Following the noon-day repast and the renewing wankee hospital the last of the week of acquaintanceships, the day's program, under the chairmanship of Dr. Jos. J. It was based on Sunday and Monday at Mayville, Wis., historical fact and on research undertaken by the author and proved illuminating as well as entertaining to everyone. The cast included Ruth Gramling, Urban Wittig, Dr. Robert Wittig, Norbert Baldus, Edward Baldus, Joseph Becker, and little Cassie Gramling, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gramling, all of Milwau-Mariyn Schmid spent the week with kee, and Ottilie Agathen of Eagle. There followed a new feature of these gatherings and one it is hoped can be continued for the duration, a mock hook-up with stations around the world, in which messages from descendants in uniform were broadcast to those present. Twenty-five descendants in uniform are at present either in military service or in government services connected with the war effort. The usual genealogical reports and communications from absent members were read, and the program concluded with a business session in which the offer of the Gramling famfly to give the grove in which the re unions have been held to the Link descendants was discussed. It has been proposed to make this beautiful spot, Mary Lou Stead-same which happens to be situated at the function of the three farms the brothers established as their homes here in America, into a family memorial by making of it a permanent park for the use of all members of the family at any time at which they may care to avail themselves of it, and it is hoped that ways and means will be found of bringing this project to completion. Supper and good-byes brought another and happy reunion to a close.

Farm Building Must Have Board's Permit

WPB Recognizes Need of Limited Construction

County war boards of the United States department of agriculture will co-operate with the War Production board in handling applications for authorization to begin construction work on farms, the War Production board announced.

The United States department of agriculture is co-operating with the WPB in formulating policies under which county and state U.S.D.A. war boards will make recommendations covering farm residential and agricultural construction. Projects recommended by these boards will be forwarded to the War Production board for final approval.

Order L-41, issued by the War Production board, prohibits the start of unauthorized construction projects which use materials, labor and construction equipment needed in the war effort, and places all new publicly and privately financed construction under rigid control.

The War Production board recognizes that a limited amount of construction by farmers is necessary to maintain and increase production to meet agri-cultural goals and that certain off-the-farm facilities are also needed for the production, han-dling and processing of farm products.

A farmer planning to begin construction which needs authorization should consult his county United States department of agriculture war board.

All farm projects, including residential, agricultural, and off-thefarm construction, such as warehouses, processing plants, creameries, etc., will be considered first by the United States department of agriculture county war boards. Applications for projects recommended by these boards will be sent to state war boards and then to the department of agriculture.

The department will consider the recommendations and send to the War Production board for final approval those which are essential.

Battling Soil Erosion

Legume crops such as alfalfa, clover, soybeans and lespedeza are being used with increasing success as "heavy artillery" in fighting the battle of soil erosion. Legumes keep the topsoil in place, deposit nitrogen in soil and provide it with needed supplies of organic matter. To do their best work, legumes should be reinforced by intelligent soil management such as the use of fertilizers high in phosphorus and potash.

A Bit of Trickery

R. HILL WILKINSON

N ORDER to gain an end, Preston Mason had resorted to artifice. "Come on out," he urged the beautiful Ina, "for just a minute. I've something to tell you, and it's important, too."

Associated Newspapers-WNU Features.

Ina yielded. Once outside, alone, away from the country club bailroom lights, Preston turned to her and smiled.

Ina eyed him coldly. "So! It was a trick! You didn't have anything important to say. I might have known. I might have remembered that you couldn't have anything important to say. You're not bright enough."

She started away, but Preston caught her arm. "Now, Ina, wait a minute. My real purpose was to warn you against David Rollins."

"Warn me against him!" Ina stared.

"You've been seeing David a lot lately. Too much. First thing you know he'll simply take it for granted you're interested in him, and then you'll find yourself in a jam. David isn't the man you want to marry, in spite of his money. You're not his type. Besides, you're in love with me."

"Well!" Ina choked, groping for adequate words to express her rage. "Preston Mason, I think you're the most insolent, insulting, conceited person I've ever known. I wouldn't marry you if you were the last person on earth! You-you haven't even a sense of honor or selfrespect, else you wouldn's have tricked me into coming out here."

"Preston Mason, I think you're the most insolent, insulting, conceited person I've ever known.

"If you didn't care," said Preston easily, "you wouldn't have let yourself be tricked."

Which remark stung Ina to the quick. She whirled, white with rage, and left him standing there. Inside she saw David Rollins, and she went to him. "Take me home, David. I've-I've a headache."

