A Mean Trick の気をの

KARL GRAYSON (Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

TED GROSS knew all the reasons why Herbert Allis had left Raeburn university and when I expressed an interest in hearing them he grinned and looked pleased. Ned is a man who likes to tell stories and he appreciates an attentive audience.

"I'll have to go back," he began, "to the time when Herbert was made a full-fledged professor and began his duties as an instructor of mathematics at Raeburn. Raeburn and Barkley, you know, are and have always been keen rivals. Not so much in the athletic field as in the academic. Each prides itself on its scholastic standing and each adheres to rigid rules concerning the qualifications of its faculty and its student body.

"A tradition of long standing was broken by Raeburn when the board of trustees hired Herbert Allis, for Herbert didn't possess a master's degree. Now a master's degree may or may not determine a man's didactic ability, but at Raeburn and Barkley, too, it invests him with a certain dignity, and has always been å necessary asset. Herbert Allis was the exception, but this was because he possessed exceptional ability in his line. In fact, he was quite famous, considered throughout the country as an authority. And Raeburn knew that by breaking an ancient tradition they had added one more point of fame to their long

"Herbert was quite young at the time, a small, unassuming man."

"Herbert was quite young at the time, a small, unassuming man, and was very grateful and proud of the honor which went with his professorship on the much envied Raeburn's shattering of the ancient tradition, and to Herbert's ears came eventually bits of gossip which seemed like a direct menace to his job. He was then quite unaware of the extent of his own fame.

"But as time went on and the Raeburn board of trustees continued to maintain him on their faculty at the same handsome salary, Herbert began, to use the vernacular, to feel his oats. That is, his fame and importance became so widespread that even the little man himself heard about it. It set him to thinking, and after a time he took the bull by the horns and approached the Raeburn trustees in regard to an increase in his salary.

"Much to his surprise the board awarded him the increase without the usual wrangling and red tape. In a sense this was a mistake because it stimulated in Herbert a feeling of confidence and self-importance. He didn't exactly get the swelled head, but he became more sure of his ground.

"Meanwhile, Barkley continued to speak disparagingly upon occasion of Raeburn's rash mover in breaking their traditions. Herbert wished something could be done about it. But at the moment no form of vengeance presented itself and Barkley continued with its remarks, even after a nationally circulated magazine published an article of praise and admiration concerning Herbert and his work.

"It was following the publication of a second and third article in equally well-reputed magazines that Herbert began to wonder if there weren't more behind Barkley's derogatory remarks than traditional disapproval. And the more he thought about it the more firmly he became convinced that the Barkley board of trustees was envious.

"And eventually a new and desperate plan took form in Herbert's mind. He re-read the three magazine articles concerning his own greatness in order to give him the necessary confidence, and then, in the greatest of secrecy, drove over to Barkley and called on the chairman of its board of trustees. The chairman received him graciously, in fact almost eagerly, and for two hours the pair remained closeted together.

"A week later Herbert tendered his resignation to the Raeburn board of trustees, and announced that he had been hired by Barkley college to head its mathematics department. The Raeburn board was shocked, indignant, incredulous. They consulted, went in a body to wait on Mr. Allis and after much hemming | curtains from blowing out into the and having they offered him a much | room when the windows are open.

higher salary and a department head.

"But Herbert was adamant. He had promised to join the Barkley faculty and that he must do. The Raeburn men became panicky. They hemmed and hawed some more and finally confessed that they had suspected Barkley of being wishful of securing the little man, but they had also felt assured, due to Barkley's disparaging remarks, that the rival college would never break its tradition of hiring a professor who didn't have an M.A. degree, hence had not offered to raise Herbert's salary. But, under the circumstances, they would double whatever amount the Barkley board had offered for an annual stipend.

"Still Herbert wouldn't listen. And in the end he departed for Barkley despite the almost tearful pleading of the Raeburn boys.

"Well, a month passed and then Herbert began wreaking his vengeance. The opportunity came when metropolitan newspaper asked him for an interview. In providing information about himself, Herbert announced that he was pretty proud of the fact that he was the only professor ever allowed on the Barkley faculty who didn't possess a mas-ter's degree. Barkley, he said, had broken a much adhered-to tradition in hiring him.

