Eight Years Are Not Too Many

By BARBARA ANN BENEDICT

(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

THE girl had chestnut-brown hair and brown eyes. There was something tantalizingly familiar about her. Bennett Wood plumed his memory, but he could not recall her.

"I'm sorry," he said. "I don't believe I remember you. Though I should. There's—something vaguely familiar."

The girl smiled at him. Looking at her, Bennett cursed his lapse of memory. In that moment he didn't understand how he could have forgotten anyone so beautiful.

"I'm Marsha Porter. We must have met at Ellen's wedding."

Bennett frowned. The name, too, had a disturbingly familiar sound. Yet he couldn't connect the two, and his failure to do so was very annoying. Ellen Cushman's wedding had taken place eight years ago. That in itself was an excuse, because a lot could change in eight years—even people.

"You're Bennett Wood." The girl's eyes were twinkling at him. "You see, I haven't forgotten."

Bennett gestured, half apologetically, half helplessly. His disturbed state of mind seemed to amuse the girl.

"You've been away for eight years—abroad. They say you went directly after the wedding, because you were in love with Ellen and you wanted to forget. When Ellen decided to have this party, this reunion of those who participated in the wedding, she was afraid she wouldn't be able to reach you. But she did, and you came. And—and I think you were very nice."

Bennett bit his lip, and almost hated the girl for her frankness. It was all true. He had never been able to forget Ellen. But it was because he hated himself for not Impulsively he turned back toward the house, then stopped, remembering Marsha.

"I've got to go back," he said apologetically. "I—I want to see Ellen. All this that you've told me doesn't seem quite real."

"Of course." There was understanding in the girl's tone, and a faint note of pity. She went with him back along the path, quickening her pace to suit his, without comment.

Bennett left her near the dance floor and went toward the house. Unaccountably his heart was thumping. He wondered what Ellen would be like. Marsha had said she'd changed. He told himself he didn't care, that it made no difference what she was like or how she looked. He wanted to see her, to tell her of all those dreadful, bitter, hopeless years he'd spent abroad trying to forget.

He reached the veranda and paused, wondering how he'd announce himself. It seemed a little foolish. Ellen wasn't ready, or she'd have appeared long ago. But he wanted to see her before she met the others. He wanted to know whether there was still a chance. He could tell after one glance. She wouldn't be able to hide it. Not the way he felt.

The fear of what he might discover, when he looked into her eyes, struggled against the joy and hope which had caused the blood to pound in his veins when Marsha had told him Ellen was free, and had been for six years.

Bennett paused, trying to adjust his thoughts. He didn't want to appear the fool, especially if Ellen had forgotten him as completely as it might seem because of her six years of silence.

There was a footman in the hall, and Bennett decided to send word by him to Ellen. He started toward the door, and turned as a hand rested on his arm. It was Marsha Porter. Something about the way she looked at him compelled his attention, caused him to turn about and forget for the moment it was Ellen he wanted to see.

There was still that familiar something about her, now seemingly more pronounced. Bennett frowned and felt goosepimples stand out on his skin. His mind was confused. He wondered why he didn't leave her abruptly and go into the house. He wanted to, he thought.

"Hello, Bennett." Marsha's voice was strange, different. There was a wistful something in the way she looked at him. The manner in which she cocked her head on one side and smiled struck a familiar cord. The wrinkles on his forehead deepened, and he felt maddeningly bewildered.

"You're not very flattering, Bennett, not to remember me."

Then abruptly he knew. She was Ellen! "Marsha Porter" was Ellen. It all came with a rush. Marsha was her stage name. He had heard it once or twice, long ago, before he knew her very well. That was what made it familiar. She had changed a lot. Why shouldn't she? She had been very young when she married Jerome. Much too young.

Bennett groped for words. He took her hand in his and stared dumbly, wishing he could say something, knowing he loved her even more than he had eight years ago.

She laughed up into his face and came close to him. "Not very flattering, Bennett. But I have changed, and really shouldn't have blamed you. Will you forgive me for not revealing my identity? I'm sorry. But—but I had to know."

"Know what? Had to know what, Ellen?" He leaned toward her eagerly.

"Know whether you still cared, Bennett. I—it's been so long since I've seen you."

"But why didn't you send for me, let me know?"

