Wisconsin's Health

By Cornelius A. Harper, M. D. State Health Officer

There must be a million people in Wisconsin who are searching for extra ways in which to help their nation and the Allied cause.

Here are a few tips:
Dental care can be arranged for children whose teeth are being neglected. (During the first year of selective service, 20 percent of the Wisconsin men called up were rejected because of poor teeth.)

A lot of children who ought to be getting cod liver oil capsules are going without them because of their cost.

Though living in the nation's dairyland, thousands and thousands of Wisconsin babies and children are not getting enough milk to insure robust health. Your group can do something about these things.

Most of our adults, on the other hand, are eating more than they should. Go on a war diet and spend the difference for defense stamps and bonds.

Many children have slight eye and ear defects which are not being looked after, due to the expense involved. This small expense, provided now, will spell normal health in adult years.

One reason for Hitler's mad conduct was that he thought our country had grown too soft to fight for its democracy. There may arise others like the current dictators, and we will have to live like athletes to keep them in their place. Our adult habits should be such as to set the right example for our youth instead of leading youth astray.

Respect your nation and voice complete confidence in its armed forces. When the war story can be told in full, you will find that this respect and confidence are vindicated.

S.W. Ottawa

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

STORY OF THE WEEK

Southern Girl

By MEREDITH SCHOLL
(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

WHEN PALMER LINDSEY looked up at the girl he noticed her wide blue eyes and shoulder length soft golden hair. She started talking immediately and he enjoyed hearing her pleasant southern drawl. "Well, well," he said. "So you're from the South?" "Yes, suh. Magnolia City, just south of Atlanta, Georgia, suh." "Do tell? And the name is?" "Sally Lee Patterson, suh."

Palmer scratched his chin. He was thinking of the 150 other girls, New York born and bred, who aspired to the female reporter's position which was open on the Monitor. He wondered how Sally Lee got by the office boy, but decided not to ask her. He'd rather guess. Where a hundred fifty others had failed Sally had been successful. Humm. "I suppose you've had experience, Miss Patterson?" "Oh, yes suh. I worked for two years on the Magnolia City's Commentator. Yes, suh. I've had experience, suh."

Palmer scratched his chin again. He was trying to make up his mind to something, but before a decision asserted itself, the girl said: "You-all are from the South, aren't you, suh?"

Palmer started. "How in the world did you know that?"

"Why, suh. We Southerners—" She broke off, staring at him in round-eyed significance. Palmer cleared his throat.

"I'll tell you what," he said. "You run down to the Municipal Building and get me a story on Felipe Menendez. He's up here from Mexico on business. Color it up and turn it in for the afternoon edition."

"Sally, I can't go on playing this game any longer. My conscience is killing me by inches."

If you've got something on the ball—

"Oh, thank you, suh. I'll get the story, suh."

Palmer couldn't think of any good reason why he should take Sally Lee to lunch, except that he wanted to talk to her about the story she'd written on Menendez, and because also he wanted to ask her more about Magnolia City. Both of which he thought sufficient excuses.

"When I told you to color it up," he explained over coffee, "I didn't mean to write an essay. After all, there are certain rules that every newspaper writer must abide by." He went on patiently to explain what those rules were, although he didn't know why. Any one of the other 150 candidates wouldn't have to be told. But after awhile, when the conversation shifted to Georgia, and she told him about Magnolia City in the soft drawly way she had felt repaid.

"There's one thing you'll want to remember," he said as they crossed the street back to the Monitor office. "Goodnow—he's the managing editor—comes from Virginia." She flashed him a look of grateful understanding.

"Thank you, suh," she said. "Thank you."

"And don't," said Palmer, "call me 'suh.' Call me 'Palmer.'"

It was more than a week before Palmer permitted anything of Sally Lee's to appear in the Monitor. Then he did so in fear and trembling. But nobody said anything, no reader wrote sarcastic letters to the editor asking whether the squib was a humorous column or a treatise on the wild life in Central Park, and Palmer felt that he'd passed the crisis.

