

In defense of Eagle

I HAVE been a resident of Eagle the last 25 years and have always been proud of it, until I read your Nov. 17 deer-hunting cartoon. I know all communities are not perfect and we're no exception, but the picture Gregg Klees painted of Eagle offends me and other residents of Eagle.

Specifically, I take exception to the comment, "The breakfast special at the Prairie Diner was, umm . . . good." Actually, the Prairie Diner is seven miles east of Eagle in North Prairie. Eagle has a very nice restaurant serving GREAT breakfasts at reasonable prices. It is called JJ's. Secondly, girls do not flock to the Eagle taverns during deer-hunting season, looking for a few good men, like the Marines. The comment suggests Eagle attracts hookers.

I love my community and all the good things Eagle has going for it.
