Suede Answers the Call for Pretty but Practical Fabrics

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

women to make very selective choices in the way of timely and appropriate dress. In preparing the new collections, those entrusted with the responsibility of creating clothes to meet these demands are motivated by a desire to maintain charm and attractiveness while always keeping in mind, however, the urgent call for practical wearability. Particularly in the matter of materials women must buy now with an eye to the future.

In this search for practicality plus chic and charm, it is with the utmost enthusiasm that designers of note are turning to richly colorful suede as highly desirable for dresses, suits, coats, hats, shoes and accessories. Arguments in favor of suede rest not only on its attractiveness, its subtle softness and its ready adaptability, but from the ut-terly utilitarian viewpoint there is nothing to surpass suede and the various leathers now so successfully used in costume design.

To demonstrate that a complete wardrobe of apparel done in serviceable, colorful, ever-flattering suede can be made to serve for almost every occasion in a busy woman's life, we are illustrating herewith a trio of coat, dress and sportswear fashions. Note, also, that this group of suede apparel convincingly demonstrates that smart clothes today reflect a tailored simplicity that is nevertheless unfailingly feminine. A graceful classic coat of suede is shown to the left in the above picture. It will prove an investment that will pay big dividends in style and will be good from one season to another. That's something to be considered in buying, now that so large a percentage of wool and other materials must be diverted into other channels to help win the war.

Centered in the group illustrated above is a beautifully fitted frock done in a lovely, dusty pink suede. Here again is reflected the charm of simple lines and detail. This dress has the new soft shoulder line and a trimming of brown suede for the belt and a touch of it at the neck. The hat and bag are made of the same rose shade. Brown suede shoes and gloves complete the outfit.

Leather for sportswear always carries a definite note of style and charm and at the same time has no peer when it comes to sturdy wearing qualities. The attractive sports costume shown to the right in the above picture is typical of the western ranch styles that are so popular this season. Here you see an ensemble done in three pieces, the skirt in gold-flecked tweed, the blouse in a plaid of the same gold with green and white, the leather waistcoat in green suede.

In the way of accessories, the tiny sailors made of pastel suedes are combined with matching suede gloves. Just now the violet shades are being heralded as first in fashion for spring. For a springlike look, choose a pastel plaid suit with violet tones in its coloring. Wear with this one of the new violet suede sailors adorned with a generous cluster of

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Pine Cones

Of rayon fabric which packs easily, the all-purpose resort dress illustrated above uses Florida pine-cones and needles for its print motif. This winsome fashion comes in lily-white prints on lively blue, green and carroty tan grounds, or in the same attractive colors on a white ground. It has a smart peplum and fashionably collared low-cut V-neckline.

Wrap-Around Solves Fastener Problem

With the scarcity of metal because of priority rulings, the resourcefulness of designers has again been challenged to the point where necessity becomes the mother of invention. All of which, in the final analysis, reacts to the good fortune of fashion's followers. For it is certain that the current vogue for tie-ityourself fastenings brings with it a new and fascinating styling.

There are the new skirts that drape to one side where they tie without aid of a slide fastener, hooks and eyes or button fastenings. A double duty dress is made in one piece for casual wear. For "dress-up" there is an extra apron effect that you can tie on in a jiffy. Many of the smartest coats are self-tied wrap-overs. Blouses are fashioned, also, with surplice fronts that tie to one side. Some jackets and many blouses tie in a series of little self fabric bows down the front.

Your Gloves Can't Be

Too Colorful These Days More color in gloves is the spring forecast. Which means we are going to wear gloves with our spring outfits in such audacious colors as Kelly green, bright red, purple, cerise, vivid blue and bright pink. Gloves also will be made of the same print as that in your blouse, dress or hat. The fact that novel materials will be used for gloves also adds to their interest.

Straw Ensemble

Novelty tie, belt and three-strand necklace ensembles, all crocheted by hand of synthetic straw, are made to be worn with a related sweater. Pretty snoods are also crocheted in a lacy, open mesh stitch, with special attention to matching the colors to the peasant skirts with which they are ensembled.

FARM LOPICS

GRAIN SOYBEANS DEPLETE THE SOIL

But if Plowed Under They Increase Soil Nitrogen.