David was delighted. He got her wraps and helped her into his $8,000 roadster and tucked a robe about her slippered feet, for the night was His concern regarding her alleged headache was thrilling. So thrilling, in fact, that when they reached the drive at Ina's home she did not at once offer to get out. Instead, in reply to his questions she admitted that her headache had vanished and she felt quite fit. Whereupon David reached into his pocket and produced a little box. Ina gasped when he opened it at the sight of the diamond that sparkled there.

"Darling," he said, "I know I shouldn't expect you to love me so soon, but tomorrow I'm leaving for Chicago on a two weeks' business trip. I thought if-would you wear It until I got back. Sort of-on approval. It would make me tremendously happy, and you would have two weeks to think things over."

He waited hopefully, his eyes pleading. Ina's thoughts were chaotic. Presently she thought of Preston Mason and the episode on the club veranda. She thought of this and she thought of that. And in the end she held out her hand and David slipped the ring on the proper finger and then kissed her. Three days after David's departure Ina gave up trying to drive thoughts of Preston from her mind and quite openly began to wonder why he hadn't called. It wasn't like Preston not to call. That was what had always annoyed her about Preston. He had always taken it for granted that she wanted him to call. that she was interested in him, that she even loved him. His attitude went against her grain. If he only weren't so irresponsible, if he possessed a sense of honor or scruples or was willing to admit that her winning required an effort, she might-well, she might even like

Obviously Preston had changed. She hadn't seen him since that night at the country club and he hadn't called by phone. Not like Preston Almost with a feeling of horror she wondered whether he had ceased being interested in her. She wondered, too, what he would be like, if such were the case. Finally, she decided to find out. It was as good an excuse as any to see

The next day she went for a walk, returning on the Bristol road at about the time Preston was due to come along, en route home from his duties in the neighboring town. She heard the familiar chug of his ancient automobile before it reached her, and despite herself her heart began to pound. She knew a feeling of relief when the chugging slowed down and a familiar voice asked her if she wanted to ride.

During the drive back to town Preston talked about the weather and about the country club dance and even touched on the general chaotic condition of the world. When ne deposited her at her own doorstep Ina was furious. He hadn't even mentioned her ring, or their quarrel, or the fact that he was contemplating suicide because of her engagement. The insolent thing!

It was four full days before Ina cooled off enough to inveigle another ride from Preston. During that period he hadn't called, and she had been wholly miserable because of his neglect. This time she suppressed her pride by sheer willpower and phoned him.

"Preston," she said, "I have to get over to Oakland tonight and the folks are using our car. Would you drive me over and back?"

"Why," said Preston, politely en-thusiastic, "I'd love to." And in ten minutes he was out front. Midway to Bristol the car of ancient vintage gave a couple of fitful coughs and died. Preston looked concerned and apologetic. Of all times to have this happen! Would there be serious consequences if she didn't reach Oakland within the hour?

Oh, no, Ina told him, it wasn't important. And she blessed the fact that Preston wasn't rich, because if he were rich he could afford a car that wouldn't break down.

There was nothing to do but wait until another car came along by which they could send word to the nearest garage. Ina made herself comfortable. Preston lit a cigarette. There followed a period of silence. Presently Preston sat upright with a start.

"What is it?" asked Ina in faint alarm.

"Heavens!" said Preston. "I just thought of something." Without warning he leaned over and kissed her. "There."
"Preston Mason," began Ina angrily, but Preston interrupted. "Now don't start lecturing about my sense of honor. I've a clear conscience. It just occurred to me that if you had no moral sense of honor than to go out with me while you're engaged to another man, there's no reason for me to be bothered by scruples either." "I'm not engaged."

"You're wearing David's ring." "It's only on approval and-

"To teach me a lesson," Preston finished.

Ina bit her lip. "Oh, Preston, everything's so confused in my mind. I don't know what to do. I really didn't have to go to Oakland tonight. I-"

"Well, the car isn't really broken down, either. I can start it any time. Shall I?" He turned on the ignition switch.

Ina blinked. "Preston Mason, you just haven't a sense of honor. However, since we're already stopped-"

"I get it," Preston grinned. And he turned off the ignition switch, and put the key into his pocket.

Eye-Conscious Class

STATE COLLEGE, PA.-Prospective Johnny Doughboys with weak eyes won't flunk the army physical examination at the Pennsylvania State college under a new "eye-conscious" program originated by the school of physical education and ath-

A compulsory vision clinic has been established for freshman hygiene classes in order to make potential draftees more "eye-minded." The clinic will be conducted by H. R. Jones, chairman of the Pittsburgh division, Illuminating Engineering Society of America.