During that first week he spent three evenings with Sally Lee trying to explain to her that news was supposed to be presented in boiled-down facts and not in a lot of gushy, flowery phrases. Her style of writing made him skeptical about the type of paper the Magnolia City Commentator might be.

And all the time Palmer was conscious of a feeling of guilt. He felt that way especially when he read Sally Lee's stuff and thought of the 150 other prospects, New York born and bred. He expected momentarily that Goodnow would come stamping over and make some sarcastic crack about General Lee's daughter and her mush, but Goodnow didn't. In fact, Palmer saw the managing editor stop twice at Sally Lee's desk and say something to her which caused the Magnolia City scribe to look at him with her wide blue eyes and smile.

A month passed. And then one night up in Sally Lee's apartment, with the remains of a steak on the table between them, Palmer said suddenly, impulsively and without preamble: "Sally, I can't go on playing this game any longer. My conscience is killing me by inches. And the fact remains that you're not a newspaper woman or ever will be. I could get one of a thousand females to do your work, better than you're doing it, for half the salary. You're fired."

Sally looked at him with her wide blue eyes, bit one of her full red lips, looked down at the table and said: "O. K. I expected it." Palmer dragged his chair around and sat down beside her. "Good. I knew you'd take it that way. And now that that's over, let's be honest with each other. Sally, I'm in love with you. I have been ever since the day you got by the office boy. You must have guessed."

"I had to guess, didn't I?" She looked up at him. "Because you never mentioned it. You only talked about the—the darned old newspaper."

"Excuses," he said. "Excuses to be with you. You knew that."

She watched him steadily. "And you knew I didn't come from Magnolia City, Georgia."

"I admired you for trying to get away with the gag, and for getting by the office boy. Because of that I thought you might make a good newspaper woman."

"Is that the only reason you hired me?"

"No. Will you marry me?"

Sally bit her full red lips again. "Mr. Goodnow thought I was a Southerner. How did you know I wasn't?"

"Shucks. Goodnow's a Southerner himself. You can't fool him. That's why I warned you."

"Goodnow is?—But aren't you?"

"Nope. I hail from New York. Flatbush. Lived there all my life. Five years ago I heard Goodnow was looking for a city editor. So I went in and told him I came from a little town outside of Richmond. Yes, suh. And he swallowed it. That's why I felt almost obliged to give you the same chance I had. Two people working the same gag, you know. But all the time I kept thinking of those other 150. Newspaper women. All of them. And hang it, Sally, you weren't making the grade. You weren't made to be a newspaper woman. You were made for—other things." He leaned toward her. "Sally, why not try being a newspaper man's wife?"

Sally considered. And Palmer, watching her, thought for a moment that he'd figured everything wrong. Then he saw the corners of her mouth begin to twitch, and he breathed again.

She looked up at him. "Well, suh, I promised myself I'd get to work on a newspaper. But since I'm not cut out for it, maybe second best will have to do. Yes, suh."

Whereupon Palmer took her into his arms and told her they'd spend their honeymoon in dear old Georgia, sho' enough.

Golf Scientist Knocks Spots Off Dogmatic Dope

Bernath Phillips, a graduate student in physical education at Pennsylvania State college, is on the way toward a Ph.D. degree by making a new study of just what anyone has to have to be a good golfer. Young Phillips, an athlete who went to Berlin in 1936 with the student Olympic team to demonstrate typical American sports, has definitely proved a lot of things that the locker-room boys have suspected for a long time. For instance, brains have nothing to do with golfing ability. Neither does brute strength. And the young scientist knocks the spots off the dogmatic advice of the text books that golfers have to "feel" their swing. Phillips has learned that from a series of clever tests he has devised for predicting golfing ability. His best one uses a putter as a driver. Scientist Phillips makes his human guinea pigs drive blindfolded and with the handle sawed off an extra six inches. This putter has a long spike in place of the usual head and it punches holes in a paper target. The novice stands on a box while young Phillips centers the club's point just over the bull's-eye. Then, still blindfolded, the subject "drives" five times. It seems that most golfers might make better scores by chopping off their right arms. Two of the young men tested had injured their right hands and could not grip the club with their right thumb or little finger. They had to grip more with the left hand. Every teaching professional has preached this doctrine for years and scientist Phillips nailed that one because these boys gained 50 per cent in accuracy. One managed to keep right on "forgetting" that he had a right hand even after his thumb healed and he consistently improved his score. But the other went back to his right hand hitting and probably wound up in the rough. Mr. Phillips has four of these tests.

