Unimpressed

From Our Boys in the Service

Your editor was misinformed as to the rating of Harold Piper. He is a Technical Sergeant and is now in England and reports the people there are very thoughtful and kind to the Yankees. As the larger cities are completely blacked out at night, he says, it is hard to keep walking into someone. Cigarettes there are expensive, but he states most of the boys took a supply along.

Mother's Smiles and Tears

Mother's tears must never be Where a soldier son may see.

Smile upon him when you part, Hide those tears within your heart.

Mother's smile—what does it mean? Light thrown on the darkest screen;

At its coming pain takes wing, Broken hearts grow whole and sing

When he comes back home again, Then, O mothers, only then

You may shed those tears—for joy When you welcome back your boy.

—Josephine Conklin O'Shaughnessy.

Candle Light

Before my darkened pup tent, In flick'ring candle light, I kneel to clean my rifle.

A whisper in the night Recalls again her parting words— "Be brave, son—we are right."

Before a shadowed statue A vigil light burns low;

A figure kneels in silence— I'm sure God lets her know

The prayer her soldier son repeats— "Be brave, mom, when I go."

Marquette Football

Tom Stidham's colorful, aggressive Marquette university ball team will make its first Milwaukee appearance of the 1942 season next Saturday night, October 24, when it will face the rip-roaring University of Arizona Wildcats in the Hilltop stadium.

The kickoff is scheduled for 8:00 o'clock and, although it will be "Industrial night" at Marquette, plenty of tickets will be available at the stadium box offices.

Marquette will make its initial appearance before the homefolks after having played games on the road with Kansas, Wisconsin, Iowa State and Michigan State. Fans are anxious to see the Hilltoppers and to find out what manner of team Stidham has fashioned from his largely junior and sophomore material.

Interest principally will be centered on the Milwaukee debut of Johnny Strzyhalski, the Golden Avalanche's sensational sophomore left halfback who has exceeded expectations in his team's first four games on the road. It is understood that grid fans of Milwaukee's Polish south side will move almost en masse to the Marquette stadium to see their native son perform.

One senior, Tackle Al Klug, and eight or nine juniors are expected to round out the Hilltop lineup, Saturday night.

Arizona will invade the Marquette stadium with a string of wins over New Mexico Aggies, Utah and Tempe Teachers, and boasting one of the best offensive and defensive records in the country. The Wildcats are especially proud of their left halfback, Bob Ruman.

ON THE HOME FRONT With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

IT IS not necessary to make our economies so dull and dreary that they depress every one. Let's make them so gay and attractive that they give us a lift and a bit of a challenge too. This old rocker is an example.

A saw and a wood chisel were used for removing projections and rockers. An old quilt was found for padding and the feathers from an old bolster were packed into a thick seat cushion to raise the seat which has been lowered by removing the rockers. This required a yard and a quarter of ticking. Four and one-half yards of inexpensive chintz in a bold, modern pattern did the rest.

NOTE: This remodeled chair is from BOOK 5 of the series of booklets that are offered with these articles. In this book an old-fashioned couch is modernized; end tables from stools; new uses are found for a camp stool; other types of chairs are made over; and a love seat is made from an old car seat. Also patchwork designs and directions for designing and making hooked rugs. To get a copy of BOOK 5, send your order to:

Smart Woolknit Fabrics Used For Wide Variety of Purposes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE vogue for woolknit fashions and handknits is reaching a high this season. To see a collection of smart new woolknits is to know the reason why they are making such an enviable record in the fall mode.

It is almost unbelievable that such things can actually be in the knitted realm as the gorgeous plaids, checks, stripes, tweed-like effects and other fabric patternings achieved in current fashions. But added to its flattery and attractiveness, you will find in knitted apparel well-made garments that will be practical and comfortable in a winter of lowered temperature due to the new fuel-saving program.