Uncle Sam's future soldiers will be instructed in three phases. The students will be taught by lecture and demonstration concerning the proper care of eyes; preliminary examinations will be made by the student health service and college reading clinic; and students will be guided to the right type of eye specialists for correction. If financial assistance is needed, college authorities will direct them to available loan funds.

"We believe that students must feel responsible for preparing themselves now, not when they get in the army," Dr. Arthur F. Davis, associate professor of physical education in charge of the program, said. "This clinic prepares students mentally and helps them beat the gun."

Dr. Davis said that the college would also teach the future draftee and volunteer about preventive eyestrain. Advice will be given on eye rest, adequate illumination, eye cleanliness, study habits, protection from infectious diseases, fatigue, nutrition, and light evolution.

Two surveys will be made. There will be a study of lighting conditions in dormitory and fraternity rooms, and another group will determine laboratory lighting where concentrated work is done.

"If the army and navy want men who can see clearly, students must be taught to prevent instead of waiting to cure eye conditions," Dr. Da-

Burglar Happy to See Police Squad

After What Happened, Who Can Blame Him?

CHICAGO.-Robert Hanson's luck as a burglar in the past wasn't good. He got six months in the Cook county jail. And after what happened to him recently, he told police, jail was preferable. Robert, who is 20 years old, got tired of working. He quit his job as a laborer and began casting about for a field in which to pursue his old endeavors.

He believed he had found it when he entered the flat of Courtney Anderson. But Arthur Hughes, who lives in another part of the building, heard him. Hughes went down to the basement and told Mrs. Beatrice Anderson.

Mrs. Anderson, a medium sized woman of 21 years, dropped her washing back into the tub, picked up her baby, and started up the back stairs. On the way up she was joined by a neighbor, Mrs. Caroline Miller, 25, 41/2 footer, who might weigh 90 pounds if carrying a bag of groceries. Hughes went up the front way.

The burglar, hearing Hughes at the front, clattered down the back stairs past the two women, pushing them roughly to one side.

"Why, that rat!" snapped the tiny Mrs. Miller, and started in hot pursuit. Mrs. Anderson followed close behind. The burglar ran into the basement. The two women slammed the door behind them.

Mrs. Anderson, hampered by her baby, was able to get in only one blow. But it knocked Hanson to the floor, where Mrs. Miller went to work on him. Bloody, bedraggled, and howling, the burglar was dragged out of the basement by the two women, back up the stairs, and into the ransacked Anderson apartment.

All this happened at 2:30 in the afternoon. Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Anderson took back $1 and a ring he had stolen, sat him in a chair, dusted off their hands, and took turns glaring malevolently and making fierce threats until 6:30, when Anderson came home. He immediately called the police.

"Boy, am I glad to see you!" Hanson blubbered as a police squad led him away.

Presentation of the Barn Dance on Saturday is only one of many WLS activities at the Wisconsin State Fair. Art Page will originate his daily "Dinnerbell" broadcasts from the Prairie Farmer-WLS exhibit, giving a review of the day's happenings, judging, awards and presenting musical entertainment. Talent from the regular WLS staff will be assigned to the 'Dinnerbell" program daily and will give additional stage shows several times each day at the exhibit tout.

The Brairie Farmer-WLS existen at the Fair will be a meeting place for all visitors. There will be drinking water, chairs for resting, tables for lunching, a checkroom, pictures of many of the WLS radio stars, and someone on hand at all times to answer questions about Prairie Farmer, WLS and the people on the air.

What You Bery With WAR BUNDS

Essential in the equipment of every Soldier, Sailor, Marine or Flyer is a first aid kit, consisting of bandages and antiseptics for instantaneous use. These materials are packed into a compact box and cost about $1.50 each.

We need millions of t'ese first aid kits for emergency treatment. They are also used by Red Cross workers, in field hospitals and wherever needed until hospital treatment may be obtained. Even a child could buy one or more of these kits through purchase of War Stamps. Buy War Bonds and Stamps every pay day and invest at least to percent of your income in these government U. S. Soldiers of production, as well as soldiers of battle, must keep fit and healthy at all times. These foods are among those you need for your vitamin supply. Wellbalanced, wholesome meals, properly cooked at low-temperatures on your gas range, can do much to keep you and your family fit.

Remember to eat healthfully, for your own sake and for the sake of your country. America needs healthy production soldiers.
