Sailor Discovers That Appearances Deceive

The naval recruit was getting on very well with the blue-eyed and sweetly fragile damsel at the dance. Naturally he suggested having a bite to eat. She readily accepted, and they strolled into the dining room.

Presently, the sailor noticed that one waiter was staring at his partner rather too intently. At last he tackled the man.

"Don't you know it's very rude to stare at ladies?" he snapped.
"Sorry, sir," was the meek reply, "but it ain't rudeness—it's admiration, sir. This is the sixth time she's been down to supper to-

Latest Silhouette Combines Box Pleats With Long Torso

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

N DISCUSSING and planning for a program of timely dress for women during the war period, it has been definitely conceded by everyone concerned in fashion industries and design that in order to render the highest service women must see to it that they are an inspiration in appearance as well as in deed.

This sentiment is reflected in the charming costumes illustrated above. These models, selected from a galaxy designed and displayed by the style creators of Chicago in their spring showings, are just the sort that women will love to wear and soldiers will take delight in seeapplique on the coat front. To the right in the foreground a novelty striped print in white and red on green ground is paired with a bright red spun rayon and wool jacket. Self fabric ruching trims the dress collar which is worn outside the cardigan jacket. The skirt has in the above illustration conveys the most welcome and highly important style news, that the bolero costume has returned in all its glory to the fashion picture. You will see boleros played up throughout the style program this season. In this case self-color eyelet embroidery elaborates the bolero jacket of a two-piece navy sheer cos-tume. The bodice, softly draped at the top, is pink.

To the left above in the picture is shown a two-piece dress that uses a shantung weave, combining white, orange and brown in daring contrast. The separate skirt features box pleats from a hip yoke. Box pleats are really newer than side pleating. Eminently correct for a wartime "suit wedding" is the creamy beige sheer ensemble at the top right in the above illustration. The full-length coat looks like a dress but is really a wide pleated skirt seamed to a jacket top, with self-covered buttons down the front from neck to hemline. Finely pleated bowknots trim the four slot pockets that adorn jacket and skirt. The dress worn under this coat repeats the pleated skirt of the coat, while gathered bodice fullness developes from a deep yoke.

Generally speaking, the favorite silhouette is the long torso effect with some sort of pleated skirt. Also, there is much interest in slim wraparound skirts and those which have slenderizing harem drapes.

Style Show Reflects Lowly Fabrics' Use

A preview of spring and summer styles held in Chicago recently showed the 18,000 buyers from 17 states that they were going to carry home an array of chambrays, calicos and denims in women's and children's fashions. For these lowly fabrics have come into their own because of the influence of war.

Style and practicability are still the theme in these fashions, for the designers have kept their eye on both national defense needs, and the desires of millions of women purchasers in stores throughout the na-Dresses, garden costumes, play clothes and work uniforms—all have been styled by the designers to reflect the signs of the times.

Until manufacturers run out of twills and such fabrics which are fashioned into foundation garments, girdles are here to stay, despite the rubber shortage. Priorities on tin and other defense needs have caused tie fastenings instead of hooks and eyes, zippers, buttons and clasps to be substituted.

Everything in garments has taken on the practical atmosphere. Everything except the hostess coat which still remains silken and luxurious.

Now They Trim Your Hat To Match Your Blouse!

There is going to be a riot of frilly, frothy neckwear, and milliners are giving us something new in the way of hats that repeat the snowy lingerie accents. For instance, a wide brimmed straw or felt hat may be outlined with an organdy frill that repeats the frill used in the showy jabot. The jabot is one of the most important neckwear items featured this season.

Serve and Adorn

Besides serving industry, women will also adorn it. Trousered uniforms, made from denim and chambray, without trim or buttons, and with tight cuffs as accident prevenhas a softly molded waistline, set-in tives were noticed in a recent spring and summer style show.

HOG PRODUCTION AND FARM PLAN

Plenty of Grain Is Seen as Necessary for Success.

By E. M. Regenbrecht (Swine Husbandman, Texas A. & M. College.)

Hog production, a basic item in the Food for Victory program, easily can be made successful if properly fitted into a profitable farming

Especially suited as a small enterprise, hog production primarily is dependent for success upon the availability of an abundance of grain feed. Hogs always pay more for corn, barloy, or grain sarghums. for corn, barley, or grain sorghums than does the grain market. About four pounds of feed produces a pound of pork, but the feed must be properly balanced. Feeds used to balance the farm grain usually are higher in price than the latter but the quantity is small.

Farmers who keep from one to three sows almost always make a success, Regenbrecht says. Hogs do not do well when run in large groups because sanitation and disease prevention become serious problems with large herds. The principal item of expense in hog production is the grain feed, but if this is grown on the farm, or obtainable locally at reasonable prices, the enterprise easily can be established on a profitable basis.

While a sandy, well-drained soil is the most suitable, hogs can be successfully raised on a heavy black soil, but in such case concrete feeding floors are almost a necessity. Hog pastures are necessary, with small grain for winter, and sudan for summer the best. Native grasses such as bermuda are good for a short time in the spring, but soon get hard and tough, and become of little value. A good pasture will furnish 50 per cent of the needed protein and otherwise reduce the cost of production.