By PROF. GEORGE D. SCARSETH
(Soil Chemist, Agricultural Experiment Station, Purdue University.)

Many farmers do not realize that soybeans harvested for grain are a soil-exhausting rather than a soilbuilding crop. If soybeans are plowed under or cut for hay, and the manure therefrom is returned to the soil, they do increase the soil nitrogen and thus increase the corn or wheat yields that follow in the rotation. But harvested for commercial purposes such as oils, plastics, etc., they represent a drain on the

A crop of 20 bushels of soybeans harvested for commercial purposes removes 15 pounds of phosphate (equivalent to 75 pounds of 20 per cent super-phosphate) and 20 pounds of potash per acre.

Soybeans are certain to play an increasingly important part in the present war effort. At present very little information has been obtained on how to provide a profitable means of directly fertilizing soybeans at the time of seeding, but experiments now in progress at Purdue university involving plowing under phosphate and potash indicate that effective means are being found.

With a favorable price outlook, a greater acreage will be planted to soybeans this year. Farmers will find it advantageous to fertilize the crop, unless their soils have been adequately treated previously in the rotation. Based on experience at the university, the following suggestions may be of value:

If the soil is acid, lime it adequately this winter. This is important for otherwise the fertilizer will be lost. In many cases about three tons per acre will be effective. Then just before plowing the ground for soybeans, broadcast about 300 pounds of 0-20-20 or 500 pounds of 0-12-12 and plow under. Do not use any fertilizer when planting the beans. The benefits from the lime will last at least 10 years, although it has been found profitable to relime in about six years.

Indicative of the importance of plowing down fertilizer for soybeans, was a test at the Purdue experiment station last year. On an unfertilized plot, the soybean yield was 15.7 bushels of grain or 3,570 pounds of hay an acre. When an equivalent of 1,000 pounds of 4-10-25 had been broadcast and disked into the topsoil immediately before seeding, the yield increased only 1.9 But when this same bushels. amount was broadcast and plowed under, the yield per acre was 23.4 bushels of grain or 4,653 pounds of hay. When lime at the rate of three tons per acre was used with the fertilizer and plowed under, the yield was 28.2 bushels of grain or 5,377 pounds of hay per acre.

Feeding Laying Hens

Successful poultry farmers pay nearly as much attention to the way they feed their pullets and laying hens as they do to the kind of feeds they provide. For one thing, abrupt changing in the diet causes the birds to go "off feed" and results in lower egg production and slower growth as will the use of stale feed. If a change in diet must be made it should be made gradually and extend over a period of a week or ten days.

One practice followed by many of the better poultrymen is to provide only a little more feed each day than the birds can clean up. The left-overs, if clean and dry, can be mixed thoroughly with the fresh feed in the hoppers.

In this way there will be no accumulation of stale feed at the bottom of the hoppers, reducing likelihood of mold.

Some Mighty Trees

The tree with the largest circumference is the sequoia, 101 feet, 6 inches, in California, and the tree given the widest spread (168 feet) is a liveoak at Hahnville, La. The wide-spreading liveoak on the Liendo plantation in Waller county seems to be unrecorded on the banks of the Potomac. A California redwood with an altitude of 364 feet is given the palm for the greatest height. The world's record for girth is given to a cypress in Mexico.

Probably the largest, oldest, slowest and fastest growing tree now in Texas, is the cypress. Its wood also has had more home and industrial use than any tree.

Less Spuds, More Eggs

People eat about the same totai quantity of food now as they did 39 years ago, but the composition of the dietary has changed. Consumption of wheat and other cereals, potatoes and apples, beef, veal, and tea has declined. But consumption of vegetables (other than potatoes), citrus fruits, sugar, poultry, eggs, milk, manufactured dairy products (especially ice cream), edible fats and oils (other than lard and butter) and cocoa increased.

He Had the Betting Fever

04%O STANLEY CORDELL
(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

EOPLE of ordinary means who come into sudden wealth sometimes have difficulty in adjusting their lives to a more leisurely mode of existence. It was so with Maria and Duncan Spencer who had just inherited a small fortune from an uncle of Duncan. They had, of course, always talked of what they'd do if they ever "had money." And now that overnight, they had become wealthy, it was a little difficult to grasp the full extent of the possibilities at hand.

