With the Boys In the Service

Dear Mrs. Whettam:

Received your very welcome letter tonight, just before going to supper. I have had to eat here in the ward until today, when they let me walk down a closed-in hallway and eat in the big mess hall. According to the doctor's orders this morning I can leave tomorrow and go back to duty. I am plenty weak after being in here 3 weeks Wednesday. I heard from you a few days before coming in the hospital. It does not seem that long ago. Was on duty a couple of days with a fever, but went to the hospital on the third day. Temp. got up to 104 that night and had a high temp. for several days. Had a bad cough, so had an X-Ray of my chest for bronchitis. My tonsils were giving me some trouble, so they advised me to have them removed in a couple of weeks. About this time my right eye became inflamed, as it does you know at times, so over to the eye clinic in a wheel chair I go for several days with it. They certainly check you up all right.

There are 32 beds in this ward and they are filled most of the time. Fellows from everywhere. Some are getting discharged and going home. Have pleurisy or T. B., which one fellow has and has been here 80 days. Some with asthma. Yes, I heard about all the illness there had been around Eagle. I sincerely hope they all recover soon. One never knows.

Dorothy is home now spending the rest of her vacation, before she goes back South to start the fall term. Got a card from Bill, who was spending a week's vacation in Maine. So you have had company ever since I left. That's fine, must seem good at that to have the table full.

How is Mr. Loibl? How did the grain crop turn out? Must have had quite a heavy yield when Ray had to get a furlough for week for threshing. Ha! ha! Well I hope it was a good yield.

A couple of the boys from my barracks just came over and brought a couple of Eagle Quills that Isabel sent which I appreciate very much. Guess I will see what the latest is. Thought I would write you a few lines now, Mrs. Whettam because when I get on duty again, there will be little correspondence. Say hello to E. J. and Martin and Nate, with best regards to you all.

Cadet Thomas Schmidt, who has been home on furlough, returned to Iowa Thursday.

Mrs. England of Calhoun called at the Linn home Wednesday.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR SHERIFF
Of Waukesha County

TO THE VOTERS OF WAUKESHA COUNTY:

I am using this means of acquainting you with a few facts about me which, I believe, are important in the campaign for sheriff.

I was born 44 years ago in the town of Brookfield, am married and have a family, and have always been a resident of the county except, of course, while serving in the armed forces of this country during World War I. As a member of the 32nd Division I served overseas 17 months. The crossing to France was not without incident, for I was on the troopship Tuscaloosa that was sunk Feb. 5, 1918, with losses.

My experience in the sheriff's department covers a period of ten years, six of them as a deputy. I am now serving my fourth year as undersheriff, a position which has given me intensive, practical training in all the duties surrounding the sheriff's department. Added to that training I have attended police schools conducted under the supervision of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, giving valuable assistance in the study of criminal detection, wartime espionage and traffic regulation.

If promoted to the office of sheriff I will give Waukesha county a fair and economical administration, based on wide experience in law law enforcement. Sincerely, ALLEN E. WILLIAMS.

Authorized, paid for by A. E. Williams, 946 Oakland Ave. Waukesha.

NEW EFFECTIVE HAY FEVER RELIEF

Hay fever, which annually causes more sneezes, more inflamed noses and more red, streaming eyes than any other scourge, may have its final big fling this September, all because a Pennsylvania electrical engineer was served a dish of corn meal mush which was entirely too salty. The engineer, sneezing, and with all other hay fever manifestations, stopped at a hotel where he was served a dish of mush which he considered sending back as it was much too salty. Finally he ate it, however; the hay fever attack lessened, ultimately ceased. Next day he had three meals, all oversalted, and experienced his most comfortable time in years in the "hay fever season."

His analytical mind quickly grasped the possibility that the saline substance in his food was responsible for his relief.

About this time, Dr. E. E. Selleck, a graduate of Columbia University, met the engineer, made notes, and when he returned to his home, began experiments. Today Dr. Selleck declares he has found a certain means of relief for hay fever and is supported in his contention by other medical experts, and a nationally known chemical manufacturing concern, the Hollings-Smith Company, at Orangeburg, New York, has taken over making the remedy, which is called Nakamo Bell.