'Stolen' Jewels Broadest Risk in Insurance World

Policies Amounting to More Than $500,000,000 Are Written in Year.

NEW YORK.—Because American women love expensive jewelry—and are not always too careful when they wear it or where they keep it—more than $500,000,000 worth of personal jewelry insurance will have been written by the end of the current year.

This staggering sum represents the face value of such policies written each year by 167 companies specializing in one of the broadest risks in the world of insurance—that of protecting gems against every possible unhappy fate, including theft, loss and destruction.

There are few easier tasks than that of hiding such a necklace in a convenient place, reporting it lost, collecting the insurance and then, years later, selling the diamonds one by one.

Naturally, the insurance companies sometimes make mistakes. In these cases, they pay off, if the amount is not too large, and charge it up to experience. Later, if the missing jewelry turns up they may prosecute the would-be swindler. But, in most cases, they are inclined to settle for cash, on the theory that frauds of this type are particularly hard to prove in court.

Can Lose Anything.
This is especially the case when a woman is the policyholder, because male jurors, especially married ones, are prone to believe that women can lose anything.

Misplacement of jewelry, interesting enough, is tied up with many psychological factors. Middle aged women, passing through a melancholy stage, frequently develop complexes in which they think they are being followed and begin transferring their valuables from one hiding place to another. Sooner or later the time comes when they forget the last hiding place and become convinced some one has stolen their jewels.

A striking case of misplaced gems occurred early this year when the late Mrs. Roe Wells, wealthy wife of a doughnut company executive, reported a loss of $225,000 in jewelry.

Detectives descended upon the Wells' lavish winter home in Miami Beach.

"And not only jewels," explained Mrs. Wells, "but we had $475,000 in cash in the house. That's gone, too—we haven't the slightest idea how."

The jewels and $75,000 in cash had been kept in a chamois bag among the dozens of shoes in Mrs. Wells' closet, she told police.

Attends Party.
Further questioning revealed that the jewels and money had vanished at least 24 hours before police were called, and that during this time Mrs. Wells had attended her regular bridge sessions with friends and had otherwise followed an undisturbed routine.

"There's no evidence to indicate a robbery," Earl Carpenter, chief of detectives, declared.

A day later, Wells telephoned authorities that the jewels and more than $20,000 in cash had been found. Carpenter commented: "In my opinion the rest of the money will be found in the home just as soon as Mrs. Wells is able to remember where she put it."

Shortly after FBI agents disclosed that Mrs. Wells on previous occasions had mislaid both jewelry and money. Sure enough, the missing cash was eventually found.

Sleep Walkers in Armed Forces Has Experiences

LONDON.—Humorous and tragic instances have resulted from the antics of sleep walkers in the British armed forces. There was the soldier who left his bed, dressed, polished his buttons, and went on sentry duty—still asleep. A more tragic instance was that of a young airman, who, it was stated at an inquest, "baled out" of a bedroom window to his death. There are other instances, outside of the forces.

A schoolboy on the eve of an important cricket match was seen by his astonished parents, scoring imaginary runs up and down the hallway.

After a time he shouldered his bat and marched sedately to his room.

A German actress, Anny Ahlers, in one scene from a London production, had to climb through a window to meet her lover. Apparently she was thinking of this scene when she fell from the bedroom window of a London hotel to her death.

Accused Bootlegger Complains of Shortage

TULSA.—A police officer who aided in the capture of a bootlegger's car drove it to the station. In taking inventory of its contents, officers found 17 pints of whiskey.

"Hey," said the accused dealer, "something's wrong—I had 54 pints in there."