Then, too, in the wool knitted fabrics, which include not only jersey but many worsted tweed and basket-weave types, one is able to find interesting surfaces that priorities are forcing out of some woven fabrics. Attuned to the rich coloring of an autumn day is the window-pane plaid used for the woolknit suit shown to the right in the above picture. Later on you can wear this dramatically colorful suit under a winter coat and with your new giant fur muff and neckpiece—what a picture! The large profile beret is just about the smartest in fall headgear. The jewelry ensemble (and how essential is important jewelry to the costume this season!) is gold plated silver set with large aqua colored stones and rhinestones. The good looking alligator purse qualifies as high in style prestige.

mingles blue with gray. The hat is a soft breton in gray with a scarf of sheer red woolknit. A gold plated sterling silver spiral clip fastens the scarf to the shoulder, and there are matching earrings.

In the artful uses of yarn crochet, knit and embroidery touches designers have tapped a new source which is yielding a flow of ideas revealing the vast possibilities offered in yarn technique. Fashions of today are being lavished with ingenious knitted and crocheted effects. The oval inset picture is of outstanding interest in that it illustrates a trend now so pronounced in the costume design program of combining knitted detail with wools and other materials. In this instance a brown wool dress is designed with an aqua knitted yoke. A family relationship is established with the hat in that the swirling beret is trimmed with matching knitted fabric.

Throughout the fall and winter collections costumes are noted that have yokes, pockets, belts and other intriguing crochet or knit details interworked with the wool of the dress. If you prefer to wear knitted accessories rather than have the knitted theme incorporated into the dress or coat itself, you will find a feast for eyes in the intriguing items on display.

The hat and bag sets, also hat and muff sets, done in multi-colored yarns are simply irresistible. The hat may be any type from a wee pillbox to a wide brimmed casual—with pointed skyscraper crown, and you will be seeing the smartest mittens that fit like a glove and have interesting detail to complement the stocking caps, pill boxes, tricorne and other knit headwear worn.

It's Reversible

Clever collegians are picking black cotton velvet evening coats with double-duty potentialities. This mandarin coat lined with multi-colored, specially woven cotton in a homespun-like texture is a case in point. Worn on the light side it makes a perfect foil for dark clothes or looks dainty with party frocks in pastels. Either surface is right for evening wear or with dress-up date dresses in which girls go to service men's tea dances all over the country.

Sheer Lace Bodice Tops Black Dresses

Something most alluring is happening in evening and "dressy" afternoon costume design. It is the use of sheer bodice tops, yokes and sleeves either color-matched to the dress or in lovely pastels or in sharp contrast.

It is the black dress that for the most part takes on these alluring transparent touches. The sheerest of sheer black lace is made to appear even more sheer when the yokes or sleeves are posed over a nude-colored sheer such as chiffon or tinted tulle, thus accenting pretty shoulders and throats and arms. Many of the pretty shoulder effects are elaborated with the sparkle of sequin and spangle, or with flashes of jet beads or jeweled embroidery.

The street length formal frock needed something to differentiate it from just the usual afternoon dressy frock, and the nude shoulder effects do just that. Even the less formal afternoon frocks are being sleeved and otherwise "beautified" with exquisite bodice tops.

Coat Types

Versatility in fur coat styling distinguishes a three-quarter length mink coat of Chinese coolie inspiration. This is enriched with a handsome lining of rich Chinese brocade. Fitted coats of Persian lamb employ a side fastening with subtle drape. Much emphasis is also placed on hooded fur fashions.

Velveteens

Bright velveteen date dresses, fur-rough dresses and "off duty" dresses are made to flatter, and they do just that. The colors of the velveteen are fascinating, special stress being placed on fuchsia-purple.

Ice Follies of 1943

The largest cast of ice skaters in the seven-year history of the Ice Follies has been brought to the Chicago Arena for the 1943 edition of the extravaganza which opened on October 13.

One hundred twenty are included in the company which is presenting the entirely new production for a 15-day period here. Of this number 30 are featured blade performers, to be seen in more than a score and ten of specialties and production numbers.

