Prints Combined With Plain Fabrics Make Fashion News

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THIS season's prints are gorgeous and excitingly beautiful, especially the gay florals which are such flatterers every woman adores them. To add to their lure, they are being styled with artistry and resourcefulness which are breathtaking in their novelty and eye-appeal as well as their versatility.

This is especially so in regard to the print-with-plain theme which is interpreted so artfully one could almost believe that a contest is on among designers as to who will create the most ingenious and fascinating effects. The flair for individualizing prints in dramatic ways is strikingly interpretated in the attractive gowns pictured in the above illustration. In these smart New York creations the accent is on bright and brilliant florals dramatically contrasted with dark back-

The dress to the left looks toward summer. It is of navy sheer. The designer employs a technique which is receiving wide exploitation this season, namely, that of appliqueing cutout print motifs for accent and excitement. Sprightly white daisies are appliqued on the skirt. Also, white daisies are appliqued to outline a wide band of bright red faille around the midriff, this girdle effect adding a definite note of style distinction. A spray of the cutout daisies decorates the shoulder.

What promises to be most popular of all skirts during the coming months is the skirt of fabric-conserving type, such as wrap-arounds that eliminate zipper or button fastenings, or the dashing side-saddle skirt that goes back to the days of the side-saddle riding habit. The dress shown to the right in the above illustration belongs to the last

As a guide to buying your print frocks and ensembles it is well worth while to saunter through fabric displays with the thought in mind of discovering what's new in prints. You will find a revelation of new and original ideas, for prints this season have quite a way of their own that differentiates them you a special design for the skirt, perhaps a splash of gay florals on navy or black, with a waist section that poises a single huge match-ing flower cluster at just the point to give the effect of a corsage either at one shoulder or to accent a girdle effect.

If you "make your own" this matter of having the color and scheme of design worked out for you in perfect ensemble simplifies home sewing. Then, too, if you plan to buy a print costume ready made, you will select it more intelligently after acquainting yourself in advance with fashion-right prints.

Featured items that give dresses and ensembles "style" include such interesting details as quilted pockets, cuffs, collars, lapels and borderings. An eye-catching fancy is a single cluster of flowers here and there that sparkles with exquisite hand beadwork. Boutonnieres made of floral cutouts that look realistic add a beguiling touch, as do also the ruche effects formed of the flowers of the print. And so the story of prints goes on in end-

In fact this return of the culotte is attributed for the most part to the bicycle fad. There's a new culotte that is much in demand because of its practicality. Dairy Production Climbing Steadily

Fluid Milk Consumption In Cities Is Still Off

Combined production of cheese, creamery butter, and condensed and evaporated milk in the United States in 1941 exceeded the 1940 output by 7 per cent. The January, 1942, production of these dairy foods was 9.6 per cent greater than in January, 1941, according to Ohio State university rural economists.

The 1942 production goals for dairy products call for approximately 12 per cent greater production than was obtained in 1941. The required increase in cheese and concentrated milk can be secured by a 7 per cent increase in all manufrom the usual order. Some give factured dairy products if some of the total production is shifted from creamery butter to the concentrated

Need Will Be Met.

Creamery butter made up approximately 70 per cent of all manufactured dairy products in 1941, so any significant diversion of milk from the manufacture of butter will meet the needs for more milk to be made into cheese or to be condensed or evaporated. The production of dried milk in 1941 was less than the 1940 production, but a larger share of the total was prepared for human consumption.

The consumption of fluid milk in cities has not increased at the rate expected. Increased payrolls and greater quantities of milk available do not induce urban citizens to consume the amount of milk needed for adequate diets.

Rural economists believe that the best interests of the dairy industry at present require a definite policy as to price and of quantities of products to be purchased and stored, if increased production is to be maintained with the least expenditure of productive facilities.

Tractor Trouble Advice

If the farm tractor lacks pep, better check up on valves and valve mechanism. If there is rebound on each compression stroke when the engine is cranked slowly, the valves are closing properly. Lack of compression means waste of fuel and loss of power.

