MEETING: SECOND DISTRICT DEMOCRATS HELD AT ELKS AT WATERTOWN, APRIL 11, 1942

Speakers at the meeting of Second District Democrats held at the Elks Club House at Watertown on last Saturday afternoon, scored Republican and Progressive members of Congress from Wisconsin for their record of opposition to the Country's pre-war program.

Gustave J. Keller, Appleton, Chairman of the Democratic State Organization Committee declared that all Wisconsin Republican Congress voted to strike The Guam Island Harbor improvements from The Navy Public Works Bill; to strike funds for 1283 aeroplanes from The Army Appropriation Bill; for the Vorys Neutrality Amendment to forward arms shipments to nations now our allies; against The Selective Service Act; against The Lease Lend Act and against the extension of The Selective Service Act. He declared that the Progressive, Harry Sauthoff, present member of Congress from The Second District voted against The Lease Lend Act and the extension of The Selective Service Act. "The Democrat, Thad Wasielewski of Milwaukee, was the bright exception. He alone voted to make Our Country strong," Heller said.

"There is but one issue," according to Keller, "do we in Wisconsin want men voting for us on the great questions that will have to be met after the war with the record I have just read to you, men who failed so completely, men of the type who defeated world peace after the last war? Or do we want Congressmen with vision, with understanding, with ability, Congressmen whose votes will give power to The United States and make it through its President—the maker of the world freedom, liberty and peace that the little peoples of all parts of the earth pray and hope our country is?"

Thomas R. King, Oconomowoc, Democratic State Chairman, also attacked the record of opposition of the Republican and Progressive members of Congress on pre-war enactments and set out to the delegations present the development of the party, plans for summer activity and the fall campaign. Chairman King predicted that there will be at least four Democratic candidates for Governor at the fall election.

Other prominent Democrats who took part in the discussions were W. A. Christians, Johnson Creek; Jean J. Schultz, Waukesha; Palmer F. Daugs, Lake Mills; Tom Brooks, Watertown; Mrs. John J. Boyle, Madison; John F. Roche, Doylestown; Adam Port, Horicon; Dr. C. W. Henney, Portage; Elmer Genzner, Mayville; Helen Cochran, Portage; and Paul A. Hemmy, Juneau.

New Fabrics and Designs Meet
Increased Demand for Blouses

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE unprecedented rush for suits this spring is breathtaking. And with the acquiring of a new suit the one thing that never fails to happen is the sudden urge that comes upon one for a blouse wardrobe that will perform the trick of changing the mood of one's suit as magically as a chameleon changes its color.

The blouse program as set for the coming months is unusually versatile. Starting off with trim tailored effects individualized with smart styling details, it continues to carry on in a brilliant way with stunning costume blouses of handsome (often spectacular) fabrics climaxed by a procession of exquisite fantasies of beguiling femininity.
Blouse fabrics were never more interestingly varied as in this season, when modern textile ingenuity has reached a peak, especially in the matter of rayon weaves that leave nothing to be desired. Side by side, on the blouse hangers, you will find rayon materials including exotic bold-patterned trim jerseys and acetate crepes, trim spun rayon shirtings in linen or challis finish, soft-bodied monotone crepes and an intriguing display of filmy sheers.
Prints are creating a sensation in the field of sports blouses, done often in gay South American patterns and colorings. A blouse that stands pre-eminently at the front in the style parade is shown centered in the above illustration. It is the full-blown rose print that everybody is calling for. Note, especially, the big floppy bow tie at the neck. These bow fastenings are of outstanding interest this season, so watch bows! The long bishop sleeves are also important.

Two chic tailored blouses (to the right above and below in the group) are noteworthy. The model at the top is a real "find." It is a classic in tailored simplicity, with the charm of a material, corded marquisette, which is to be coveted not only for its prettiness, for joy of joy! it launders to perfection and as easily as a pocket handkerchief. This blouse is skillfully designed with a fitted waistband for either tuck-in or over-bow wear.
Exquisite handwork finishing off all edges in contrast color is a nice trimming accent for the beautiful tailored blouse in snowy acetate rayon crepe shown just below this blouse in the above illustration. Note the stud-fastened cuffs and becoming turn-back neck.
Note the flowers in her hair. The wearing of flowers in this manner is an approved fashion, even in the daytime if occasion warrants.
An effect of fragile feminine charm is achieved by the use of filmy rayon chiffon and fine lace edging for the exquisite lingerie blouse shown above to the left in the illustration. It features the new and extremely smart long bishop sleeves together with a high-low ruffled neckline which may be fastened primarily under the chin for suit wear or opened low for dress-up moments.
A blouse that should be included in every wardrobe for formal wear is the long-torso type of handsome rayon flower print in gorgeous colors.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Doubly Smart

Yes, you are seeing double! Matching boutonnieres of fresh flowers, one on each lapel, make a novel decoration on smart new suits this spring. This is a style recommended to out-of-town beaux who will outshine local competition. If it's a single corsage she wants for her new spring costume, camellias, gardenias and combinations of variegated colorings are all good guesses. Daisies and violets, as pictured above, make charming twin lapel pieces.