New faces appear in the cast who have been the favorites of the past seven years. Among those who are new since the Ice Follies appeared here a year ago are Betty Atkinson, the "blonde blitz" of the ice skating world, Norah McCarthy, the striking brunette who brings with her a Canadian and North American Women's Senior Figure Skating championship, Johnny Kinney, a new comedy addition, and Bobby Blake, presenting something entirely new in figure skating technique.

Old favorites of long standing still hold the spotlight on the glazed surface. Shipstad and Johnson offer a new twist to their own inimitable style.—Adv.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Before rubber allocation programs, one large rubber manufacturing company made close to 35,000 separate rubber items. The weights of these items ran from fractions of an ounce to hundreds of pounds.

Supported by old Indian tales that have been biased, natives of Benares, India, stay in the waters of the Holy Ganges River for weeks at a stretch.

Rubber shortages was no worry when the first roads were constructed in the Empire of Assyria and Babylon in 1900 B.C. or when the Romans built their military roads in 302-298 B.C.

In 1941 89% of the rubber consumed in the U. S. came from lands that are now in the hands of the enemy or cut off from U. S. ships.

Two-thirds of all the natural rubber in the U. S. is in the tires and tubes on American cars.

Use Native Material For Farm Structures

Building Substitutes Found Satisfactory

Although building construction is limited by government order to conserve materials for the armed forces, some agricultural construction is necessary and can be realized through the use of native and local materials which are not critical.

Among the materials recommended for use in farm construction in these times are concrete, concrete blocks, field stones, brick and tile. Unskilled labor can do a fair job with these materials. Poultry houses, machine storages, granaries, dairy barns, milk houses—in fact, practically all buildings normally constructed of wood can be built of these materials with assurance of excellent results. Electric and water supply facilities can be added after the war.

Wood stanchions and partitions will substitute for steel. Roll roofing provides an inexpensive and temporary covering which serves as a base for other types, excepting steel which should not be placed in contact with a tar or asphalt surface because of corrosion. Home-sawed lumber can be used in place of costly West coast supplies.

Violation of the building conservation order, designated as Order L-41, which limits building to $1,000 for farm construction and $500 for house repairs, may result in being prohibited further deliveries or use of material under priority control.

For details about this order and how it applies in your case, contact your county agricultural war board. Your county agricultural agent is the secretary.

Maple Products

Nearly one-third of the annual yield of maple syrup in the United States, is puffed in cigarette and pipe tobacco. Manufacturers have discovered that by holding moisture, it gives proper burning qualities to tobacco. Syrup grades that are not up to fixed color standards are used for flavoring chewing tobacco.

The sugar belt runs from Maine to Minnesota, from Canada south to Maryland west to Arkansas and nearly every farmer raises sugar for home use. Vermont tops the nation in the amount of maple products, and has earned the reputation for producing the best.

It is no secret that a large amount of syrup from elsewhere is shipped into Vermont and processed and sold under Vermont labels.

The eastern states produce nearly all the maple products sold commercially. Some sugar groves are 150 years old and are still paying taxes on farms for the grandchildren of the men who planted them. Sugar trees do not reach top form until they have lived 50 years.

Old time open kettle methods were used in sugar making until 1875, when modern machinery appeared and the picturesque quality of the business disappeared. Now there are sterilizing hydrometers, evaporators and streamlined sugaring-off pans. In some camps where the contour of the land is right, an elaborate pipeline system collects sap and conveys it, by gravity, to the sugar house.

Hens Have High Body Heat

Hens have a body temperature of about 106 degrees F. The heat given off by the body of the hen is quickly lost with a few birds in a large house, or with any number of birds in a cold house. But if the house is tight and properly constructed otherwise, and if the house is filled to capacity, the body heat will many times keep it warm enough to make the birds comfortable, increase egg production, and reduce the danger of diseases.

It Appears the Little Chap Was Just Having Sum Fun!

