for what he said, if you'll apologize for hitting him. You must have said something to Mr. Mustache to scare them off."

A great wave of relief surged through the youth. He struggled to maintain an attitude of indifference rather than thanksgiving. . . . Once back in town Jeremy left the Americans and started for home. His one objective now was to put Jurano as far behind him as possible in the quickest possible time.

Back at the saloon the big American and his companions were laughing till the tears rolled down their cheeks. They felt quite sure that they had obeyed old Damon Slade's order and "thrown a scare into his son," and had a good time while doing it. They doubted if young Jeremy Slade would care to visit Jurano again right away on his own hook.

Models aren't choosy about what they want in their husbands-to-be—all they ask is that he be an average guy.

No Adonis need apply for a matrimonial position with the majority of the members of the Hollywood Model club, a recent poll of their shapely ranks showed, but Pamela Paul, executive secretary, said they did set forth these requirements:

Height, five feet 10 inches; weight, 170 pounds.

Can be one-quarter bald, but must have most of his own teeth and average health. Under this comes "we'll make allowances for hangover headaches and nervous indigestion."

He must play duffer golf, fair poker, lousy bridge and passable ping-pong or badminton.

At least three suits—one not shiny. Grouchy before breakfast, but "sweet" afterward; loyal to his friends; indifferent to his enemies, violently partisan in opinions and take his wife for granted!

Must be a garden putterer, like home life, kids and dogs, but will be required to get mad at all of them occasionally.

"And that," Miss Paul said the models were agreed, "is the kind of guy you don't find in Hollywood!"

"We ought to know!" chorused Wendy Wood, Normajeanne Jordan and Florence Lundeen, models who said they had been conducting a quiet bit of research on the side in a vain effort to discover their ideal man.

Vincent Van Gogh

German invasion of The Netherlands did not prevent issue of the announced 1940 summer cultural semi-postals, scheduled for release May 11, the day after Hitler's armies crossed the border. But occupation did delay arrival of the stamps in United States.

Included in the series of five stamps, picturing Dutch notables, is Vincent Van Gogh, painter. Van Gogh is a newcomer to philately's portrait gallery.

Simple, hard-working people were the artist's favorite subjects. His early paintings of miners, laborers and peasants were heavy, dark and dull. Later, however, Van Gogh was persuaded to use bright colors. His technique was not scientific and calculated, but almost barbaric in its emotion.

At 35 the artist suffered a nervous breakdown, threatened to stab a friend. Then, repentant, he cut off his own ear.

The last two years of his life were spent in a hospital for insane. He committed suicide in 1890.

GOOD PASTURE REQUIRES 'REST'

Planned Control Increases Profits on Livestock.

By F. V. BURCALOW
(Extension Agronomist, University of Wisconsin)

Good pastures that provide an abundance of nutritious and succulent forage throughout the grazing season also help the farmer who has them to produce livestock and dairy products at a profit.

Present pasture grasses and legumes will not remain productive under continuous close grazing during the entire season. In most areas a planned series of pastures is needed to provide an abundance of succulent forage throughout the entire grazing period.

Available permanent pasture should be used as the basis of a planned pasture program. Permanent pastures need to be improved and most of them will respond to an improvement program.

Many have been taken too much for granted and are now weed infested and unproductive. Depleted soil fertility and continuous over grazing are two important factors causing this condition. Most of these pastures are hungry for nitrogen and need to be red. Soil and climatic conditions determine whether the nitrogen should be fed in forms of commercial nitrogen fertilizers or through the use of legumes which can make atmospheric nitrogen available for use by the grasses.

For pastures in which the grasses normally used are subject to periods of drouth dormancy, nitrogen is most economically provided by use of drouth resistant legumes.

The old adage "Take care of the legumes and the grasses will take care of themselves" could well be used as a rule for the improvement of permanent pastures, especially those which periodically suffer from drouth. A good program would consist of replenishing the soil with adequate supplies of lime, phosphate, and potash for the growth of legumes, working these minerals into the soil and preparing a seed bed so that legumes could be established.

The improved area should then be fenced so that grazing can be regulated to aid in establishing and maintaining the stand of legumes.

Protein Supplement Helps Beef Cattle Gain Finish

Sam L. Williams, assistant extension animal husbandman of N. C. State college, has an answer to the question: "Can beef be produced without a protein supplement?"

This is what he has been telling beef cattle breeders and feeders who have asked the question in recent weeks: "In my opinion it can be done, but it is neither practical nor profitable."

Then he goes on to explain that the important thing to the cattle producer is how much weight and finish he can put on his cattle and how long it will require. Efficient production is essential to greatest profit in any business, and this is especially true in the cattle business.