Chief of Detectives Blaine said he had "reprimanded" the officer who brought the car in.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Save your scraps of soap, melt them together and use for washing clothes.

When grinding dry bread, tie a paper bag over the outlet of the grinder to prevent crumbs from going over the table and floor.

It's better to wash soiled woolen garments through several sudsy waters instead of just one. It is easier on the garment.

Cook carrots in just a little water so you won't have to drain off any of the minerals and vitamins before serving.

Wash your dish towels daily and dry them in the sun to keep them white and free from odor.

One teaspoon of onion juice or half a sliced raw onion added to mashed potatoes gives them a different flavor.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.
● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.
● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. This advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

Defense Uniforms Can Be as Smart as They Are Practical

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NOW that thousands of women are engaged in defense service that takes them into factories and plants, or that keeps them busy on the farm, designers are confronted with a new challenge to create practical clothes that are primarily functional but are also chic and becoming.

In this program of clothes that are able to resist wear and tear, the first problem to be considered is necessarily that of finding materials that will give satisfaction from the standpoint of wearability plus launderability. Since sturdy cottons can "take it," they naturally are first in fabric choice. Denim holds forth at the top of the list in either solid colors or stripes (often combined for contrast). Then come coverts, manish tweed cotton suitings and that favorite of favorites—corduroy.

White duck, which holds an enviable record for perfect laundering, is particularly smart for young girls who like snappy fashions and who are stationed in surroundings that demand they look immaculate. This fabric is suitable not only for overalls, but also for overseas caps, to keep straying locks from the eyes.

To the left in the illustration above is a costume especially designed for American women at work in defense industries, on farms, or in the air. This "civilian defense suit" is cut on a pattern of simplicity that any woman can make for herself, even if she is a novice at sewing. Note that this suit of washable white duck is one-piece. This garment has convertible trousers which may be worn full or snuggled in to insure protection from possible entanglement in machinery.

Uniforms for women must have certain basic protective details such as those mentioned above, and they must also be designed for freedom of movement.

They must be easy to take off and on, with straps caught at the back so that overalls will not slip off at the shoulders, with snap fasteners at the ankles for comfort and protection.

Corduroy mix-mates give opportunity for bright color, style and service and all in one. They meet the farm girl's needs to perfection, and they are equally as useful and smart in the factory. Not only is the never-wear-out quality of corduroy a convincing argument in its favor, but corduroy has that something attractive about it that measures up to any wear required of it from work to play. It goes about town or trudges along country roads with equal adaptability.

The attractiveness of corduroy is shown in the illustration above by the culotte ensemble centered in the group. In this instance, a bright plaid cotton shirt is teamed with a corduroy culotte and vest. Corduroy shoes and cotton stockings complete a perfect outfit for all sorts of active wear. In this smart, good-looking ensemble one can confidently go about town on a shopping tour, feeling suitably dressed for the occasion.

Mixmate this vest of corduroy with slacks, shown to the right in the picture above, and you have a suit that gives the answer to a gay young farmerette as to "what to wear" about home during busy hours. Wear a corduroy deret with this suit if you must go into town on an errand, or whatever the call of duty may happen to be.

Bright Wool

What with all the glitter of sequin and spangle, it is a relief to turn to the lovely color-bright soft wool classics that fashion elects for style supremacy this winter. Undoubtedly these flattering little wools, fashioned as they are with studied simplicity, will be "stealing the show" during the weeks to come. These lovely classic wools make color their theme, and worn under winter furs, they lead the first-in-fashion group. Pictured is a charming model of Forstmann wool in a subtle green that goes beautifully with any fur. There is a restrained accent of sparkling gilt on the belt and front closing. Wear a flaring hat and carry a beaver muff.

Dutch Bonnets and Hoods Have Peasant Embroidery

A charming new fashion that is going the rounds this winter, to the delight of high school and college girls, is that of cunning little hoods or bonnets cut in the manner of Dutch bonnets or baby caps and made of bright felt. Or, if you prefer, they can be gaily crocheted. These are adorned with appliques of felt flowers in peasant colorings or trimmed in crocheted flowers. They tie under the chin, and they lend a most attractive dash of color to a wintry landscape. They're perfect with skating outfits, or to wear to and from dances, or to school.