The father, who had made a practice of helping his young son with his arithmetic problems from school, took the little fellow to church with him on a Sunday.

They arrived a trifle late, the minister having already announced the opening song to be sung by the congregation. They found their seats and hurriedly sat down, as the clergyman said: "Ten Thousand Times Ten Thousand." Two hundred and twenty-two. Everybody!

The little lad seemed puzzled for a moment, then nudged his father.

"Dad," he whispered, "do we have to work out this one, too?"

For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood. You may suffer nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder. The Cure

By VIC YARDMAN Associated Newspapers—WNU Features.

"OF ALL the idiots," said Uncle Andy, "that I've ever had the misfortune to encounter, this bird De Trego is the biggest." Uncle Andy threw his hands into the air in a gesture of utter disgust, and continued to stalk from one end of the porch to the other.

Brenda Deering, Uncle Andy's niece, sat in the big arm chair and watched Uncle Andy with a hint of amusement in her wide, brown eyes. She had seen Uncle Andy like this before. And she knew her role was to wait patiently for the fit of anger to subside; then to ruffle his sparse gray hair, kiss his shiny forehead and tweak his chin. This treatment usually produced satisfactory results.

Yet as Brenda watched her uncle, she had a queer feeling that he was not going to succumb to her hair-ruffling and chin-tweaking. Somehow today he seemed a little more violent than usual, a little more intent upon his purpose.

Suddenly Uncle Andy came to a dead halt before the big armchair. "Look here, Brenda. You're not going to marry this De Trego. Not if I can prevent it. And prevent it I have every intention of doing. He's nothing but a mollycoddle, and will never be anything else. He isn't worthy of a Deering, and that," he added emphatically, "is that."

Still Brenda remained silent. She knew that Uncle Andy had more to say, and she thought it best to hear him out.

"Look here, Brenda. You're not going to marry this De Trego. Not if I can prevent it."

Uncle Andy's voice suddenly softened. "Listen, Brenda, I want you to go away for a while. I want you to visit my ranch down in Texas. You'll like it there. There are horses to ride and mountains to climb and rivers to fish in. The change will do you good. And perhaps," he went on hopefully, "you'll find time to analyze this Henry De Trego bloke and discover I'm correct in my estimation of him."

Brenda looked steadily into Uncle Andy's eyes and waited. "Do that much for me, Brenda. Go down there for a month. After that, after you've had time to think it all over seriously—if you still want to marry De Trego—I'll give my consent."

Brenda leaned forward. "That's a promise?"

Uncle Andy bowed his head. And Brenda said at once: "Then I'll go, Uncle Andy. I'll start tomorrow."

Brenda swung from the Limited at Devil's Gap, and the hot blasts of the desert smote her in the face. Involuntarily she recoiled, as if repulsed by the sight of the bleak, desolate-looking crackerbox station, the barren wastes of desert behind it, the hot furnace-like air.

A man came around a corner of the station, espied her standing there, and approached, sombrero in hand.

"I'm Jack Fremont," he said. "Foreman at the Double R. I reckon you're Miss Brenda."

Brenda looked up into the sun-bronzed face and the friendly, gray eyes of this Adonis-like Westerner who confronted her. "You're—you're Jack Fremont?" Then suddenly she laughed as a picture of the Jack Fremont Uncle Andy had painted for her conjured itself in her mind. Dear old Uncle Andy.

The tall cowboy seemed embarrassed and not a little puzzled at her demeanor, and Brenda's face sobered. "I'm sorry, Mr. Fremont. You see, Uncle Andy hadn't warned me."

Fremont still seemed puzzled, but he led the way silently to a smart-looking roadster parked on the opposite side of the station. If Brenda was surprised at sight of the car, she made no comment. They left the station behind. Hot blasts from the desert struck her in the face. She sank into the deep cushions of the roadster, and felt as though she was being burned to a crisp.