The Flowers That Bloom On Your Dress, Tra-La!

Among the highlighted fabrics for spring, smooth surfaces predominate. The worsteds are particularly smart, as this spring is starting off in a decidedly tailored manner. Faille, wool jersey and knits continue strong.
This season's prints glory in novelty and color. Important are the new butterfly prints, the lace-patterned types and gorgeous florals. Amusing, also, are the vegetable prints, cabbage roses in full bloom and the apple motifs. There are more plaids, stripes and checks than ever, and the "dotted" theme persists.

Bows Run Rampant Over
Necklines and Pockets

Necklines are having a frilly time of it this spring. Jabots are as frothy and white as snow drifts, or fleecy clouds on a summer day. Collar and cuff sets in pastel blues or pinks are ever so good this season. There's also a rush for huge, softly tied bows or sprightly butterfly ties. Bows also trim pockets and cuffs and are posed at the shoulder. In fact, bows are apt to light anywhere on one's costume and be fashion-right.

Loose Curls

No tight curls, all extremely loose and very feminine looking, is the new fashion edict. Shorter bobs are assured, always with an easy-to-manage promise. Pompadour versions will continue to be worn and the "trick" is to wear your hat back to show the pompadour.

RUBBER ON FARM MUST HAVE CARE

Rural Food Production Increased Use of Rubber.

By M. R. BENTLEY
(Agricultural Engineer, Texas A & M Extension Service.)

Motorists—and aren't we all!—have been so busy worrying about the tires on their cars that rubber on the farm has not received much attention.

Rubber has played an increasingly important part in food production in recent years. Rubber tires for tractors and farm implements; rubber tubing in milking machines; rubber rings for canning in glass jars—the list is almost endless.

Here are suggestions for care of rubber on the farm:

Block up the wheels to keep weight off the tires when machines and implements are out of the fields for any considerable period.

If rubber-tired implements are stored on cinder floors, block up the tires or place planks under them. The sulphur in the cinders breaks down the rubber.

Tractor Tire Slippage.
Excessive slippage of tractor tires causes heavy wear, just as skids and quick stops do on automobile tires. Over-loading the tractor is one cause of slippage, and pulling in snow or mud without chains is another.

Keep rubber-tired implements out of the sun when not in use.

Under-inflation damages both rubber and fabric in the tires.

A solution of calcium chloride to prevent freezing is recommended for northern areas if water is used in tractor tires to add weight.

Rubber tubing in milking machines will last longer if it is kept clean. After each cleaning and sterilization, the tubes should be hung up to drain and dry.

IN INDUSTRY

Goat Herd Value

"The poor man's cow" has always had a variety of uses. In Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Oregon, goats run in sizeable herds. Often 300 to a farm. They grow fat on coarse vegetation on which other animals would starve. In these western states, the clip amounts to about 16,000,000 pounds of goat hair each year. This does not nearly supply the raw material for plush fabrics for upholstering furniture and automobiles. Texas has more than 3,000,000 goats clipped annually while New Mexico is next with 2,011,000.

Goat and kid skins make fine leather for shoes, book bindings, leather purses and cases. Our goat herds do not yield enough to supply the need and 68,000,000 pounds of skins are imported annually.

A milk goat herd, maintained by the U. S. bureau of animal industry at Beltsville, Md., has proved that the Toggenberg and Saanen breeds supply milk similar to the Holstein cow. Goat milk has the advantage of more vitamin B, a softer curd and smaller sized fat globules and is highly recommended for invalids and people with delicate digestions. The milk is widely used for making Swiss cheese. The meat is nutritious but is little used in America except when the flesh of the angora is sold for mutton.

Domesticated goats are thought to be descended from the wild goats of Persia. Wild goats are found only in Europe, northern Africa and the Himalaya mountains.

Agricultural Notes

Repair
With so many automobiles at rest much of the time, many garages will find their usual work curtailed. However, according to the U. S. department of agriculture, garages, particularly those in the country, are likely to pick up much general repair work for farmers and others. Garage mechanics may be called on to exercise ingenuity in making parts normally supplied through other channels.

Average Acreage
According to census figures, the average acreage per farm in the United States in 1940 was 174, compared with 154.8 in 1935 and 156.9 in 1930.