When the article was published the Barkley board was slightly perturbed. They didn't like to be reminded that they had spoken disparagingly of Raeburn for once hiring this self-same man. But Herbert was famous and becoming more famous by the minute and they were willing to take it on the chin. They knew that Herbert was a drawing

"Raeburn, on the other hand, was quite bitter about it all. Herbert's everlasting bragging was getting on their nerves. Everyone was therefore, quite surprised when, the following spring, upon occasion of the dedication of a new dormitory, Raeburn invited Herbert Allis to give the address. Herbert was flattered. He spent hours writing out the speech, and when the eventful day arrived, he appeared in cutaway and striped trousers and mounted to the platform with his old friend. the chairman of the Raeburn board. And there he stood, puffed out and proud—the only man who ever taught a class at either Raeburn or Barkley without possessing an M.A.

degree. Preliminaries were quickly dispensed with. Herbert was announced and with much gusto made his address. The crowd applauded and was on the point of dispersing when the chairman raised his hand. 'A moment,' he said. 'There is still one more event on our pro-gram which I am sure you will all be interested in watching." The chairman turned to little Herbert and there was a twinkle in his eyes. 'In view of the great work and fame of our esteemed guest, Mr. Herbert Allis, the board of trustees of this college has seen fit to bestow upon him the great honor of a master of arts degree.'

"Herbert's mouth open stared. He looked angry, made as if to protest, but hesitated as the cheers of the crowd reached his ears. He turned to them, as if in a daze, automatically bowing his thanks. Then he swung back to the chairman, muttered something in an undertone, turned and left the platform. And from that day to this he has not forgiven Raeburn university for the mean trick it played on him.

Michigan University

Has Rare Instruments

Instruments accurate enough to show the bending of a solid steel bar from the pressure of one finger, or the lengthening of the bar from the heat of a human body, will be included in the "gauging and precision measuring laboratory" established by the war department at the University of Michigan.

All types of devices needed to check the accurate processes used in modern industry are provided in the laboratory. Included are an eightinch super micrometer, set to one ten-thousandth of an inch, calipers, depth gauges, master cylinder for checking squares and many precision plates and angle irons. Master gauge .blocks will make 125,000 measurements from a ten-thousandth of an inch to 12 inches, with an accuracy of two-millionths of an inch per inch. Among the advanced type of measuring devices installed are those which make use of light wave interference, making simple measurements to one-millionth of an inch. For determination of gear teeth and screw threads, a projection device shows these materials at any desired magnification on a screen. A universal measuring machine permits direct or comparative measurements up to a millionth of an inch on any piece up to 48 inches in length, while another device makes visible a slit one ten-thousandth of an inch wide, which is about equal to one-twentieth of the diameter of a hair.

Weights on Curtains Small but light chain weights in the bottom hem of lace net curtains, hung with generous fullness all the way down to the floor, will add a lot to their well-tailored appearance. It's a trick the decorators use all the time. Weights also keep glass

HORSES, MULES MORE VALUABLE

Restrictions on Tractors And Machines Is Cause.

By SAM L. WILLIAMS
(Assistant Extension Animal Husbandman,
North Carolina State College.)

Much has been said and written about "Old Dobbin" resuming his place in the "agricultural sun"about a return to the horse and buggy days, now that war-time shortages of tires and metals threaten to restrict the use of modern laborsaving tractors and machines.

Horses and mules have never lost their importance on the farm. "The value of workstock on North Carolina farms is twice as great as that of all cattle and calves, and five times as great as the value of all hogs and sheep.

Horses and mules furnish a large percentage of the basic power essential in the production of all agricultural commodities. This has always been true, despite the increase in tractors and other machinery in use on the farm.

Now Profitable.

Raising horses and mules is a profitable business when they are used as a source of farm power, and as a means of supplementing the farm income through the sale of surplus animals produced. Four good animals can plow four, disc 15 or harrow 30 acres a day in the spring season; do other kinds of farm work at a proportionate rate; and raise enough colts to furnish replacements, if wisely managed.