At length they left the desert behind and entered the hills, long, rolling hills, grassy hills dotted with cattle, with a background of purple mountains on the dim horizon. Later, hours later it seemed to Brenda, they reached the ranch. Mrs. Borden, a motherly sort of person, who had served as the Double R housekeeper for years, made Brenda feel instantly at home.

Brenda was delighted with the spot. It was all that Uncle Andy had pictured. The air was cool and invigorating; the landscape was unequalled for beauty and grandeur.

Brenda, already an adept horse-woman, took long rides into the upland country. And with her rode Jack Fremont. He was, Brenda discovered, an excellent guide, a splendid companion. Far from being uncouth, as an eastern girl might have pictured a Texas cowboy, he talked freely of things that only a person having a fine background could discuss.

As the weeks slipped by, Brenda came more and more to look forward to her rides with Fremont. He was different than most men she'd known. He was gentle and kind and fine. Occasionally she thought of Henry De Trego, and at these times she wondered whether Uncle Andy hadn't been right in judging him. Brenda wondered, too, how it was she had ever loved, or thought she loved, that man.

The month of Brenda's exile had almost come to an end when Fremont spoke for the first time of those things that Brenda knew were inevitable. And despite herself her heart quickened its beat when the cowboy leaned forward and looked into her eyes.

"Brenda," he said simply, "I love you. And I believe you love me. I—we—that is—" he floundered. Brenda looked at him questioningly. There was a sudden coldness in her eyes.

And Jack said: "I must tell you something first. I—it wouldn't be fair to ask you to marry me until I do."

"Yes?" said Brenda coolly.

But Jack failed to notice her lack of response. He rushed on. "I'm not a cowboy, Brenda. Two months ago I was employed in your uncle's office in Boston. He sent me down here to get browned up. Said he wanted his niece to come down later, and he wanted someone to look after her. He—he—wanted me to act as a sort of—gigolo."

Jack hesitated. "He told me about De Trego, and he offered me a sum of money I couldn't refuse if I'd make you forget the man. I—I—Brenda, I know you can't love me now. But believe me when I say—I wouldn't take a million times that amount of money if I could have you."

The cold look had left Brenda's eyes. And in its stead was a warm, soft glow. She leaned forward almost abruptly and kissed Jack on the lips.

"I'm glad you told me, Jack. I never could have married you if you hadn't."

Jack looked at her aghast. "Then you knew?"

Brenda nodded. "I happened to see the letter you wrote to Uncle, telling him that you were browned up enough to look like a Westerner, and were ready for your victim. Her eyes twinkled. "You enclosed your picture in that letter—to prove how brown you were. I saw the picture, too. That's why I didn't offer any objection when Uncle Andy suggested I come down here for a vacation."

Dieppe Channel Helpful, Hazardous to All Invaders

The French coast, near Dieppe—where the first American forces landed—presents both favorable and unfavorable physical conditions to the United Nations invaders.

Out of the English channel rise the sheer, white cliffs of Normandy, here and there cut by river valleys. Before the war, stretches of beaches at their bases were thronged with vacationists at this time of the year. A rocky shelf, dry at low tide, extends all along the Dieppe coast. This shelf is generally not more than 200 yards wide.

To invasion forces, one disadvantage is that the beach shores on which landings may be made from small boats are often in the shadow of commanding bluffs, from which the enemy could launch counter-attacks.

The whole northern coast of France is considered dangerous for normal shipping because of its many offshore rocks and shallows, its unequal depths, and its tricky currents. On the other hand, hazards which are known may turn out to be advantages in military operations where special craft may be evolved to meet the necessities. The prevalent fogs of the area, too, though feared by peacetime mariners, are today valuable for protective cover. Toward the eastern end of the English channel, where Dieppe is situated, the fogs are so common, especially in summer, that the land in some sections is almost never clear of mist.