She smiled. "I did. That's why I planned this party. I was afraid you wouldn't come. It was such a poor excuse."

Bennett's arms went about her and suddenly his thoughts were no longer confused, and a great sense of peace came over him.

$100,000 in Dead Letters
Twenty billion stamps are sold every year. This doesn't count metered mail or that handled by bulk without using actual stamps. Thirteen million dead letters, without deliverable—or returnable—addresses on them, are destroyed annually. But, first, the average of $100,000 found in them is retained by the post office.

In a round-up of statistics, you find unexpected things. Among such items are $10,000,000 worth of gasoline or delivery trucks, $7,000 worth of mucilage, $50,000 worth of soap, 500 lawn mowers to cut post office lawns, and 200,000 tons of coal for heating purposes. And, no matter what you may think of the quality of the pen points furnished in post offices, 5,000,000 are bought each year.

It isn't possible to store in any one place the actual accounts of this business. So they are re-recorded on microfilm—nearly 3,000,000 tiny photographs are made annually.

Goodness Survives

It has become a settled principle that nothing which is good and true can be destroyed by persecution, but that the effect ultimately is to establish more firmly, and to spread more widely, that which it was designed to overthrow. It has long since passed into a proverb that "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church."—Albert Barnes.

Alert for Opportunities

It is a dangerous thing to wait for opportunities until it becomes a habit. Energy and inclination for hard work ooze out in the waiting. Opportunity becomes invisible to those who are doing nothing, or looking somewhere else for it. It is the great worker, the man who is alert for chances, that sees them.—O. S. Marden.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
 You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pain, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
 Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Smart Midseason Dresses Are Dignified and Simply Styled

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THERE is a new psychology in the matter of dress. It's a most wholesome one which yields to no compromise with feminine charm and flattery, but tends toward greater simplicity, careful selection and an appreciative evaluation of wearing apparel that avoids extravagance. Clothes are made to serve dependably and at the same time graciously, during the stress and strain of the present war period.

Its well-mannered clothes that women are wanting, the sort that won't shriek with glitter and gewgaws, yet will be spirit-lifters in their colorfulness, suavity of line and genuine charm. The winsome little wool dresses now so popular give the answer. Not only do they exploit color but they are styled to a nicety with all sorts of "catchy" details that individualize them and make them of outstanding style importance, not only for immediate wear but for the summer.

The accompanying group picture eloquently tells the story of quality, materials of distinction and flattering color. The first of this trio, that shown to the left in the above illustration, is a clever sports dress for the teen-age girl. It is in chocolate colored wool panelled with brown-stitched beige. Simple tailored princess lines enhance this model, together with an easy grace achieved by the full-gored effect below the hipline.

The dress to the right in the picture above stresses the new 1942 classic simplicity to a nicety. It exploits the sleek-fitting long-torso lines now so popular with college girls and the junior set. One of the persuasive arguments in favor of the attractive colorful daytime wool frocks is that they are "up to tricks" in the way of ingenious detail. In this instance it is the lacing at each side of the long-torso bodice that is eye-catching. Self material is laced around gold hooks. This model comes in delectable pastels or in lush colors.

Centered in the group above is a perfect "date" dress for the girl who must wear her "special occasion" dress all day in the office. This gown of leaf green crepe has a striking triple-tiered peplum, a smartly curved yoke and the somewhat full, straight sleeve favored this season.

Too sweet for words are the dainty little afternoon dresses of light wool or rayon crepe in exquisite pastels. They are fashioned with cunning self-fabric trimming. One has three rows of tiny ruching applied to a medium flare skirt line, three huge hand painted wood buttons and matching ruching about a clever yokeline. Made of China pink crepe it is the ideal answer to the demand for something dressy but not too dressy.

The fuss made by the younger set over white date dresses continues. White jersey seems to be the outstanding material for these dresses. Now that color is so important, many of these jerseys are made gay and bright with embroidered flowers and motifs done in multi-colored yarns. Some of the most attractive white jersey frocks are highlighted with effective trapunto quilted design. Others are made festive with gilt buttons and girdles.