Sticky Valves.

Lack of compression in the farm tractor may be caused by sluggish or sticky engine valves. Engineers say this cause of power and fuel waste can often be remedied with a little kerosene. Start the engine, and after it has idled a while apply kerosene to the valve stems so that it works down between the stems and the Adjusting Discs.

To prevent overloading the farm tractor, adjust the size of discs and disc plows to the power of tractors. If less draft is desired, the width of cut may be reduced or one or more discs may be removed. In operating in hard ground, weights should be used at the rear and front furrow wheels rather than on top of the frame or beam.

Leaves Show Soil Needs

Through methods developed by horticulturists at the Pennsylvania State college it may be possible in the future to determine the soil requirements of crops by foliar or leaf diagnosis.

For instance, plants may become sickly as, a result of too much of a certain fertilizing material in relation to the supply of others, or because of a shortage of certain other soil foods, according to a bulletin from that university.

Balloons and Clouds

Unlike an airplane, a balloon has difficulty in going up and coming down through a cloud because the cold air in the cloud contracts the gas in the bag and reduces its lifting power, says Colliers. When the balloonist does not neutralize this quick reduction by throwing out the right quantity of ballast at the right moment, the bag will not enter the cloud during the ascent or will not drop through it at a safe speed during the descent.

Anniversary Party

STANLEY CORDELL (Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

HEN you stopped to analyze the situation, you really couldn't blame Elisabeth McCall for entering into the social whirl of Havens so wholeheartedly after she and Alden had returned from a six-weeks' honeymoon. Before marrying Alden, Elisabeth hadn't had the opportunity to become a society hostess. Parties and dances and theaters and all that sort of thing was what she had longed for but never had been able to have.

But Alden had money and position. And because Elisabeth was so bright and possessed such a charming personality, it didn't take her long to acquire the rudiments necessary to become a social host-

She had the good sense to go about the thing with not too much of a rush. At first she was content to attend bridge parties and give teas; in short, to learn all there was to learn about such things.

Gradually she acquired poise and personality and ease. She became a figure in social circles. The parties she gave became more frequent and more largely attended.

By the end of three months, Elisabeth felt she could cut loose and do some real entertaining. And she did. First, there was a dinner for Rance Hanlon, the celebrated author, who was spending a few days in town. And then there was a party in honor of Hilary Eyssen, the brilliant young architect, who, at the moment was working on plans for the new community house. These were followed by more dinners and parties. The days and weeks became one round of gay social functions.

Elisabeth reveled in it. She loved She felt that she could never have enough. And it never occurred to her that she might overdo, that there is a limit to such things.

At first Alden didn't seem to mind. It amused him immensely to see his charming young wife so gay and happy, so active in Havens' social circles. But as the parties and dinners became more frequent -in fact, began to overlap one another-Alden was moved to offer a suggestion or two.

"I hardly see you at all, Elisabeth," he remarked, striving not to be too severe. "You're out all the time, or there's someone in. I'd like to be alone with you once in a Elisabeth smiled and ruffled his hair. "Oh, but I'm so happy, Alden, dear. Besides, it can't last much longer. I'm sure to tire of it all sooner or later."

But Alden wasn't so sure. He went on gently: First it's a dinner for Hanlon, then a party for Eyssen. These chaps are all right in their way. But, after all, you're married to me.'

"Not jealous, are you, Alden?"

"Not the way most men get jealous. Not jealous of your affections. But decidedly jealous of your attentions. I think a husband has a right to at least an hour or two of his wife's time once a day."

Alden was frowning a little as he spoke, as though his thoughts were not entirely on the matter under discussion. And because Elisabeth really loved her husband, she sensed that something was wrong and was eager to help.

"Something else is bothering you, Alden. I wish you'd tell what it is.