Pictures in Human Eye

Pictures formed on the retina of the human eye often are incredibly tiny; for small objects the retinal images may be less than one-thousandth of an inch in diameter, according to the Better Vision institute. The size of an image on the retina is determined by the angle of the light rays reflected to the eye by an object. The farther away an object, the smaller is the angle of its reflected light rays, and the smaller is the image on the retina. This explains why persons look no bigger than ants when viewed from a height. The smallest angle in which an object can be recognized by the human eye is about one minute.

Savages Friendly To Survivors of Torpedoed Ship

41 Men From Lost Vessel Get Warm Welcome From Natives in Africa.

NEW YORK.—Forty-one survivors of a medium-sized United States merchant ship, torpedoed and sunk in the Indian ocean several months ago, reached the African coast after seven days in an open boat, only to be confronted by naked savages armed with big knives. Fortunately the savages turned out to be friendly and helped the seamen make their way back to civilization.

This was revealed by some of the survivors who had reached an East coast port. The sinking of the ship was officially announced recently by the navy department in Washington. Fourteen men, 12 members of the crew of the merchant ship and two of the ten-man naval gun crew, are missing and presumed dead.

Two Torpedoes Hit.

Capt. W. W. Kuhne of 460 Oakland avenue, West New Brighton, S. I., said that the ship was sunk by two torpedoes, which he believed were fired from a motor torpedo boat. While his crew and the naval gunners were abandoning ship, he said, one lifeboat was upset. The loss of life occurred among the men who were in it.

All 41 survivors crowded into one of the three remaining lifeboats, abandoning the two others. Captain Kuhne reported that they suffered severely from hunger and thirst during the week before they reached land. When shore was sighted a heavy surf was running and he feared the crowded lifeboat might not make the beach.

"But we started in and then about 20 natives came on the beach to watch us land," he told the Associated Press. "They had big knives hanging from belts. The belts were the only clothing they wore."

Really Worried.

"We were really worried but we decided to test them to see if they were friendly. As soon as we were close enough we tossed a rope, they rushed up and helped us beach the boat, and we knew they were our friends."

Captain Kuhne said that the natives fed the hungry men, taught them to catch crabs, and bartered bananas and chickens for their possessions. Two matches were traded for four bananas, and a life preserver brought four chickens. The natives were glad to take United States coins but were skeptical about dollar bills.

The Africans helped the shipwrecked men to travel on foot and by boat to a town, from which they returned to the United States by ship and airplane.

Dream Causes Reunion of Sisters Apart 40 Years

ST. LOUIS.—A dream has united two sisters who had not seen or heard from each other since 1902, when they parted in Copenhagen, Denmark.

In the dream, Mrs. Rhenhilda Brawshaw of Teaneck, N. J., said she visualized the name of her sister, Mrs. Emelie Kasch, in the St. Louis telephone book.

She obtained a copy of the directory, found the address of an Albert Kasch and wrote him a letter, explaining her desire to find her sister, who had married an Albert Kasch in Denmark before departing for the United States 40 years ago. Mrs. Brawshaw came to this country two years later.

The Albert Kasch listed in the telephone book proved to be Mrs. Brawshaw's sister's son, and the letter brought the two women together here for a reunion.

"It was like a new life to see her again," said Mrs. Kasch. "I had given her up for dead."

Phone's Tinkle Not Her Idea of Wedding Bells

DES MOINES, IOWA.—Long distances don't discourage sailor Arthur V. Baird from being a gallant suitor. It cost him $32 to propose to Ellen Spiker, 17, from his station at Boston, Mass., but he's assured of a bride when he gets home.

After talking to Arthur for 45 minutes on a long distance call Ellen agreed to accept the ring which he wanted to send the next day. But she wants to wait until after the war to be married.

She says she thinks it's all right to get engaged by telephone, but she positively won't get married on the telephone.

Catches the 'Bunny' By Taking a Short-Cut

PORTLAND, ORE.—It's the shortest way between two points and, besides, why should a wise racing dog waste energy?

Greyhound No. 7 in a recent "chase the bunny and win papa a quinnel" race didn't chase the fuzzle-tail completely around the track. Instead, he halted, surveyed the situation, and finally decided to cut across the field and meet the "bunny" half way.