Ribbed Jacket

If you're headed resort-ward, plenty of lightweight sports things should be in your trunks. Here is one of the new loafer coats (the name reveals its purpose) to wear when you loll around on the veranda or beaches or wherever the spirit moves you. These jackets are made of cordurella, a feminine version of cordurex, the popular velvety-ribbed men's wear fabric. If you are a husband-and-wife combination, his windbreaker and slacks should be made of the finest lightest cordurex in order to interpret fashion at its smartest.

Save Stockings to Help Student Work

Women throughout the states are being asked to join a unique campaign to save old, worn-out silk or nylon hose (no rayon), to help send American girls and boys through college. For every thousand pairs of old hose contributed one girl or boy is enabled to attend college for 12 months.

A curtailment of silk has forced many in the student body of Athens college in Alabama to stay home this year. They had been earning their way working in the college's hosiery mills.

The stockings sent in will be reconditioned and "backwound," the process done under government supervision.

For Blackout

Some of the stores are featuring blackout accessories, such as bags done in plaid fiber to wear over the shoulder. They have five pockets, and it is advised that they be kept stocked with emergency requirements—flashlight, sweater, and other useful items. You can even get shoes that have tiny flashlight attachments.

Floating Suit

For those who cannot swim it should be good news that a floating swim suit has been devised that is non-sinkable, its patented feature being the lining of a spongy substance that floats. You can get these novel, practical suits in fitted or in dressmaker styles.

Brunch Coat

A fad that is growing into a pronounced movement is the brunch coat. It's as practical to wear as the usual smock, but is more formal and can be found in a greater variety of styles.

FLOCK'S COMFORT NETS MORE EGGS

Hen Protection Is Vital Need In Winter Season.

By C. F. FARRISH
 (Poultryman, North Carolina State College.)

When the cold winds of winter blow, that's the time to think of the comfort of the farm poultry flock.

A comfortable house, free from drafts, will help to keep the birds free from common winter ailments and aid them in producing a maximum number of eggs.

Then, too, each bird should have at least 3 1/2 to 4 square feet of floor space. If the flock is crowded, additional space should be provided or the number culled down to a point where the birds may be comfortable in present quarters.

Water that has been heated to knock the chill off, or fresh from the well early each morning, will do much to prevent a cold snap from causing a sharp drop in egg production. For less trouble, automatic electric or oil-heated warmers should be installed.

The feeding of one pound of alfalfa leaf meal per 100 birds will be a satisfactory substitute for green feed if the dry fall prevented the sowing of a grazing crop.

If the flock is properly housed and cared for and not more than 30 to 40 eggs per 100 hens are received daily, then there may be something wrong with the health or breeding of the birds.

Although it is too late to change the laying flock this year, the poultryman should give careful thought to the kind of breeding males he uses next year, or the sources from which he purchases his baby chicks, it is advised.

AGRICULTURE IN INDUSTRY

By Florence C. Weed

(This is one of a series of articles showing how farm products are finding an important market in industry.)

Walnuts and Furniture

Those stately ancestral walnut trees that grow about a home place are seldom thought of as farm income. Yet individual walnut trees will sometimes bring from $50 to $100 each, occasionally more. The price is as high as $500 per thousand feet for the best wood, the highest price of any wood grown on the farm. In the walnut-producing states, farmers have sold as much as $2,500,000 in walnut logs annually.

Furniture manufacturers buy the greatest part of the wood but the more inferior grades bring good prices for gun stocks, automobile steering wheels, airplane propellers and musical instruments. In its unpainted state, the wood is one of the most beautiful and has lasting beauty when finished. It is very durable and does not check or warp.

Much of the fine old heirloom furniture is made of solid walnut. Modern pieces are now often made of veneer which is young walnut sapwood steamed to produce the effect of better class wood.

The annual nut crop brings a steady income to growers year after year. There is a ready market for nut meats at 12 to 15 cents per pound in small quantities or five dollars per bushel in large quantities. Scientists have improved the walnut by producing a variety with a larger percentage of meat than shell.

The walnut tree grows on ground of fairly low fertility and offers a profitable enterprise for many farmers who want to add another source of income.

In a test of 308 days by the department of agriculture, pullets fed mash in pellet form each averaged 17 eggs more than those fed unpeletted mash. Feed consumption for each group was practically identical.

Imports of sage have dropped to a point that makes domestic production necessary, reports the National Farm Chemurgic council, Columbus, Ohio, which offers to supply information on cultivation of the plant.