Suitable equipment — a movable hog house, a few troughs and a selffeeder—can be built at small cost. A concrete wallow can be classed as almost a necessity. If hogs are kept comfortable they make rapid and economical gains and losses from overeating are avoided. It is likewise true that hogs which do not have a dry, warm place in which to bed during the winter will not make as much profit as those properly sheltered.

Save Money by Making

Own 'Homemade' Soap With the fats and oil situation giving this country considerable worry, rural families with cooking fats available can save by making homemade soap.

granite ware is suit-Enameled of able for small batches of soap, but for larger batches an iron kettle is recommended. A large granite or wooden spoon is best for stirring.

The four ingredients of soap are lye, water, fat and perfume. Lye should be pure and uniform, and if possible soft water should be used since it will improve the quality of Fat used should be clean and light-colored and it should be clarified as it accumulates. Clean tin cans, well covered, are best for storing the fat until a sufficient amount has been collected for soap making. Both fats and oils must be washed free from salt. Rancid greases may be purified by boiling with a solution of one part of vinegar and five parts of water.

Scents such as oil of citronella, bergamot, oil of lavender, geranium or sassafras may be added to per-fume the soap. This will help de-stroy the odor of the fat.

Killing Cattle Lice

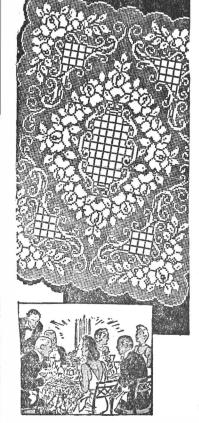

A dairy herd infested with lice causing severe cow discomfort cannot provide top milk production. Powdered sabadilla dusted on the infested parts is a popular louse killer. It may be used alone or mixed with equal quantities of powdered tobacco and flowers of sulphur. Work the powder well into the hide during dusting. Blanket the animal for a few hours after treatment and thoroughly brush the skin, preferably out of doors.

It is well to repeat this treatment in 15 days in order to get lice that hatch from the nits. Use care when applying the sabadilla powder not to get it up the nose and mouth. A handkerchief or doubled cheesecloth placed over the nose and mouth will prevent irritation.

What Next??

A writer with a flair for "looking information tells that honey isn't merely a jar of liquid amber to give zest to the breakfast toast and flapjacks. During the past few years packing firms have bought honey in large lots for curing hams, and many carloads of it have been bought by brewers. Hydromel (honey and water) is one of the oldest drinks known in Europe, and honey brandy and honey champagne still are considered delicacies.

—— Short Story of the Week —

This Young Couple's Parents Offered Some Marriage Advice

By RICHARD HILL WILQINSON-

ELLA KEITH pursed her lips in indecision. It was Saturday and on Saturdays Gordon Black, whom she had known for years, and who was her next door neighbor, displayed considerable annoyance when anyone had the indecency to disturb him from indulging his hobby, which was taking apart and putting to-gether broken-down automobiles.

Still, this was important.
"Hello," she said, stepping through the gate and standing near Gordon's legs. The legs wriggled. Six feet and two inches of male youth emerged from beneath the car. A grease-besmeared and annoyed countenance stared at Della. "Lo, Del," said the youth, and "Got something to talk over with you," Della said. "It's about us. Father wants us to get married." Gordon grunted. "Mine does too," he said unhappily. "You got it too, eh? Well, what are you going to do, let your father tell you whom you're going to marry?"

"Not by a jugful, I'm not!" The youth sat upright. "What does he think I am? Telling me whom I'm to marry!" "I thought you'd feel that way about it. I don't like the idea, ei-Father said a lot of things about family friendship, and how he agreed with your father when we were kids to marry us off when we'd grown."

Gordon's eyes blazed. "Well, he's a little late for that stuff! You can't get away with it in these modern times. I'm going to pick my own wife. Just because we've seen a lot of each other since we got out of college is no sign we're in love."

"And now," said Della, "now that we've won, Gordon, I suppose it's all right to tell?"

"Of course not. Fact is, I was lonesome and you were the only man available."

"Same here. They've certainly got a nerve. Dad said he'd give me a week to decide. That's a laugh!" The youth's head disappeared beneath the car again. "See you to-night," he called. "Dance at the country club."

Della nodded indifferently and went back through the gate. A week later she and Gordon confronted their parents in the library of the Black home. The conference had been called for eight sharp. It was now 8:45. The elder Keith looked up and glowered as they entered. The elder Black silently indicated chairs.

"You young folks," began the latter, "probably can surmise why we asked you to come here." He paused. Della and Gordon stared innocently.

"Both of you," the elder Black went on, "have reached the marriageable age. And as you probably know, it has long been the wish of Mr. Keith and myself that his daughter and my son should one day be joined in matrimony. Nothing would give us more pleasure than thus to have the families united. We have watched you closely. We find that you are happy in each other's company. You are congenial, helpful, kind. In short, we are convinced we are making no mistake in demanding—requesting—that our wishes be fulfilled.'

The elder Black took a long breath and sat down. The elder Keith nodded in silent approval and stared at the victims. "Well, what have you to say, Gordon?"