The pooch and the rabbit collided head-on. Loss—one mechanical rabbit. Retired—one greyhound racing dog.

Navy Day

Praising the fighting ability of the American Fleet, Commodore Sheldon Clark, president of the Navy League of the United States, called on the public to make every sacrifice to keep our Navy strong. Commodore Clark echoed Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox in saying that the nation was proud of its Navy, as he urged universal celebration of Navy Day, October 27.

Recalling that Navy Day falls on the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt, Commodore Clark said:

"Now when the survival of America as a free land is desperately imperiled, we may well give thanks to the vision of men like Theodore Roosevelt who have kept us strong on the high seas. Today the Navy and its auxiliaries stand between us and a desperate and dangerous enemy, while we build adequate defenses of our stronghold. Already it has met in battle the most dangerous sea foe that the world has to offer and magnificently turned back his attack.

"We should thank God for the heroism and self-sacrifice of Navy men who have died to repel the enemy," Commodore Clark declared. "This most important of all Navy Days affords us a fitting occasion to stand up and cheer for the sea-going forces."

Secretary of the Navy Knox spurred the nation to co-operate with the Navy League, the Navy's civilian arm, in its sponsorship of Navy Day. He said, "Navy Day this year means more than at any time in our history. It is a day of days on which we can rededicate our best efforts to our common cause, as we pay just tribute to the brave men of our fleet who are taking the battle to the enemy. Every American is proud of those men—they have earned every American's utmost gratitude.

"When the war reached our shores, the blow was an act of treachery unparalleled in history, but I learned the grim determination of the men of our fleet to avenge the insult to our flag—to repay the Japs a thousand-fold for the murder and ruin they had caused. Today, through the broad sweeps of the mighty Pacific, in the Atlantic and wherever the men of our fleets encounter the enemy, they are fighting as only free men can fight."

Navy Day in Chicago will be marked by two outstanding events. In the morning 6,000 blue jackets from Naval activities here will march in a parade opening State street to traffic. That night Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the U. S. fleet, will speak at a banquet in the LaSalle Hotel.

Barret Wendell is chairman of the Navy Day Committee, members of which include Chauncey Borland, Clarence E. Cross, Hinton G. Clabaugh, Perce Brautigam, Britton J. Budd, Frank V. Martinek and Howard East.

A New York woman, Mrs. Joseph Paterno, donated the $3,000 iron gate to her estate to the scrap campaign. It weighed ten tons.

Birmingham, Ala., held a "scrapout" recently, with air raid wardens supervising a drive which netted 279 tons of metal and rubber.

Farm Labor Wages Up

Wage rates paid by Wisconsin farmers at the beginning of October were 29 per cent higher than a year earlier while the price of farm products had risen only 8 per cent. During the same 12-month period the purchasing power of the Wisconsin farm dollar declined 5 per cent, the state department of agriculture reports.

Wisconsin farmers are now paying wages averaging $55 per month with board and $2.90 per day with board. A year ago farm wages averaged $42.50 per month and $2.25 per day with board. Wages paid, not including the board, average $75.75 per month and $3.75 per day, and show a substantial increase over the rates of a year ago.

The current survey of farm employment indicates that the number of wage earners on Wisconsin farms is slightly smaller than a year ago but there is an increase in the number of family workers. About 50 hired laborers were employed per 100 Wisconsin farms on October 1 by crop reporters, which is the smallest number for any October since farm employment records were first kept in 1924. Total farm employment on October 1 was 220 persons per 100 farms or 10 persons below the October average.

While both prices of farm products and farm purchasing power have risen since the present World War began in 1939, some of the farmer's costs, such as farm labor, have risen more than farm prices. In Wisconsin farm prices in September of this year averaged 59 per cent above the prices received in September 1939 but wages of farm labor were more than 80 per cent above 1939. While the purchasing power of the farmer in this state has risen since the war began, it is now lower than a year ago.