The inheritance came in August. A month later Duncan quit his job. And two months after that the Spencers closed their suburban home in Rainsford in New England and set out for Miami, Fla. By January they felt reasonably acclimated, had acquired a number of friends and were enjoying themselves.

Now, not far from Miami there is a race track known as Hialeah, which begins operations in January, and serves the winter tourists of many nearby resorts for more than two months. Betting is carried on on a large and profitable scaleprofitable for the winners, who, it usually turns out, are the stake

The Spencers attended the Hialeah races with a Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Graves, whom they had met at their Miami hotel. The Graveses were weathered tourists, and knew all about Hialeah. They were bettors of the first water, and smiled when the Spencers expressed a preference to observe the activities from the grandstand.

However, after watching from the grandstand for two consecutive days, the monotony of Hialeah horse racing began to pall. Duncan Spencer consulted the Graveses, and received firsthand information about betting. A "show" ticket, they were informed, would pay winnings if the horse on which the bet were placed came in first, second or third. A "place" ticket would pay if the horse were first or second, and a "straight" ticket paid only if the horse came in first.

"And," Mrs. Graves explained, "if you play the favorite to show every time, you're bound to come out a winner, though your profits are

What Mrs. Graves had said was the truth. What she failed to mention was the fact that few amateurs are contented with playing the favorite to show each time. After they acquire the "feel" of the thing they inevitably succumb to a combination of betting fever, natural ego and instinctive restlessness, which usually has dire results.

However, inspired by the enthusiasm and winnings of the Graveses, and despite Maria's emphatic disapproval of indulging in any type of entertainment which remotely resembled gambling, Duncan placed a two-dollar "show" bet—and won.

After that it was merely a matter of time. For two days running Duncan adhered to Mrs. Graves' advice by playing the favorite to show. His winnings were small, but the satisfaction derived therefrom was great.

On the third day Duncan took a flier by betting two dollars on the favorite to place-and won. On the fourth day he became more reckless than ever and bought a straight ticket, with satisfactory results.

Within a fortnight Duncan considered himself a seasoned race track enthusiast and looked with scorn and contempt upon grandstand sitters. Maria still wore a fretful look, provoked, no doubt, by her innate New England conservatism, but even her constant admonitions against recklessness failed to dampen Duncan's ardor.

Another week passed and Duncan threw all caution to the winds. He bought several fifty-dollar place tickets at a crack, and was only mildly satisfied when the day's receipts net-ted him a total profit of three hundred dollars.

It was when Duncan took a long shot on an unknown horse by buying two $100 straight tickets that Maria gave way to impulse and voiced a complaint. Even the fact Duncan won didn't change her ideas on the

"We can't afford to take the chance, Dunc," she told him. "Why, if you should lose four or five times, it would mean the end of our fortune. We'd better not come out. here any more."

But by now Duncan was very sure of himself. He knew, he said, his horses. Moreover, after he'd cleaned up they could live just so much higher than heretofore planned.

And so Duncan, much to Maria's consternation, began to plunge. He bought hundred-dollar straight tick-ets in bunches. And it wasn't long before the fact that the worth of acquired experience, touts and tips and dope sheets was practically nil. Favorites didn't always win, and old-timers' advice was about as good as nothing at all. No one, Duncan discovered, knew a great deal more than anyone else about which horse would win a certain race. Duncan lost $6,000 on a single race. Before the day was ended his total losses had risen to $10,000. That night he consulted his most reliable dope sheet, made certain notations on a block of paper and the next day journeyed out to Hialeah with a vengeance. Before the last race was run he had contributed $30,000 more to the fund that supports the pink flamingoes in the park's center green. A sort of desperate feeling kept him awake that night. And when he dropped another $5,000 on the day following the desperate feeling changed to panic.

His losses now were serious, and unless he made a final plunge in the hopes of cleaning up—well, things looked pretty bad. . . . Duncan was standing all alone by the paddock railing when the horse on which he held a straight ticket came in third, and the feeling that came over him was similar to that which comes to men who contemplate suicide. He felt suddenly old and broken and sick at heart. Realization of what a fool he'd been swept over him and brought a tremor of disgust to his lips. He thought of Maria, remembering her quaint old New England custom of being conservative, deriding himself for scorning it. New England seemed very far away just then. He turned away, dreading the moment when he would have to face his spouse; he turned and found her standing two feet away, watching him. Duncan gulped and tried to meet her eyes and couldn't. She took a step toward him, placed a hand on his arm, and smiled.