Some of the more common protein supplements are cottonseed meal, soybean meal, linseed meal, and corn gluten meal. All of these are about equal in feeding value.

Williams explained that the economy of feeding a protein supplement lies in the fact that such feeds are responsible for more efficient utilization of feed, larger gains, higher finish, and a greater selling price.

Insurance on Wheat Reaches New High

A record number of crop insurance contracts—420,077—has been written as protection on the 1941 wheat crop in 36 states, according to Leroy K. Smith, manager of the Federal Crop Insurance corporation.

This number exceeded by 41,917 the 378,160 contracts written on both winter and spring wheat last year. The 1941 contracts guarantee growers a total production of 110,591,202 bushels of wheat from 10,946,284 insured acres.

"This is the third successive year that the federal crop insurance program has shown consistent gains in the number of contracts guaranteeing wheat growers protection from all unavoidable hazards," the manager said.

Care for Parasites

A drug called phenothiazine will aid the farmer in ridding horses, cattle, swine and other domestic animals of internal parasites, according to Carrol E. Howell, manager of the University of California's W. K. Kellogg institute of animal husbandry.

It was found that the treatment completely eliminated stomach worms in 37 of the animals and was from 78 to 95 per cent effective in the other eight.

Household Hints

If sugar is added to water when making flavored ice cubes, the cubes will not freeze clear or solidly.

To keep the inside of a gas range in good condition, remove rust that may have accumulated with coarse sandpaper, then rub over entire surface with olive oil.

A teaspoonful of vinegar added to any boiled frosting before spreading will keep it from becoming brittle or breaking when it is cut.

If kerosene is added to the water with which linoleum is washed it will loosen dirt and make washing much easier.

To give shingles the appearance of being stained, use a paint with low gloss, or a flat paint.

HIGH PRICES Do Not Go WITH ADVERTISING

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay.

Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.

Bob Coe of the Whitewater Register has just returned from a trip to Florida and tells of a trip in a glass-bottomed boat at Silver Springs. Although these springs are widely advertised as "one of Nature's greatest spectacles," Mr. Coe said they could not compare with the old Aurelian Spring which is now submerged in the lake on the Froedtert property near Palmyra. Mr. Coe says, "I recall the old Aurelian Spring near Palmyra on a windless, sunshiny day with the wealth of white sand in a turmoil at the bottom and planked with vivid rainbows of color. The Silver Springs have no show like that and you Badgers who have seen the one don't need to spend a dollar to see the very poor imitation in Florida."

Relatives have received word from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lange of Escondido, Cal., that they have been very ill. We are glad to report that both are now gaining.

NOSING THE NEWS
BY JUDGE DEVITT

And as Spring deepens into lovely May and Nature puts forth the wonder show of the year so too does the state of the war deepen into grave concern and Hitler puts on the blitzkrieg of totalitarianism. And in a speech before the Reichstag the dictator declares that no combination of powers can stop Germany now, can stop Adolph Hitler from achieving his destiny. And in a statement on the same day President Roosevelt bluntly asserts that America is ready for a crusade like that of 1918 if it is needed.

And the "All Out to Britain" signal has been given by the extension of American naval activities. And too by the feverish shipment of guns, planes, and supplies to the beleaguered British. And whether all aid to Britain is the wisest policy is something for future generations to decide. And America is ready to shed every drop of blood and to make any sacrifice to preserve the independence and freedom of this country and of all the western hemisphere of the Americas. And America knows that in spite of the remarks of a dictator who is perhaps intoxicated with his own power that America can and will, if the need arises, withstand the onslaught of any totalitarian phalanx.

And so as Summer trips rapidly along in the wake of Spring, war clouds deepen. And America is for defense but is undecided on the best means of employing that defense, whether by active participation in the Battle of Britain or by waiting until the dreamer of a world dominion dares cast the gauntlet of war in our face.

And in either eventuality, if right is right and God is God, America will triumph. And the awful decision as to which of these courses it is wisest to pursue rests with our generation.

JOHNNIE OLSON'S TOTTINGS!

A woman's scream may be annoying to some folks, but it will always be a welcome noise to me, because it was just such a scream that rescued me from what might have been a very unpleasant situation.

While still in high school, I worked part time in a meat market. I was alone in the shop one evening when a woman came in for some meat. A strange man had followed her in and stood about while she was making her purchase. Suddenly, she screamed. The man turned and ran out of the store and into the arms of a passing officer. On searching him, he was found to be armed. Later he was identified as a notorious hold-up man. "Mrs. Brown, if you hadn't screamed, I would certainly have been robbed," I declared gratefully. "But how did you know he was a bandit?" "I didn't know," protested Mrs. Brown. "I screamed when you told me how much the roast was going to cost!"