Describing the experiments, Dr. Selleck said, "After I was sure I had found a means of quickly relieving hay fever through the chloride group, I tested it in the most practical way I knew. I held a three day clinic, to which many hay fever sufferers responded, from ages ranging from 10 to 60 years. Each person was given two tablets with a little water. Some relief came to all within ten minutes. Reports on these cases during the ensuing weeks showed practically a complete cessation of symptoms." -Adv.

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
 Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking - its risk of exposure and infection - throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
 You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling - feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Little Girls Go to School in Jumpers and Jacket Dresses

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MORE than ever designers are alert to the need of outfitting the little daughters of the household so that they may be sensibly gowned at the same time that they are made to look "pretty as a picture" at play, in the school room and all the day through.

One of the trends that are adding infinitely to the interest of juvenile fashions is definite acceptance of cottons for all-year-round wear. The cotton vogue has developed to such an extent, it is possible now to plan an entire wardrobe in terms of smart cottons.

For back-to-school wear there is nothing smarter than the handsome richly colorful plaid gingham which are being made up into autumn suits for grown-ups as well as children. Styled after the manner of the two-piece shown to the left in the above picture, these plaid gingham suits the younger generation to perfection. It is especially gratifying to any little girl's pride to know that her jacketed dress is as smartly and painstakingly styled as those of her elders. The pleated skirt and the jacket, too, have an air of sophistication that pleases fashion-minded little girls. Additional interest is created by using the plaid vertically for the skirt and horizontally for the jacket. The neckline is softened by a notched collar of spanning white pique.

The little girl shown centered in the group probably feels triumphant after her first day in first grade because she could wear one of her new cottons, and of course she just beamed with pride when teacher said her mother deserved an "A" for choosing washable cottons for a little girl's school clothes. This tiny tot likes the jacket styling of her costume, too, for it is done quite after the manner of big sister's best-beloved gingham gown.

School playgrounds encourage rough and tumble activities, but a jumper dress of blue cordurella (fine pinwale corduroy) like that worn by the youngster shown to the right in the above picture can survive almost any hard knocks because of its robust construction and still look neat and in perfect condition after repeated launderings. Pinwale cordurella is certainly the ideal fabric for children's wear. It is inexpensive, it comes in beautiful colors and it is altogether likable for its many attractive qualities. Note the smart styling of this little jumper. It is intriguingly cut in princess lines.

Other trends that are outstanding in the styling of the new fall juvenile frocks include blouse and skirt two-somes, the skirt usually a gypsy-like dirndl, although there is also a big showing of tailored cloth skirts even for very tiny tots. Boxy jackets and skirts also reflect adult styling in that they have a cunning suit effect. Skirts may have a full look, but that is no sign designers have ignored new fabric conservation rulings. It merely signifies an adroit, subtle handling of material to give an illusion of fullness. Put to the test the measurements will be found to be within the inches allowed.

More slacks suits will be worn by children than ever before. They are showing cute models in versatile versions, some of wool flannels, but most of wool fabric blends to take the place of all wool. These come in reds, navies, browns and in combinations of bright colors finished off with dark pipings and other trimming details. They have the cleverest little jackets and sweaters to match.

That Old Favorite Is Back—Woolknit

There's no end to the smart knitted apparel that is making a record showing for fall and winter. The fashions turned out have that well-bred look, and they include everything from jackets and separate coats to suits and one-piece or two-piece dresses that are the most eye-alluring creations imaginable.

To mention a few highlights, there are wool fleece coats to be worn casually now being shown in the machine woolknit displays. One-piece coat dresses, finished off with grosgrain bindings and grosgrain-covered buttons and gore-flared to perfection, simply fascinate with their clever styling and their rich colorings. The jacket suits have all the fine tailored look that a suit should have.

Then there are clothes for wardens who will be patrolling during cold days and nights, action-free dressers, well-tailored casual suits, practical fleece coats and sweaters of every conceivable type.

Detail Brightens Simple Classic Wool Designs

After being garbed in a uniform for hours and hours at a stretch while on defense duty it is in the natural course of events that women should feel the urge for pretty feminine dress to wear in their few leisure hours. And that is just what has happened.