Save Baling Wire
Farmers use between 90,000 and 100,000 tons of baling wire a year—equal in weight to three large warships—for baling hay, straw and other forage crops, the U. S. department of agriculture reported in urging farmers, dairymen, stockyard operators and livestock producers to conserve baling wire.

Watermelons Are Africans
Watermelons, summer-time delicacy, are believed to be natives of Africa.

Tank Is Their Ocean

A remarkable attempt to reproduce ocean conditions and life on a comparatively small scale has been made near St. Augustine, Fla. Two huge tanks which are the main features of Marineland are really oceans in miniature peopled by 85,000 species of aquatic creatures just as they are found in their natural surroundings. Enclosed galleries run at different levels around the tanks, and the visitor can sit comfortably in a chair and look through portholes into the lighted interior in much the same way as he would look upon the lighted screen at a cinema.

Fast Driving

A recent study, made to determine the cost of operating an automobile at a low and a high speed, revealed that, when two identical cars are driven over the same 1,000-mile course, one at 25 and the other at 65 miles an hour, the latter consumes 60 per cent more gasoline and 800 per cent more oil and causes 700 per cent more wear on the tires.

At the Parting Goldwyn Sadly Disillusioned Author

This story is told by a man who is writing a new movie for Sam Goldwyn. One day the author met Goldwyn for the first time. He listened patiently while Goldwyn discussed the story, without accent or malaprop. . . "All those stories about Goldwynisms have been incorrect," he mused—while Goldwyn continued, still without accent, still using the correct words. . . "I'll write an article about Goldwyn and disprove those stories," the author vowed. Then as the conference ended, Goldwyn led him to the door and said: "Now remember, you've an important job. In this enterprise you're the main cog."

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Something Settled

By MEREDITH SCHOLL
 (Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

THE late twilight enshrouded Lorraine as she sat on the hammock on the porch. Kenneth came up the walk. She called out to him and he came eagerly toward her. "Lorraine!" He sat down, groping for her hand. "Mom says Roger is coming home!" "Roger?" A chill swept through him. "Roger?" he repeated. "My brother?" "Mom says your mom had a letter and he's coming for two weeks." Kenneth released her hand. He sat cold and rigid. "He's here," he said. "He came an hour ago. He's over at the house now." Her excitement was like a living something there in the darkness, like a barrier suddenly looming between them. "Here?" She caught her breath. "Then—then—" Kenneth turned on her savagely. "So that's it? So it's Roger you love—want—after all? It wasn't me? All you wanted in me was what belonged to him. All these months that he's been away, you haven't loved me at all. It's him you wanted, him you planned to get, through me!" "Kenneth!" "That's it! I know now. I should have known all along. But I wouldn't let myself believe it. I wanted you to love me, I wanted to think you did. I made myself think you did!" "Kenneth, please! It isn't that. It isn't! I—I—knew you were lonesome, and so was I and—and—and we did have good times together, didn't we?" "You're lying! You're lying now the way you've lied all these months—to me. Leading me on. Letting me think you cared! I should have known, but I loved you too much to let myself believe. I was weak. Weak like I've always been." "Kenneth, don't. You're not as bad—as that!" He laughed harshly, standing up, clutching at the hammock chains for support, staring into the darkness. "Because I'm afraid."

"He's coming over. He'll be here any minute. He'll take you in his arms and kiss your lips—and you'll want him to." He paused, not hearing the girl's quick breathing. "He'll take you from me, like he's taken everything else. Ever since we've been kids. Because he's big and strong and fun-loving and everyone approves. And I'll let him. I'll stand by and grin with that hero-worship look on my face—because I'm afraid!" He started toward the steps, lurching drunkenly, a strange, hard whimper coming from between his lips. Lorraine followed him, clutching at his arm. "Kenneth, don't! I can't stand it to see you this way. You shouldn't take on so. Kenneth! Please!" He shook her off violently. "I'm not blaming you! Not blaming you at all. Nobody loves a coward. Only," his words tightened, "you shouldn't have let me think as—you—did."