"In this way, the work animals reaching an age of 6 or 7 years can be sold each year and younger animals bred to replace them. A good team of well-broken horses or mules will demand a much higher price than matched pairs of yearlings or two-year-olds. Pasture is the first consideration in properly feeding

Sauerkraut Juice

Sailors on early American clipper ships ate sauerkraut to keep in good health when they went on year-long voyages, and their descendants have kept up the habit in order to keep well at home. A scientist at the University of Oklahoma reports his success in feeding infants by adding sauerkraut juice to milk. Physicians are prescribing it in the treatment of some diseases, bearing out the old theory of Erasistratus, famous Syrian physician, who prescribed cabbage for his patients in 249 B. C. Many a farm family still keeps a sauerkraut barrel in a dark corner of the cellar, but most of the kraut used is canned in the states of New York, Wisconsin, Ohio and Michigan. Here the cabbage is cured in wooden vats. Only salt is added to draw out as much as 88.8 per cent of the water content from the cabbage. In warm fall weather, the cabbage cures rapidly and sometimes within two weeks tests the 8.5 per cent lactic acid required by government standards. To be well cured and tasty, it must ripen for several months before being canned.

The first sauerkraut juice was canned in 1924 and has found a good market. It is obtained by drawing off the brine from the vats while the cabbage is curing, then straining and clarifying it by a centrifugal machine that throws out all the cabbage particles. A mixture of half tomato juice and half sauerkraut juice is even more popular because of its attractive color.

The cabbage leaf contains large amounts of vegetable wax.

Farm Notes

Unusual Situation

For the first time in history, more soybean oil meal than cottonseed oil meal has been available for livestock feeding. Another unusual feature of the feed situation is the comparatively low cost of linseed oil meal, due to increased flax acreage and the availability of meal from Argentine.

Part-Time Farms Between 1930 and 1940 there was a sharp increase in ownership of small part-time farms near large cities.

Nut That's Not a Nut

The peanut, America's favorite food at baseball games and circuses, really isn't a nut at all. It's a pea, a member of the bean family. Nutpea or peanut, it's still good to eat, say the nation's baseball and circus fans.

Peanuts Morale-Builder

Peanuts — American farms produce more than 1,000,000,000 pounds for eating purposes annually—rank high as a morale-building food because they are rich in vitamin B1.

Do you remember William Morris, and how his life was lived, his fortune spent, his hands busiedin the service of others? He was a "soldier of the common good." After he was gone—his life began to grow in radiance and power, like a beacon set high upon a dangerous shore. In the twilight of his days he wrote what I like to think was his creed-and mine:

"I'm going your way, so let us go hand in hand. You help me and I'll help you. We shall not be here very long, for soon death, the kind old nurse, will come back and rock us all to sleep. Let us help one another while we may."

Honored in Life

For having destroyed the Spanish fleet in Manila bay on May 1, 1898, George Dewey received a score of honors and decorations, among them being his promotion to the rank of full admiral, the third in the history of the United States navy. Congress also passed a law permitting him to remain on active duty for the rest of his life and he was even discussed as a possible presidential candidate.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

 In bringing us buying information, a to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

• It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling In the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared. ● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confldence. It is a pleasant feeling to have. the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows Itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

Smart Gowns Stress Peg-Top Skirts and Dolman Sleeves

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

RASHIONS of today carry an inspiring message to women of discriminating taste in that there is a noticeable trend toward placing emphasis on quality fabrics, good lines that stress simplicity and a fine restraint in trimming. This gesture toward ladylike dress is particularly expressed in beautifully flattering frocks done in navy or black monotone rayon crepes and failles opaque to chiffon textures. A woman who dons a navy or black frock with ravishing snowy lingerie accents is classified at a glance among those best dressed in the current style parade. These eye-appealing modes become more so in that their gracious styling proclaims an entirely new silhouette which has to do for the most part, with slenderizing peg-top skirts and softly manipulated dolman sleeves.