"I know, I know," she said. "We'll go away tomorrow. I guess we're not gamblers, Duncan. We're—we're New Englanders, conservative folks."

Duncan looked at her miserably and shook his head. "We can't go away, Maria. We've lost—everything."
But Maria still smiled, and then

Duncan saw that her other hand held something in it. He stared, and heard her voice as if from a distance. "I told you to be careful, Dunc," she said, faintly admonishing. "It was all right so long as we played the favorite to show. That—was conservative betting. I was sure of it. That's why I bought a show ticket on every favorite every time you played the horse to win. It was safest." She paused. "I've figured it up, and we're right back just about where we started. But—we've certainly had a thrill. We'll have something to tell folks back in New England.

Duncan gulped and grinned. "Yes," he said, "we will, but we won't."

War Causes Development Of New Plastic Eye

A plastic eye almost impossible of detection from the real thing is the latest development of the laboratories to meet war's complete shut-off of the source of supply, according to Dr. Theodore J. Dimitry of New Orleans, writing in the Journal of the International College of Sur-

Some 170,000 artificial eyes are used in the United States each year, Dr. Dimitry states, and of this number Germany supplied 150,000 before the war started.

However, American ingenuity has already forestalled the necessity of returning to the ancient patch over the eye when the stock of not more than 250,000 artificial eyes the United States had on hand at the outbreak of the war is completely gone, Dr. Dimitry says. The new type of artificial eye, made from acrylic resins, is fully 80 per cent machine-made and can be turned out in mass production. Not only is the plastic eye capable of being turned out in huge numbers if necessary, but it is many times better than the best glass eyes which heretofore have come almost exclusively from Germany. The new plastic eye will move in harmony with the companion eye, writes Dr. Dimitry, impossible with the old type of glass eye which was set in a fixed position in the eye socket. The iris coloring and the size of the pupil of the new plastic eye can be made to match the real eye perfectly by means of color photography.

Down to the present day, Germany has had a virtual monopoly of the artificial eye industry. With one exception, all eye making firms in the United States used German glass before the war. But the discovery of the use of plastics in the making of artificial eyes will eventually make our country entirely self-supporting in this market since all the materials for the synthetic resins are found here. Plastic artificial eyes, states the article in the Journal of the International College of Surgeons, are immediately availaole and only await commercial pro-

Forced Down in Fog, They Walk 250 Miles to Town.

SAN FRANCISCO.—While fliers searched vainly for them over thousands of miles of fog-bound wilderness in the Yukon, Lieut. Col. Harold H. Carr and Corp. Colonel Carr and Corporal Pompeo took off from Fairbanks before dawn on January 17, but thick weather on the route to Whitehorse forced them to turn back. Out of gasoline, they landed the plane on a frozen river, damaging it only slightly, and waited two days in hope that aerial searching parties might find them.

After the futile wait they put the plane radio out of commission and started off on foot, carrying packs of bedding, food and firearms. Eventually, after a long hike, they found an Indian trapper, and thereafter they were directed to successive trappers until they reached Fort Yukon. There they obtained transportation to Fairbanks.

The leader of one searching party was Lieut. E. T. Yarborough, who recently was recommended for the Distinguished Flying Cross for his part in rescuing a stranded pilot, Lieut. Elmer E. Booth, by landing his plane on an ice floe in the Turnagain arm.

The day war was declared Jimmy was refused by marine corps recruiting officers because of his age. A week later he was turned down by the marines again.

Then he tried the navy, but the story was the same.

"You're too young, sonny," the recruiting officer said, "and besides you're too small. Go home and wait for us to call you."

That day the local navy recruiting office sent 61 new seamen to the Great Lakes Naval Training station to begin training. The party arrived at the school the next day and the Cincinnati recruiting office promptly received a telephone call.

"We have proper enlistment papers for 61 men, but 62 men are here," an officer at the station said. 'How about papers for James Edward Collins?"

Jimmy is back in Cincinnati now living with his uncle and going to junior high school, but he still has ideas about enlistment.

"I'm going to grow up and when I'm called I'll be ready," he said.