Here's the Latest Style: Dresses With Apron Front

Here's the latest bit of fashion gossip. It's all about the dresses with cleverly designed apron fronts. This new fashion calls for a pencil-slim skirt, at the front of which there is a tie-on apron effect. Sometimes it is achieved with a cascade drape of material. Again it is a pleated tie-on that makes the apron. However, the cleverest of all, because it introduces the right print accent, is the applique of cut out floral prints. The effect is just about as charming as fancy can picture, especially if a corresponding touch of the print appears on the sleeves.

Evening Capes Sparkle With Beads and Sequins

Just as new as the coming New Year are the new evening capes, some long and some short, that are made of bright colored woollens handsomely and elaborately embroidered with sparkling stones or sequins or vivid yarns. A favorite color for these gay little capes is magenta. Jet beading on black or white wool also ranks high in chic

FARMER WARNED ON WAR BUYING

Bargains for Cash Will Prevail After Emergency.

By H. C. M. CASE
(Head of Agricultural Economics, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.)

There will be plenty of bargains for those having the cash when the war emergency is over and farmers facing rising prices should keep this in mind.

As improvement costs increase it may be well to postpone some improvements until costs are lower and labor and materials are easier to obtain, rather than pay a high price now. In fact, future construction of this kind will help prevent a post-defense depression.

Farmers will be tempted to over-expand their operations and investments in response to high prices, but nothing is more important to the farmer than careful financial plans, especially to farmers burdened with mortgages and other financial obligations. Farmers free of indebtedness with money to invest may still make some wise investments but should avoid heavy new obligations.

The inflation of land values and of prices of other things farmers bought during the last war, is recalled, which later were paid for with farm products at greatly reduced prices. Many farmers lost title to their property because they were unable to meet their obligations.

Current low interest rates, which are not assured for a long time in the future, may lead some farmers to overpay for land. While low interest rates bring a lower annual payment, usually they have the influence of raising prices of land and other commodities bought. Hence the purchaser in the end has a much larger principal to pay. For example, a 5 per cent $60 mortgage is much more favorable than a 3 per cent loan on $100. Although the annual interest paid is the same, the principal is $40 more in the latter case.

In order to avoid the ill effects of a post-war depression, farmers were advised to consider seven points: (1) Avoid land inflation by not purchasing at high prices; (2) avoid long term debts or obligations that fall due in large lump sums; (3) pay off current debts; (4) improve land to meet more easily post-war low prices; (5) provide better living conditions in the home; (6) create reserves by prepaying interest and principal on debts, as well as to provide good cash reserves; (7) postpone high-cost purchases until after the emergency, if possible.

Dairy Cow Requires Protein Supplement

Overfeeding farm grains to dairy cattle in the food production program in an attempt to supply sufficient protein and avoid the purchase of a high protein supplement is false economy, explains J. G. Cash, extension dairy specialist of the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

For example, a cow requiring 10 pounds of a 15 per cent protein mixture a day to meet her needs could get the same amount of protein from 15 pounds of a mixture of equal parts of corn and cob meal and ground oats, but the cost would be greater and the cow probably would not produce as well because of the lack of balance between the protein and carbohydrates.

A suitable mixture containing 15 per cent total protein could be made with 600 pounds of corn and cob meal, 400 pounds ground oats and 200 pounds soybean meal, at a cost of $1.47 a hundred pounds (figuring corn at 70 cents a bushel, oats at 45 cents a bushel and soybean meal at $2.50 a hundred pounds, and adding a grinding charge of 10 cents a hundred pounds for corn and oats). Ten pounds of this mixture would supply 1½ pounds of protein and would cost 14.7 cents.

Around the Farm

Farm boys and girls are being encouraged to increase supplies of foods needed in this country by raising pigs, calves and chickens.