I'd like to help." Alden looked into his wife's eyes and saw something there that provoked an unburdening flow of speech. Things weren't going so well at the office. Ready cash wasn't so plentiful as it might be. And these parties cost a lot of money. If Elisabeth could only ease up for a while—

Elisabeth felt hurt and utterly selfish; hurt because Alden had waited until now to come to her with his trouble; selfish because she had been too busy with her social activities to perceive the change in him brought about by worry and concern.

She put her cheek against his and whispered things that made Alden feel 100 per cent better; made him feel almost like a brute for having | than all other kinds combined.

spoiled her fun. There'll be no more parties, Elisabeth told him, or theaters or dinners or anything. Nothing at all until things at the office picked up and there was no more worry.

But things at the office didn't pick up. They became worse. If Alden had been worried before, he was now seriously concerned. Moreover, the future didn't look very bright.

More than ever Alden wanted the comforting companionship of his wife. He needed her. And yet he was reluctant to bother her further with his troubles. He refrained from even hinting that things were growing worse instead of better. His finances were in no condition to urge Elisabeth to plunge once more into the hectic social whirl she

So Alden remained silent, trying to convince himself that Elisabeth was happy, willing to go without the things she most desired. But through it all there was a burning suspicion that she was miserable and dissatisfied. This suspicion was realized when, one evening not long after their first conversation, Alden arrived home, tired and discouraged, to find Elisabeth awaiting him in a party dress. His spirits sank.

"Alden, darling, I've arranged for Vou don't a dinner party tonight. You don't mind? It's really going to be quite an affair. We haven't had anything like it for some time."

Alden tried to smile and not look too disheartening. Inwardly, thoughts of a dinner party, with dozens of jabbering people around made him miserable. He had been looking forward to a quiet evening at home with Elisabeth. Those quiet evenings, it seemed, were all that was keeping him on his feet.

"All right, Elisabeth," he agreed. "It's all right, if you say so. I was hoping—but, never mind. We haven't had a party for quite a time. I suppose you deserve some reward.'

"I knew you'd let me, darling. I knew you would. You've always been so nice about such things." "Who's it for this time?" Alden asked. "Whom are we honoring tonight?" There was a merry twinkle in Elisabeth's eyes as she put her arms about her husband's neck. night's dinner," she said, "is for the most wonderful man in all the world. And there's going to be no one present but him and his wife. Tonight we are honoring the marriage of Mr. Alden McCall!"

Alden's heart began to pound. He saw the dancing light in Elisabeth's eyes and could have cried for joy. She was thinking of him after all. She had known all along things were getting worse. And she wanted to help him, wanted to lessen the worry.

Alden saw it all in a flash. Then he took Elisabeth in his arms and kissed her tenderly. Already things were beginning to look brighter.

"Darling," said Alden, "you couldn't have thought of anything to make me happier.' "Darling," said Elisabeth, "I were married, four months ago today. And I've got a bigger kick out of planning this party than any on record."

Infants' Eyes Should Be Carefully Protected

For several weeks after birth the immature eyes of babies should be shaded carefully from strong light sources. Infants' eyes should not be unduly fatigued by hand and other maneuvers of neighbors and relatives to attract attention.

Mothers should not expose their young infants to dust in a room when cleaning the house, or to other conditions where irritant particles may lurk in the atmosphere.

Muscles of young eyes need time and practice before they can function easily, just as the muscles of the arms and legs require song exercise and development before they can carry on their work. For this reason objects should not be held too near the eyes of infants, otherwise the muscles of accommodation may be strained in attempting to focus closely.

For several weeks the eyes of most infants are of an indifferent grayish blue before taking on their permanent hue of pigmentation. Also, at first an infant sees everything in an indistinct monotone of gray. The ability to distinguish colors develops slowly.

Excellent Use for Tears.

Nature has provided the eyes with an excellent antiseptic wash in the form of tears, and usually eyes of infants take care of themselves in respect to infections. However, there is one important exception. Thousands of children have been blinded from infections arising from social diseases in their parents. Sometimes a child is born with good eyes and not until several years later do evidences of the infection appear in the eyes, or elsewhere. Fortunately, a preventive against such infection of infants' eyes has been found by science in silver nitrate. Now laws of most states require doctors to drop a small amount of silver nitrate solution in the eyes of newly born infants. This practice has saved the eyes of countless chil-

Sentence Fixed by Court for Attempted Arson.