Merchants having sensed this need are making it a point to supply the demand with pretty frocks for informal occasions. Designers are touching up classic wools with a bit of embroidery or a dash of glittery detail or a contrasting yoke done in pastel sheer.

Negative 'Maiden'

The word "maiden" is applied to many subjects besides an unmarried woman, points out Collier's. The adjective is used to designate a city that has never been taken, a plant that has never been pruned, a field that has never been plowed, a sword that has never been used, a male or female race horse that has never won an event and, in England, a session of a criminal court at which there are no prisoners for trial.

Porter Knew Where To Get Quicker Service

The young lovers were trying to find some quiet, secluded spot for a long embrace. But everywhere they went there were people, people, people. And the girl was shy.

Suddenly the man had a bright idea. Triumphant he led her to the railway station and, standing beside the door of a railway carriage as though seeing her off, kissed her fondly.

After the couple had repeated the experiment at four or five different platforms, a sympathetic porter strolled up and whispered to the young man:

"Take 'er rahnd to the bus stop, mate. They goes ev'ry three minutes from there."

No, Thank You, Mr. Hirohito!

NOT as a steady diet. You've done pretty well on rice, but can you keep on doing it? What about Midway and the Coral Sea? Ever hear of Doolittle? MacArthur? Chennault?

What about the Solomon Islands? You can't get around it—those U. S. boys are better, man for man. And they're not sun-worshippers, either—just plain free men, well-fed and fighting mad. Sure it takes a lot of food to keep them going, but we've got what you haven't got, Hirohito . . . an army of free women fighting the home front because they know the need to fight! Not with guns. Not everyone can make shells or build airplanes. It takes an American woman just half of a split second to see where she fits in; the empty shelves at the grocery were enough of a hint for her. 50% more home-canning is our goal, and it's just like making bombs for Tokyo. SIX days ago, before we started from New York on our journey to the Pacific coast, our friend Howard, who had made the trip four times, said to us: "You'll see plenty of cowboys, and Indians, too. And on the desert there'll be prospectors, regular old desert rats. They're interesting to talk to."

But here we were near Phoenix, Arizona, and we hadn't seen even a horse, let alone a real cowboy astride one. It was discouraging.

And then suddenly Edie cried: "There's one!" "One what?" I asked, sitting bolt upright, and nearly running the car off the road. "A prospector! See! There! Coming across the desert with his pack burro."

"By jove, she's right!" Philip and his wife, Annette, had both sighted the man at the same instant. And a moment later I saw him, too, not fifty yards away. He was heading in a diagonal course for the automobile road.

"Stop, you idiot!" Philip yelled. "We can't talk to him going fifty miles an hour."

I didn't like the way Philip yelled. I don't like Philip especially well anyhow, but I stopped. I was as anxious to get a closeup of the prospector as were the others. There was a possibility he might have something that I could buy to add to my collection of frontier relics.

We stopped at a point that I judged would intersect the desert man's path and waited. He was an old man, wearing a beard, battered felt hat and a collarless, ragged shirt. His trousers were held up by one suspender strap, and the legs of them were tucked into eight-inch boots with run-down heels.

He looked for all the world like one of the gold prospectors you read about in western magazines and novels.

The burro was mouse-colored and shaggy. Atop his back was piled camping gear and cooking utensils and other implements that we judged were used in the search for gold.

When within a dozen yards of us he looked up and grinned. He was toothless. It was then that my heart leaped. For strapped about his thin waist was a holster, from which protruded the walnut handle of an ancient six-shooter. Even without seeing the revolving barrel and muzzle I knew that it was of the variety I wanted and had been searching for for years to complete my collection of old American guns. And I knew too that Philip, who wanted a similar weapon, had seen it too. I climbed out of the car in the hope of getting the jump on old Philip, but he was right beside me, and the girls came laughing behind.

"Listen," I said breathlessly to the old man, "how much do you want for that gun? Give you five bucks!"

"Double it!" said Philip annoyingly, and grinned.

The old man stared at us in amazement, looked from one to the other and then at the girls. Thinking about it later I don't wonder that he acted a little frightened.

"Listen," I said again, "I'll give you $25 for that six-shooter, Mr. Prospector, and right on the line, too."