Footsteps sounded on the concrete walk. A cheery greeting came to them out of the darkness. "Hell-o, Lorraine!" It was Roger. Big, strong, handsome Roger. Coming toward them through the gloom. The two on the steps waited, silent, dreading his coming, yet grateful for it, afraid of what might happen. The big man materialized out of the darkness. He was grinning, hurrying along, but he stopped at sight of them on the steps; the grin faded, because he sensed, with seeing the look in his brother's eyes. "Kenneth!" he cried, trying to sound good natured. "What the heck are you doing over at my girl's, you danged little runt?" "She's not your girl. She's mine! She's been mine ever since you went away. Mine! Do you hear! Mine!" "Yours. Lord, son, what's come over you? Yours? Lorraine yours? A little runt like you!" "Ask her!" Kenneth said tightly. "Ask her how we've been carrying on." Behind him, Lorraine moved; her fingers pressed into his shoulders. Roger's face was suddenly dark. "Listen, you little squirt. Lorraine belongs to me. She always has. She wouldn't waste time on a weakling like you." "Then come and get her! Come take her like you have everything else of mine that you wanted. Let's see you try!" A moment the big man hesitated. Then in the gloom he smiled and came up the steps. "That's what I'm aiming to do, shaver. Now get—"

Kenneth swung blindly. The force of the blow surprised him, awakened in him a spirit of confidence and faith in his own strength. The feel of his knuckles against Roger's jaw was good. Sight of Roger staggering back brought a sense of joy and delight. "Why, you—" Roger came at him, his face contorted, his hands reaching out. But Kenneth stepped down, under the reaching hands, and swung once more. The blow sunk deep into Roger's middle. The big man grunted and bent forward a little. And Kenneth struck again, a savage jab that caught his brother under the chin. And he followed this blow with another. "You've always taken what you wanted. Never considered me. Always laughed and scoffed and joked when I protested." His voice was low and vibrant and harsh, filled with passion and hatred. In that moment he wasn't Kenneth the weakling, the small, puny, laughed-at younger brother. All the humiliation and anger and hatred he had known and stored in his soul until there was no longer room for more was investing him with an unnatural strength. It was the spirit of what he had always longed to be asserting itself.

Presently it was over. Roger lay at his feet, bleeding from a half-dozen wounds. Kenneth stood over him, his lips drawn back, sensing for the first time the sweet contentment and exultation that is the reward of victory in physical combat. As from a great distance he heard Lorraine's voice. "Kenneth. Oh, my darling! My dear! However could you have thought it wasn't you I loved?" He became conscious of her hands clutching at him. He turned to face her, cold, aloof, triumphant. "You fool! Keep your hands off me!"

She staggered back beneath his thrust. "Kenneth!" Her cheeks were white, her eyes incredulous. "You do—love me! You said I was yours—you proved that no one could take me from you. Oh, I was a fool not to have known before it was you I wanted, needed." But Kenneth had turned away, was being lost in the gloom. His laugh, hard and unreal, came drifting back to her. She heard his voice. "And I should have known it was you—I didn't want nor need. I thought you possessed what I was seeking, but now I know that I was wrong. For I've found it, and it was in me, not you."

Donkeys From All Parts Of World Doctor's Hobby

"You remind me of a donkey!" This remark made by a friend is vividly recalled to Dr. Comer M. Woodward, professor of sociology at Emory university, because from it grew the idea which resulted in his unique collection. Dr. Woodward has accumulated more than 150 miniature donkeys from all parts of the world. When Dr. Woodward is asked why this collection interests him, he laughs and says: "Seeing these donkeys constantly reminds me of the times I have made a jackass of myself and warns me to be more careful in the future."

In a more serious mood, he continues: "When I look at these donkeys I am reminded of many people in this world. The donkey has always been a burden bearer, and many people feel that they carry the burden of the world on their shoulders. The slow, stubborn donkey may also be likened to the human race as it has sought to progress through the ages." A set of eight brightly colored horses are valued highly by Professor Woodward. They are called "Ming" horses, and are replicas of some that date back to the Ming Dynasty in China. Because the Emperor Ming liked brightly colored horses, he often had his horses painted. Little replicas were made by the Chinese and used in their homes for decorative purposes much as we use toy animals today. A set of these toy horses was given to Dr. Woodward by another friend who became interested in his collection.

The genial professor of sociology also has a donkey carved by the man who plays the part of John in the "Passion Play" at Oberammergau, an addition to the collection made by a former student on his return from Europe. Interest in the donkeys does not stop with his collection. All through Dr. Woodward's home evidences of the little critters are found. His day begins and ends with donkeys. On his breakfast cream pitcher is the image of a donkey, the books he reads are held in place by donkey book ends, and his pipe rests in a donkey holder. Moreover, Dr. Woodward collects humorous stories and anecdotes concerning donkeys.

With a chuckle, the Emory professor remarks that when he gets old and doesn't have anything to do, he can look at his collection and it will serve to recall some of his accomplishments, people he has known, and the impression he has left with certain persons.

A HIGHER RATING FOR YOUR DAIRY

Food with a high vitamin content is important today, and milk is one of the best sources of vitamins we have. Keep the vitamin content of your milk as high as possible and improve the rating of it by using your electric dairy water heater. You always have heated water on hand — hot for keeping your milking utensils spotlessly clean. You don't waste time with troublesome pail-lugging.