Gordon crossed and uncrossed his legs, glanced at Della, winked and regarded his father ludicrously. "I say, father, that you two old coder-gentlemen are acting quite ridiculous."

The elder Black glowered. "Take care, young man! This is a serious business." "Serious for you, perhaps, but decidedly absurd to me. Father or no father, no one is going to tell me who I'm to marry. "And you, Della?" "Absolutely preposterous! It's silly and—old-fashioned. Why you'd think we were living in China or somewhere!"

"Then neither of you will respect our wishes?"

"Your commands. Your wishes don't enter into it." The elder Black stood up and impressively removed his spectacles.

"Children, you have no idea what this means to Mr. Keith and myself. It has been our dream for more than 20 years. And, I warn you, we'll do everything in our power to bring the union about. We believe we're within our rights. I ask you again to reconsider.'

"I'm sorry, Father, but I feel that such things should be left entirely to Della and me, without outside interference.

"In that case, son, the firm of Black & Son, attorneys, is no longer in existence. You are discharged, ousted! You will also be cut from my will!"

Gordon grinned. "Cut away. You have the final say-so there."

"And you, Della," said Mr. Keith severely, "will receive similar treatment. Of course, for the time being you may remain in our home. But you need expect no inheritance from me; your weekly allowance will also be discontinued.'

Della stood up and her face was grave. "Very well, Father. My answer is the same as Gordon's. I'll not submit to any such tyranny!"

She turned and started toward the door, Gordon close to her heels. They were part way out when Mr. Black spoke.

"Gordon!" The youth turned and waited. "Come back in here. Both of you. This thing has gone far enough. Mr. Keith and I thoughthoped you two would fall in love. We wanted you to. And we got tired of waiting. We tried to force you into this thing—by threats. I can see now we were wrong. After all, every one must choose for himself in such matters."

Gordon came across the room quickly and placed his arm about his father's shoulder. "I'm sorry, Dad. I didn't mean to hurt your feelings—but, well, I'm glad you see it our way."

Near by Della was clinging to the neck of old Mr. Keith. The old men looked at each other and grinned sheepishly. The two young people looked at each other and smiled hap-

"And now," said Della, "now that we've won, Gordon, I suppose it's all right to tell?"

Gordon nodded. "Of course. No good to keep it a secret."

Mr. Black and Mr. Keith looked puzzled. And Della said happily, "It isn't that Gordon and I don't love each other. We do, very much. It's simply that we're like our old dads - stubborn and independent. Nobody was going to tell us what to do. Not even our pops. And so when we first got wind of this thing last week and were told about this proposed conference tonight, we just slipped away and got married that very day, without anyone telling us we could or couldn't."

Four-Eyed Fish Look

Above, Below Same Time Fish do not have eyelids, and for a simple reason—they live in the water and the water keeps their eyes moist.

Most kinds of land animals have eyelids. The main purpose of the lids is to guard the eyes from dust, or anything else which may come into them. One way the eyes are guarded is by blinking the lids; this spreads a bit of moisture over the surface. You and I blink our eyes more than we might think, unless we stop to take note of it.

Ordinary fish go into the air so seldom that they do not need lids to guard their eyes. Even the foureyed fish has water close by; it dips its head often enough to clear the eyes which are kept in the open

Four-eyed fish? Yes, that's what they are called.

Four-eyed fish are from six to eight inches long. They live chiefly in salt water, but sometimes go into rivers. One place where they are found is Surinam, or Dutch Guiana, the home of the Surniam toad and other strange forms of life.

In markets of Brazil, four-eyed fish are sold to housewives who take them home to cook. It may be that most of those housewives give little thought to the amazing kind of fish they buy. No other kind in the world has four eyes. From one point of view, we might say this fish has only one pair of eyes, with each one "double." Yet a band of color cuts through on each side, and gives the eye the work of two. One looks downward, the other upward.

So the eyes on each side are separate, and the name of "four-eyed fish" can hardly be called a mistake. We may wonder why, in this special case, Nature made the eyes that way.

The answer is to be found in a certain fact: The fish has the habit of swimming and floating at the surface of the water. It needs to be able to look up and down at the same time.

To see insects above the water, it needs eyes which look upward. insects supply much of its

There are little "bugs" and other game to be obtained just under the surface of the water, and to see these the fish needs down-looking

Difference in Days

How much longer and shorter, respectively, are the longest and shortest days of the year than the days next to them, is asked.

According to the U.S. Naval observatory, the difference in the length of day varies less than a minute from day to day in the weeks December 17-24, and June 17-24, in which the shortest and the longest day of the year occurs. Therefore, the difference in the length of day is less than a minute between, for example, December 21 and December 22.

Remember those marvelous meals Grandma used to cook? You bet you do — because they were so good and wholesome. You can cook the same kind of meals today right in your own home —on a new electric range. All the goodness of Grandma's meals, combined with speed, convenience, and uniform heating, are yours when you cook electrically. Your meats and vegetables will retain their natural vitamins. The full-bodied flavor will be brought out because of low temperature cooking. And remember, there's no messy clean-up job after the meal is done.