"Thirty!" said Philip. As yet the old man hadn't said a word, but he grasped the opportunity while Philip and I were glowering at each other.

"Look here!" I exclaimed, "we're offering you real money for the worthless old thing. Cash! Do you understand?"

"Don't want to sell it," the old codger repeated doggedly. "Will you take $50?" I asked.

"Yes," he said. "Fifty-five!" said Philip. "Now wait a minute." I turned to Philip. "He said he'd sell for fifty. What's the use in you and I throwing away our money? We could go on bidding forever. Suppose we flip a coin?"

"O. K.," said Philip. "Fair enough." He produced a coin. "Heads I get it, tails you do?" I nodded. He flipped the coin and it came down tails. I grinned joyously.

Philip looked sour and went back to the car.

I turned to our friend. "Here's your fifty," I said. "Let's have the gat."

"Fifty-five," said the old man.

I looked at him sharply. "O. K. Fifty-five." I produced another five-dollar bill and handed it over. He gave me the gun. It was a beauty! Exactly what I wanted. And miracle, there were two notches cut into the handle!

Triumphantly I returned to the car and showed my prize to Philip. But the sour look was still on his face, and there wasn't much satisfaction in gloating. That would come later.

We drove off, leaving the old prospector standing there on the edge of the automobile road looking after us. The money was still in his hand, and the last glimpse I had of him in the rear-view mirror he had taken off his battered hat and was scratching his head. His face wore the same expression of bewilderment. I chuckled. Crazy old coot! An hour later we drove into Phoenix and put up at a good hotel. I was happy. I examined my gun, found that it contained one cartridge, which I extracted, then carefully wrapped both gun and ammunition reverently in an old silk handkerchief.

After dinner I went into the lobby and sat down, picturing just how I would rearrange my den at home so that the relic would be prominently displayed. Presently I noticed that someone had come in and joined a companion on the divan just behind where I sat. I couldn't help but overhear their conversation.

"Hello, Bill," said the newcomer. "How they going?"

"Good," said the other man. "Sold three. How about you?"

"Five," said Bill. "Got $55 for the last one." He chuckled. "I was working about forty miles north of town. Four suckers came along and the men in the party began scrapping over who was to have the gun. They finally decided to flip a coin and the loudest talker won. Came across with fifty-five smacks without a squawk. By the way, I got to stroll down to Halletts' and order me a new set of prospector's clothes. Those old ones make me look too young. What do you think?" "Wouldn't hurt any. And while you're at it, you'd better sink another ten bucks and get yourself a new burro. Lop-ears deserves going to pasture."

The first speaker stood up. "Well, I'll be seeing you. There's a case of those frontier guns waiting for me at the freight house, fresh from the factory. I've got to go down and cut notches in the handles. So long."

"So long," said Bill.

Scientists Take Flour Apart, Put It Together

Using an ingenious laboratory method for literally taking flour apart and putting it together again, a department of agriculture scientist has added some additional information on the long-debated question as to what makes good bread good.

His work again emphasizes the importance of gluten as the main key to bread quality.

In taking flour apart, Karl F. Finney, co-operative agent of the Bureau of Plant Industry and the Kansas agricultural experiment station at Manhattan, divided it into three fractions: (1) starch, (2) gluten, and (3) a water soluble fraction. He was able to subdivide the gluten further by extracting the fat.

With these chemically distinct fractions of the flour prepared in the laboratory, Finney found that it was possible to combine them again in the same proportion as in the original flour and make from the "put-together" flour a loaf of bread practically identical with a loaf from the original flour.

Bakers recognize wide differences in the quality of flour from different varieties of wheat. So, Finney's next step was to take apart three flours, A, B, and C, of distinct qualities. Juggling the combinations—for example, combining starch from Wheat B with the other elements from Wheat A—he put together synthetic flours and baked test loaves. Starch from B would substitute for starch from A without making any substantial change in the loaves. Water soluble fractions or fats could be interchanged at will. But when gluten from Flour B was added to the other elements of Flour A or Flour C, the test loaf was like the loaf from the all-B flour.

These experiments, Bureau of Plant Industry officials point out, will make possible a more correct interpretation of the probable baking value of new wheat varieties.