SALEM, MASS.—Jailed since he set a fire in a Lynn building where he was a night watchman, William E. Holmes, 21, a special policeman and a former member of the national guard, gained his freedom when he promised Judge J. Arthur Baker he will purchase $5 worth of defense stamps every week until the United States is at peace again.

A suspended sentence of two years was imposed by Judge Baker when he pleaded guilty to attempted arson. Absent without leave from Camp Edwards at the time of his arrest, the youth was instructed by the court to "do something for your country" by buying defense stamps.

Holmes failed to return to his outfit, the 102d field artillery, after a furlough last October, the judge was informed, and army authorities recently informed Probation Officer Fred M. Barr here that they do not want him back in the ranks. The young man obtained a job as a night watchman for a notification service in Lynn while AWOL, it was brought

The former soldier set fire to a box in a Lynn lumber company's building the night of December 12, according to police, and extinguished the blaze himself to impress his superiors with his ability as a watchman, hoping he would receive an increase in pay.

No Rhyme or Reason for It, but It Really Works

FINDLAY, OHIO. - William D. Robinson of near-by Rudolph, Ohio, began to whittle with a purpose three years ago and now he's displaying his handiwork.

The gadget is a series of enginelike parts-60 of them-which cover about 20 square feet. The units, made entirely of wood and all handcarved, are assembled in such a manner on one base that they run when the power is turned on from a small electric motor.

Robinson calls the gadget his "unfinished symphony" because it will never be completed. He intends to add wheels and more connecting rods until the energy, furnished by the small motor, gives out or his haven't been so happy since we gadget outgrows his barn.

He estimates that there are 500 working parts in the gadget, including hand-carved cylinders, crank shafts, wrist-pins and pulleys.

Spreading News in Tibet

In Tibet news is read aloud by the priests to the populace. There are two reasons for this: Few Tibetans can read, and only 50 copies of their one newspaper are printed.

Walter Asboe, a European, does the job on a hand press. Then he sends the 50 papers to the lamas or priests, who summon the people of the neighboring villages to listen to the news.

The papers are then forwarded to another group of lamas. By the time they have traveled to the far frontiers of Tibet, the news may be from six months to two years old!

Howard Guy Bannerman

A pilgrim, travelling a rough and rocky road in life became weary with his load and paused to rest awhite and fell asleep. A passing angel picked him up and carried him on to the home of God.

Howard Guy Bannerman was born at Melendy's Prairie May 20th, 1901 The greater part of his life has been spent in this vicinity. He graduated from Palmyra High School in 1919. The following year he enrolled in Lawrence College when because of affliction he was obliged to return home

About nine years ago he was married to Miss Edna Grove of Junction City, Wisconsin, who has displayed not only the fine virtues of a loving wife but during the long period of his affliction portrayed the very essence of fidelity, patience and noble devotion.

About eight years ago there were signs of an approaching affliction. He continued with his work until about three years ago when he became confined to his home, the victim of an incurable affliction. Having reached the stage when manhood's morning had not yet reached the noon and naturally loving life he longed for the return of health that he might linger longer with his loved ones, yet as the dread disease moved steadily on, he became resigned to his lot and began making preparations for his exit from this world, to a world where his tortured body might be at rest. Some months ago, he and his wife entered in to the fellowship of the Palmyra Methodist church.

He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. Howard was of a friendly disposition, cheerful, a loyal citizen.

a loving husband and father. He leaves to mourn his passing his sorrowing wife and son Richard his father and mother, one brother Gilbert of Wausau, a sister, Mrs. Knowlton of Allen's Grove, his aged grandmother, Mrs. Bannerman of Delavan. his uncle Gus of Palmyra and several other uncles and aunts and many