Oats, barley, wheat or rye grass pasture is so high in protein that very little protein feed is needed in the grain mixture for dairy cows.

Rubber tires will last longer if rubber-tired machines and implements are blocked up, when not in use, to keep the weight off the tires.

Butter may be successfully stored in sub-zero temperatures for six years, claim Cornell university scientists after taking butter from coolers where it had been stored for that period of time.

Milk production in this country must be expanded to an all-time high. With dairy production already at a high level and farm labor getting scarcer, the job of boosting dairy production is a challenge to every farmer and farm leader in the dairy sections of the nation.

Palmyra suffered with the rest of the state the past week as sub-zero temperatures settled over Wisconsin. Wednesday showed no signs of a let-up—the mercury dropping down to 22 degrees below at seven o'clock in the morning. Many motorists simply let their cars stand idle as it was all but impossible to start them. Garages did a thriving business pulling cars out of snow drift and getting others started.

While the weather brought discomfort to the great majority—brought smiles to winter sports enthusiasts. The cold weather virtually assures another fine week end of skiing and tobogganing at Snow Valley. A large crowd from Chicago enjoyed the facilities of Snow Valley last week end and quite a few stayed in Palmyra. Among the visitors here was the President of the First National Bank of Chicago.

AUTO ACCIDENT

At 4:30 Tuesday morning as Dr. E. E. Bertolaet was returning from the Elkhorn hospital on County Trunk H., his car skidded on the icy road and rolled over several times into a ravine. NOSING THE NEWS
BY RUSS DEVITT

And with the advent of 1942 the war enters what may well be the decisive year. And on the Allied Fronts, in Libya the last Axis resistance is being pulverized by determined British soldiers. And on the bitter cold of the Russian plains an ill-equipped German army for winter fighting is perishing by the thousands. And in the far east, although Manila has fallen, General MacArthur still puts up a dogged defense for the remaining portion of the Philippines. And a war department communique states that all whites in the city of Manila are threatened with death by the Japanese if they are seen on the streets.

NOTICE

The regular tuberculosis detection and Out-Patient Clinic will be held at the Oaks Sanatorium, Saturday, January 10th, from 9 A. M. to 3 P. M.

Dr. K. P. Hoel, director of the sanatorium, will give patch tests and fluoroscopic and X-ray examinations.

Public health nurses in Waukesha County and City nurses in Waukesha and Oconomowoc cooperate with Dr. Hoel in conducting the clinic.

Persons who have had contact with anyone having tuberculosis and also expectant mothers and foundry workers are urged to attend.

And though the first month of the war has seen some American reverses, chiefly through the surprise attack and treachery of the Japanese, the ultimate result of the war is still not in doubt. And that ultimate result is of course the complete crushing of the Japanese Empire.

And what we now have to guard against is the loss of prestige of the United States and Britain among the heterogeneous mass of races in the far east. The United States has long been looked upon as the ultimate in power and strength. And American Marines and Soldiers looked upon as white gods, upon whom it is impossible to inflict defeat.

And so our big job now is to keep that prestige and regard from cracking. And it is entirely conceivable that this is what might happen among those people who do not understand the full scope of the struggle. And while we are not in the least worried it is possible that admiration and respect for our nation is not as great as it would be were the invasion of the Philippines repelled and were it possible for our gallant marines to hold

And what is now needed to either re-establish any prestige among the far eastern people that may be lost, or to prevent the collapse of the prestige built up, is some sort of a smashing victory over the Nipponese which, although it might not have any direct military value, would be very invaluable to the morale of our allies. And it is something of this sort that we may look for in the very near future.

SOMETHING TO SING ABOUT

Pleasant Electric Cooking
Is Fast and Economical

For full flavored foods — cooked with speed, cook electrically. There's less work to do because flameless heat is so clean. You'll have more free time. But above all, electric cooking is cheap... like electric light.

Free Range Installation
Providing installation is served by Wisconsin Gas & Electric Company, and Wisconsin Gas & Electric Company installation specifications do not conflict with local ordinances.