The gowns pictured above have everything that goes to make up ultra chic. New as the season itself is the peg-top silhouette interpreted in the gown to the left in the above illustration. To begin with, it is made of a fine novelty rayon crepe in smart navy blue. When you are seeking a material you'll love to wear you will find the answer in rayon crepe, and this year these crepes are more likable than ever, and their color range is fascinating. Fullness at the skirt front, full pushup dolman sleeves and a plunging neckline are outstanding style details for this gown, as are also the fresh lingerie touches at neck and cuffs. Give more than a passing glance to the stunning hand-painted belt which accents the slender waistline, for fashion is launching a big spired the strikingly simple frock shown to the right in the above picture. Here a slender sheath skirt of smooth textured black rayon crepe conforms to the newest "lines." The immense dolman sleeves of matching fabric are in smartly contrasting honey-beige. Thus this color contrast heralds a new era in sleeve technique. Pencil-slim silhouettes, such as characterize this frock, make a well-corseted figure a prerequisite to fashionable appearance.

Bi-color and tri-color are still magic words in the field of costume design. Designers this spring are particularly turning their talents to creating bolero ensembles which exploit color contrast. Typical of this mode is the suit that tops a navy skirt with a red bolero and a wide gypsy girdle in either purple or gold color, the entire three-piece using the one material, rayon crepe, differentiated only in color.

Speaking of present fashions great importance is attached to jacket or suit dresses that are intriguingly tailored of black or navy faille or moire or rayon taffeta. Almost without exception the skirts are narrow, with discreet fullness for action carefully planned. The jackets have sprightly peplums that flare from below slim waistlines, or are of the new short lengths that stress eton or bolero effects. These suits are given drama with the use of spectacular jewel buttons or flattering jabots in frilly white.

For one-piece classic day dresses the new spun rayon weaves in a vast color range are attractive in looks as well as price, and they yield beautifully to fabric manipulation. also dry clean and for the most part even launder satisfactorily. For practical suits there are also rayon weaves of wool type that tailor perfectly and give a high-price appearance at a low-price outlay.

Gloves to Match

Vermillion red with white daisy print silk makes this day dress as refreshing as a breath of spring. It has a matching wool jacket and a hat of the new and novel "earphone" type. The most exciting style feature of this ensemble is the gloves she wears, made of the same print as the dress. This novelty stunt of matching gloves to blouse or gown or hat and bag lends intrigue to the current mode. It is possible to get patterns for gloves and many women are making their own.

Merchants Tell of Interest in Sewing

Merchants report that since the first of the year the demand for yard goods has been increasing by leaps and bounds. Which simply means that the home-sewing trend is gaining momentum.

A number of circumstances are leading to this increased interest in home sewing. One, and a very important one, is the necessity of trimming budgets to wartime economy. Then, too, a strong influence is the satisfaction you will find in "making your own."

There's every encouragement given to those who sew these days. Most excellent patterns are easily obtainable, and modern sewing machine equipment is a miracle worker in the way of achieving tucking, hemming, ruffling, shirring and all the little intricasies that sewing en-

Bands Trim Play Frocks

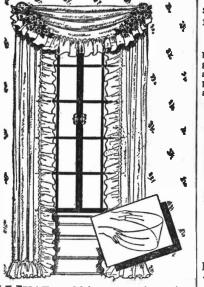

And Children's Dresses

A new fashion gesture is the trimming of cotton play frocks and children's wash dresses with gay embroidered bandings. These colorful border themes are worked out in vivid South American colors in flower or fruit motifs. They are particularly effective used to finish off skirt hemlines and to outline necklines, pockets and sleeves. Stitched together, they can be fashioned into oriental looking turbans, to which you can add a belt or a handbag made of the same material.

When You Buy Gloves Be

Sure They Are Washable On the "cotton front" gloves of this material are top-ranking favorites not only for their undoubted smartness, but also because they are so easily laundered. To look smart during the spring and summer months you must look spotlessly clean. And nothing gets dirty quite so fast as a pair of pastel or white gloves.