'Seeing Stars'

Silver stars painted on a moderately dark blue-gray ceiling, dropped down about two inches on the wall, proved very popular with patients in a newly decorated hospital. The upper part of the lighting fixture was painted the same as the ceiling and the lower part was ivory. The walls were light peach. The furniture was refinished in antique ivory with a green strip and dressed up by the addition of decalcomanias. The bed was covered with a white chenille spread. A taupe throw rug and an overstuffed chair in blue with a floral design in rose, yellow, green, gray and white add a colorful note to the room.

Producing Own Home Beef Aids War Plan

500-Pound Calf at Ten Month Age Is Suggestion

Producing beef for home use is a real contribution to the wartime program. If some families are to have meat they must produce it, says Roy W. Snyder, animal industries specialist of the Texas A. and M. College Extension service.

Even the nondescript, pot-bellied, small, rough-haired Jersey type calf can be made into satisfactory beef for family use. It needs to be fed a fattening ration for four to six months before being killed. Feeding not only makes more beef, but improves the quality to an almost unbelievable degree.

If a milk-pen calf is available it should be started on feed at once. Use the feeds grown on the farm. It may take 1,200 pounds of corn or milo, 1,200 pounds of hay and two sacks of cottonseed meal for the average inexperienced feeder to develop a calf into good edible beef, but the feed will be used to good advantage.

Feeding the calf until it weighs at least 500 pounds when it is ten months old, is a good mark to shoot at. Feed it all it will eat so that it will put on fat as it grows.

From the way the picture looks, little Amy Fry, Montgomery county, Maryland, has figuratively and actually taken this young calf under her protective wing. It seems that Amy is going to make an excellent 4-H'er when she gets a little bigger.

A good practice is to feed grain as soon as the calf will eat it. Oats is best to get a young calf on feed, but if it is not available, feed corn, milo or some other grains.

When the calf receives less milk later in the feeding period, add cottonseed meal or cake to the grain at the rate of one pound of meal to five pounds of grain.

Drug Plants

Defense experts say that this country would be able to raise its own supply of drugs if the 60 medicinal plants now imported were planted here. All of the plants will grow here and the only drawback is the large amount of hand labor required.

Anise is grown commercially in Rhode Island. Its aromatic seeds are used for medicine, in baking and for flavoring confectionery. Oil is distilled from the seed which is used medicinally, in cordials and for flavoring in various beverages.

Belladonna has been cultivated in California, Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. When the leaves and roots are dried, they yield a drug which commanded high prices during the World war, but interest in this crop recently has declined.

In certain localities in New England and the West, Lovage is grown. Its roots are used in the drug trade, while the seeds are used for flavoring confectionery.

Muck lands of southern Michigan and northern Indiana are used for growing peppermint. About 500,000 pounds are produced annually in this country.

Stigmas of the saffron flowers are used in cookery, for coloring confectionery and to some extent in medicine. It is grown as a small garden crop in Pennsylvania.

Bark Valuable

Bark from certain trees is valuable and can be sold.

Two companies in the Buffalo, N. Y., area buy the bark from hemlock and rock oak, while one firm in Fulton county, New York, buys alder bark.

White ash logs are bringing top prices now for uses in the army, navy, and agriculture. The buyers want logs free from crooks and knots, and may take lengths as short as four feet.

Everyone in this vicinity is interested in Conservation. I am pleased to publish the following letter from Mr. Truman E. Stone of Oconomowoc, Pres. of the Waukesha County Conservation Association:

Dear Mr. Dempsey, Conservation is a big business in our state.

Flood control, prevention of soil erosion, preservation of our forests, affects the lives of every one of us.

The game and fish supply are two of the main attractions to vacationists and tourists who have made the resort business, big business in our state, besides furnishing food and outdoor sport.

Since conservation is a business, it should be handled as such. Because of your record during the four years you served in the Senate and the very good work you did while there, for the Horicon Marsh Project, I feel that you have earned and deserve the support of everyone interested in conservation and I urgently suggest that they all go to the polls and vote for you Sept. 5 to represent us in the State Senate for the next four years.

Respectfully, Truman E. Stone.
